History of the 14th U.S.A. Engineers

BOSTON, Sept. 21 (Associated Press)—The saga of the first volunteer troops of the United States to arrive at the front in France—a regiment of engineers recruited from the operating staffs of the New England railroads—has just been written. It is entitled "A History of the 14th Engineers, United States Army, from May, 1917, to May, 1919," and dedicated "To the Memory of those members of the regiment who died in France."

Incorporated in the volume is a tribute to these 1,200 railway men of New England by General Aylmer Haldane, who commanded the 6th British Corps while the 14th Engineers were attached to that body from August, 1917, to May, 1918. The British referred to their allies affectionately as "The 14th American R. E.'s (Royal Engineers.)"

"At the time the 14th Engineers came under my command our failure to recognize earlier the urgent need for light railways was being repaired, but the personnel necessary to operate them was lacking," General Haldane writes. "The arrival, however, of our comrades from across the Atlantic speedily changed the aspect of affairs in this respect, and soon in many directions trains were carrying men, supplies and material from the railhead at Boisleux-au-mont to the vicinity of the forward trenches."

The 6th British Corps at that time was holding the line just south of Arras. Early in 1918 came the tremendous effort of the Germans to break through the British line and reach the sea. The 6th Corps bore its full share of the brunt those March and April days. Of the part played in this activity by the 14th Engineers, General Haldane writes:

"The oncoming wave of Germans bore down for a time all endeavors to oppose it, and when at length it was brought to a standstill the light railways on the front of the corps, from railhead to the forward trenches had changed hands. Now was the opportunity for the 14th Engineers who at this critical moment proved that, while they could operate railways with all the skill required, they could as readily handle a rifle and share in the greater dangers of the firing line. I can vividly recall my chief engineer, Brigardier-General Harvey, reporting to me how stubbornly the 14th Engineers had taken part with the British infantry in helping to stem the onrush of the German troops, and my pride in having those gallant New Englanders under my command."

The regiment included two companies from the Boston and Maine Railroad and other smaller New England lines; two from the New York, New Haven and Hartford, and one each from the Maine Central and Boston and Albany The lieutenant colonel was Albert T. Perkins, a railroad executive from the Middle West, and the battalion commanders Major B. W. Guppy, bridge engineer of the Boston and Maine, and Major D. S. Brigham, then trainmaster of the Boston and Albany.

UNEMPLOYED IN FIUME EXPELLED TO CUT DOLES

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(Fiume).—General Gaetano Giardino, military governor of Fiume, has expelled four thousand unemployed from Fiume so as to save the large sums the Government has been spending on doles, according to a dispatch to the Central News from Rome. Those expelled were not citizens of Fiume.

WOOLLEN HEADS URGING INQUIRY BETTER TRADE

Ottawa Government Is Asked to Emulate Laurier's Action, and Send Investigating Officer to Old Country.

GALT, Sept. 21.—Interviewed on a despatch from Ottawa which stated that the woollen and knit goods mills of Canada had asked the Government to send a special investigating officer to the United Kingdom, Mr. George A. Dobbie President of the Canadian Woollen Manufacturers' Association, said:

"Conditions in the woollen and knit goods trade throughout the world, due to the financial after-effects of the war, are so extraordinary that our Government is being asked to send a special investigating officer to the United Kingdom, as the world centre of the trade, to report on conditions.

Bradford Much Concerned

"So upset are conditions, especially resulting from depreciated currency, that the Bradford Chamber of Commerce of England has just passed a resolution asking the Board of Trade, which is a Government institution, to hold an inquiry into causes of unemployment in the woollen and knitting trade in England, due to foreign competition, so that protection may be granted under the Safeguarding of Industries Act. In supporting this motion, which is the first time since free trade was instituted in England that Bradford has passed a resolution in favor of protection, the Vice-President of the chamber said he had been a free trader for many years, but if one never learned by experience one never progressed.

"If the mills of England, which were built up by centuries of the most drastic protection until they could stand free trade, are asking for a Government investigation and protection, how much more is such a request reasonable from the Canadian mills, which have been built up since disaster overtook them twenty years ago?

How Canada Is Interested

"The extent to which the prosperity of small villages and towns in Canada is bound up in the woollen and knit goods mills is not generally appreciated. There are some 300 mills in Canada, the majority of which are in municipalities with populations under 10,000. In Ontario alone there are more than 200 mills in many municipalities. In the majority of cases the wages of the workers in these mills support the entire commercial life of the centre.

"As to the quality of goods produced by the Canadian workers they are equal to any country in the world. There is much misleading propaganda circulated in Canada concerning the quality of Canadian goods. For instance, it is said that water in Canada is not suitable. There are many mills in Canada using natural water, which for softness and other textile properties is more than equal to natural water anywhere abroad, and mills operating in sections where hard water only is available use "water softeners," which give water of first class quality for all textile purposes, including dyeing. If may be said, that the machinery employed, the technical skill available, and the intelligence of the workers are equal to any country in the world.

Fear For Industry

"The question which is facing us now is whether Canadian workers are to continue to be employed or whether the work is to go to workers abroad who live on a much lower wage scale. Our contention is that a workman now employed in Canada is of much more value to the people of the country as a whole, including farmers, than a worker employed anywhere else.

"As you are aware, in 1922 and again in 1923, the Government reduced the duties on woollen and knit goods. This did not result in the people of Canada obtaining cheaper goods, but resulted in the buying being swung to countries abroad, and consequently resulting in workers in Canada having less work. This work is being given to workers abroad, who are prepared to live on a wage scale, and under conditions which Canadian workers should not be called upon to compete against.

Effect of Exchange

"To this might be added the effect that the depreciated French and Belgian franc is having. France imports little from abroad, especially foodstuffs, so that her competition with the franc at one-third of the normal value is severe. It is so severe that the claim is made in England that 80 per cent. of the costume cloth on the shelves of English shops is now made abroad by foreign workers.

"Manufacturers in Great Britain are at present having a portion of their spinning and dyeing done in France, Belgium and Germany, where they are able to get the work done cheaper than they can in England, also German cloth is merely shrunk in England, and goods so manufactured, we are informed, are being shipped to Canada and obtaining the benefit of the British preference.

"The last time an official investigation was carried on in the United Kingdom by a special officer sent by the Government was when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in power, 20 years ago. At that time, owing to the preference granted to Great Britain, 88 woollen mills, many of them large and important plants, employing hundreds of trained operatives, were forced to go out of business, reducing a number of the comparatively small towns and villages in which these mills were situated to a state of collapse, with property values completely deranged and merchants and traders forced to close the doors ot their commercial enterprises.

Fruits of Investigation

"It was the action taken on this report by the Laurier Government which resulted in the present woollen and knit goods industry being built up during the last twenty years on the ruins of the old.

"The danger today is greater than it was twenty years ago. We are attempting today to benefit by experience in the past and are, therefore, making to the Government the extremely reasonable request that official information be obtained before it is too late.

"Since the last changes in tariff the importations from Great Britain have increased to a tremendous extent. For the month of July, 1923, there were imported 1,281,816 pairs of socks and stockings, as against 674,002 pairs in June, 1923, and in July, 1923, there were 1,770,462 yards of cloth imported."

Japanese Earthquake Pictures

When the earthquake struck Yokohama, a number of people were at the pier bidding good-bye to friends about to sail on the Empress of Australia. The collapse of the centre portion of the dock hurled many of the crowd into the water, while the remainder ran for land or jumped into nearby boats. Three-column picture above showing this pier was taken from the deck of the Empress of Australia, just after the shock. (Copyright 1923, by United Newspictures.)

LESS MANUFACTURE

GENEVA, Sept. 21.— Plans for two conferences on the opium question were definitely formulated at Geneva to-day. Resolutions were adopted by the League of Nations Opium Commission, providing for, first, a conference of the countries having Far Eastern possessions where opium smoking prevails, and, second, an international conference of all countries to determine upon a plan to limit the production of opium and coca leaf and restrict the manufacture of their deriviatives drugs for scientific and medicinal purposes.

A delicate question arose to-day over the fixing of a conference for limiting opium smoking. In India there is considerable eating of opium and in order to embrace all forms of opium in the Far East, the French representatives proposed that the first conference should consider a means of limiting the use of prepared opium, which might include both uses of the drug. This suggestion was not accepted, but presumably all forms of opium consumption will be discussed at the second general conference.

BAN RICE AT WEDDINGS TO RELIEVE JAPANESE

CHICAGO, September 21. Canadian Press. — Riceless weddings weddings were urged yesterday by Commissioner Peart of the Salvation Army as an important step in relieving starvation in Japan.

Commissioner Peart produced statistics showing that a million pounds of is thrown at and over newly-wedded couples. This rice instead of being wasted, it is urged, should go to feed the thousands of hungry Japanese.

SAYS LOSSES BROKE LEWISOHN'S HEALTH

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The loss of a 'good part of his fortune" in a speculative deal with Jess. Livermore, the stock market operator, and not an affair with Leonora Hughes, the dancer, was primarily the cause of Walter Lewisohn's nervous breakdown, resulting in his committment to the Blythewood Sanitarium at Greenwich, Conn., according to a statement yesterday by Vincent L. Leibell of Phillips, Mahoney & Leibell, 51 Chambers St attorney for the confined banker.

BULGARIAN REVOLUTION HAS BEEN STAMPED OUT

LONDON, Sept. 21. — (United Press).—The Bulgarian revolution against Professor Zankoff's Government has been broken, according to the Daily Chronicle's Belgrade correspondent.

The Communist-Agrarian Government which threatened the new regime has been destroyed, and further efforts in that direction are considered remote. The Government is busily engaged in restoring order.

200,000 CATTLE LOST IN STORM ON PAMPAS.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 21.—Official figures made public here said 200,000 cattle, 30,000 sheep and 20,000 horses died in the disastrous storm which swept the Argentine pampas last week. The losses represent about fifteen per cent. of the total livestock of the territory. In the provinces of Santa Fe, Cordoba, Van Luis and Buenos Aires, 40,000 cattle were lost.

BURGLARS SHOOT TORONTO OFFICER

Constable Williamson Seriously Wounded in Groin -Men He Challenged Marauders.

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Police Constable Richard Williamson was shot in the groin and seriously wounded by unknown burglars very early this morning, when he interfered with the operations of three or four men, who were attempting to force an entrance into the home of Ralph Connable, in the Wells Hill district, here.

Three shots were fired at the officer in answer to his challenge, "What are you doing here," when attracted by unusual nocturnal sounds he came upon the men. Williamson dropped when wounded and the marauders escaped.

HARASSED BY A GIRL PROTECTED BY COURT

DETROIT, Sept. 21. — Judge Theodore J. Richter, in Circuit Court, granted an injunction restraining Belle Seiwell, 1670 Grand Avenue West, from speaking, writing, telephoning or telegraphing to, or in any other way communicating with Robert E. McKenzie, 290 West Grand Boulevard.

McKenzie declared in court that the girl embarrassed him and endangered his position by writing him postcards on which she referred to him in such uncomplimentary fashions as "poor fish," "poor excuse for a bartended," and similar epithets.

Not only did she write these sentiments on postcards, but she telegraphed them, and announced them personally over the telephone and whenever she met him, he asserted.

It's a safe bet that the woman who believes everything her husband tells her has never been married before.

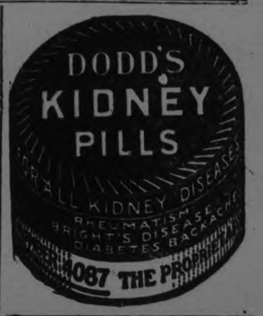
DEATH REMOVES MR. R. E. ELCOME

Widely Known Taxidermist and Man of Sterling Character Passed Away This Morning.

At six o'clock this morning, after an illness which began last February, Reuben Edwin Elcome, at the age of sixty-five years, passed peacefully away at his late residence, 692 Harvey Street. The deceased, who was a native of England, settled in Peterboro forty-one years ago, and for thirty-nine years carried on the work of a taxidermist. He was a man of sterling Christian character. For thirteen years he taught the Adult Bible Class in Murray Street Baptist Church, and also preached frequently in the churches of the city and county. He was an exceptionally good Bible student, and was the author of a commentary on the Bible, from Genesis to the Psalms, which will be treasured by his family as one of their most valued possessions.

Survivors are his wife and two daughters, Bessie and Isobel, both at home. The eldest daughter predeceased him, dying during childhood. A very large circle of friends and fellow-citizens will also greatly miss him.

The funeral will take place on Monday next at 2.30 p.m. from his late residence at 692 Harvey Street to the Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. C. W. Rose, pastor of Murray Street Church, officiating.



OPEN ONTARIO LOAN TENDERS ON TUESDAY.

TORONTO, Sept., 21.—(Canadian Press).—It is not expected in Government circles that the new federal loan of $175,000,00 will have any detrimental effect on Ontario's proposed $150,000,000 or $300,000,000 of finance. Department officials yesterday said that it was difficult at moment to state that what result would be, but they reported experts opinion to effect that it might possibly work out advantageously to Ontario.

In any event Ontario's course will not be decided upon. Tenders are opened by Provincial Treasurer Price, next Tuesday. He will take advantage of either the Canadian or United States loan according as the tenders dictate and presumably will not go into market at all if offers are not satisfactory to him.

EMPIRE TRADE

ters have come suggestions and proposals for the extension of trade within the Empire. Not all are before the conference officially. Some may not even be discussed, but in themselves, they indicate the wide interest taken in schemes of Empire development.

Apart from extension of Imperial tariff preference — which Australia proposes to raise—the suggestions include:

1—Empire-wide movement in favour of Empire products.

2—Creation of an Empire Economic Council to give consideraton to problems of trade development after the conference has concluded its labours.

3—Employment of Empire surplus wealth within the Empire. (Higher income tax on investments outside the Empire with taxation concessions on capital employed in developmental work within the Empire are mooted under this head.)

4—Extension of credits.

5—Institution of Empire currency bills as a means of combatting the fluctuations in exchange.

6—Development of natural resources, and co-ordinated action for improvement of technical research.

7—Organisation of economic intelligence and unification of the law and practices in matters affecting trade.

8—Development of inter-Empire shipping and communication.

Unemployment Problem.

In the development of trade, Great Britain herself will be vitally interested. Her roll of unemployed is her most pressing problem. To meet it, she has been driven to huge expenditures and appropriations in unemployment insurance, in loans to local authorities in guarantees under the Trade Facilities Act, in the extension of credits under the Export Credit scheme, and in the encouragement of migration to the Dominions. The last named—that of Empire settlement—Great Britain intends to press before the Conference. According to advices, she feels that the Dominions should embark on a bolder scheme.

On questions to be discussed, Premier King is reserving announcements of his policy for the Conference itself. On constitutional relations, he will, however, it is understood, follow the broad lines of the policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in advocating autonomy and the supremacy of the Canadian Parliament over Canadian issues. At the same time it is expected that he will press for improvement in present methods of consultations and communicating information as between the Governments of Great Britain and of the overseas Dominions

Question of Defence.

Premier Bruce of Australia, according to report, intends to urge the adoption of some definite and concrete scheme of Empire defence and further, wider tariff preference for Dominion goods in the markets of Great Britain. The latter, Premier Bruce is apparently advocating as a corollary to the encouragement of migration from Great Britain to Australia. On these questions again Premier King is reserving announcements of his attitude. But it is likely that, in view of present financial conditions, he will oppose any new defence scheme involving additional taxation in Canada.

Should Premier Bruce press extension of British preference along the lines indicated, Premier King will hold that extension of British preference by Great Britain is entirely a question for the Parliament at West minster. Moreover, it is understood, he would, on two grounds, be opposed to making encouragement of British immigration conditional on the extension of British preference—first, because British immigration is needed for the development of Canada; and secondly, because "conditions" introduce the element of bargaining, and as such, are likely to prejudice good relations within the Empire.

Forward Movement by Anglicans Resultful

CALGARY, Sept. 21.—That it has only cost a fraction more than five per cent. to collect the huge amount of $3,021,567 for the Anglican Forword Movement Fund, was one of the interesting points brought out in the report of the Rev. S. Gould, General Secretary of the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada, and which was presented to the Board of Management of the organization session here this morning.

The finances under apportionment in 1912 were $142,00; last year they were $208,311, in additon to the Jewhis apprortionment of $13,874, making $$22,185 in all. In addtion $241,745, not under apportionment had been raised, as well as $66,924 in 1922, in response to an appeal for "Save the Children" fund, and $22,174 for the Algoma fire fund, making $399,582 all told. The amount of outstanding contributions in connection with the forward movement was $436,634.79.

Another feature during the ten year period under review had been the acquiring of a church house in Toronto which had been built at a cost of $56,000.

CROWD JAMS RESTAURANT TO SEE LUIS FIRPO FEED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A woman fainted yesterday, when crowds jammed the sidewalk in front of a Broadway restaurant, where Luis Firpo was lunching. Police had to keep curious gazers out of the lunchroom and from the sidewalk.

2 ARE DEAD FROM TERRIFIC EXPLOSION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—As a result of a terrific explosion at the bureau of standards yesterday afternoon, Logan Laurer was instantly killed, Urban Cook died of injuries, and eight were injured seriously.

The explosion is believed to have occurred through ignition of gases from short circutated electrical wire. In the labaratory, aeroplane motors were being tested under vacuum. When the crash came ten inch concrete walls of the altitude chamber, where the experiment was being conducted, were completely wrecked.

EXPORT COAL TO CANADA AT ONCE

NEW YORK, Sept. 21. —(Canadian Press).— Special to the Wall Street Journal from Oswego, N. Y., says "Exportation of coal to Canada from the Port of Oswego will be resumed on large scale this week. The local offices of the Lackawanna advise that Glen Alden has released supplies at the mines, and coal will move to this port in train load lots. Six tow barges and three steamers have arrived here to start moving coal, with more expected daily.

LORD BYNG OF VIMY IS BANQUETTED IN QUEBEC

QUEBEC, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—"If I have done anything to build up this Dominion into one consolidated whole, I shall go home happy," exclaimed Lord Byng of Vimy in replying to address of welcome extended to him by Premier Taschereau at dinner in his honor at the Legislature cafe last night.

The guests included representatives of church and state, and the dinner brought together some of the most distinguished men in the province of Quebec.

"The victory of Vimy, won by Canadian, he commanded, said Governor General, had stood for the consolidation of Canada.

"And, gentlemen, will you think of one great consolidation of the Dominion with same ideals, same viewpoints and some determination."

AGED COUPLE ARE REUNITED AT LAST

Romance of Childhood Which Began in Germany, Ends in Marriage

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—A romance that began in Schleswig, Germany, many years ago, culminated last night when Henry Soerenzen, aged 76, and Mrs. Catherine Fisher, aged 78, were married by Recorder C. J. McCarthy.

The couple were childhood sweethearts. They were parted when their parents brought them to this country. The bride had been widowed three times, but Soerenzen kept his promise in parting, "to wait." Fate and "Dan Cupid" co-operated in the romance, and the sweethearts met again some months ago. "This is as it should have been fifty or sixty years ago," said Soerenzen, when greetings were extended followed the subject up year after year until a bill was finally passed.

While actively engaged in pushing his profession to the front, he was just as active in the politics of the Republican party. He organized the King's County League of Republican Clubs and was its first president.

In fraternal and club circles he was a member of Manuel Lodge, F. and A. M.; past regent of Unline Council, Royal Arcanum No. 1547; past commander of the American Legion of Honor; member of the Broadway Board of Trade of Brooklyn and many other organizations.

D. Pendry headed his ticket defeating a Democrat and a Citizens' Union candidate, and in the session of 1902 was appointed a member of the Public Health and Printed and Engrossed Bills Assembly Committee.

He practiced as a lawyer for 25 years.

Funeral in Peterobrough

THE WEATHER.

The rainfall last night totalled .34 of an inch. To-day (September 21) is another milestone in the irresistible march of the seasons, and, strictly speaking, is the first day of Autumn. The days and nights are now equal in length. The so-called equinoctial storms are due around this date, and while the scientists tell us there is no real ground for expecting storms to be more numerous or severe at this season than others, the fact remains that they frequently come. Is it simply a coincidence, or is it the result of a law of Nature unknown to man?—W. P.

STREET PAVING IMPROVES CITY

Hunter Street East Completed as Far East as Concession.

Paving in the city has made good progress this summer, and Hunter street present a good surface as far east as Concession street. From there to the Westclox factory the road is now being levelled and the paving will start in a day or two.

If the gravel can be carted fast enough to keep the men busy this section will probably be finished by next Wednesday or Thursday.

Olive avenue in the southern part of the city is also being paved, and will soon be completed.

THE MAYOR'S CHAIR

With the coming of frost there is restlessness apparent among the members of the City Council, and the usual fires of ambition are stirring in some aldermanic breasts. The mayor's chair looms large in the eyes of some, but as yet none have declared themselves.

Rumor is already busy, bandying the names of those most eligible for the position of chief magistrate, and prominent among these is Aldermen W. T. Holloway. It is reported that Mayor W. H. Taylor may decide to run in a third term contest, but no statement has yet been given out by His Worship.

Alderman M. McIntyre is also mentioned in connection with the seat of honor.

It is not believed that a labor canddiate will stand, but a possible dark horse is hinted at. It is early yet for a definite statement, but it is practically certain that a contest for the mayoralty will mark the close of this year of Mayor Taylor's reign.

UNION STATEMENT DECLARED WRONG

Confuses Asembly And Church Says Presbyterian Opponent.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press)—Rev. R. G. McBeth, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church here and one of the leading opponents of the church union to-day declared that the statement recently issued in Toronto by Rev. Dr. Gandier and Rev. Dr. Pidgeon in the interest of organic union of certain churches, is fundamentally wrong, because it confuses the assembly and the church. The assembly is not the church and the church courts have no constitutional right to put an end to the church whose affairs they are elected to administer, he stated.

"The rest of the statement," Dr. MacBeth declared, "is principally unwarranted prophecy and impertinent. They ask congregations opposed to the union scheme not to vote until after the bill to consummate union passes parliament. This, in effect, is saying that the people must not think until it is too late."

BANK LENDS MONEY TO PAY FOR DIVORCE

Community Institution has Never Lost a Cent.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 21.—No need now to postpone that divorce while you save money to pay court costs and attorneys' fees. If you live in Johnstown and have cred it with the Community Savings and Loan Co., you can get a small loan to break the marital bonds.

A. M. Custer of Johnstown, brought the news here in an address before local retail chedit men. Small loans, he said, are made to all classes of persons, the average being $126. Of loans amounting to $425,000 not a cent has been lost by the abnk, a community enterprise..

POOL FOR ONTARIO HONEY.

The Ontario Honey Producers' Co-operative Company, which was launched early this summer, has today sixty per cent. of the commercial honey output under its control. Membership in the organization has steadily increased and a brand—"Beekist"—has been chosen and registered together with an attractive label to assist in making Ontario honey better known to consumers.

Shipments are made in large part from local apiaries, only odd lots being assembled at Toronto where the head office is on Wellington street. The pool closes at the end of February. It is intended to establish divisional centres at Toronto, Hamilton, London, Belleville, Ottawa, Peterboro and either Guelph or Mount Forest; where honey can be stored in bonded warehouses.

MONTREAL TO CLEAN UP DETECTIVE DEPARTMENT.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—There will be sweeping changes in the Montreal detective department, Inspector E. D. Egan, in charge of the department, announced in denial of rumors that he was to submit a lengthy report to his superior, Police Chief Belanger and the executive committee, recommending changes which would constitute a "clean-up" of his section of the service.

"GRAND TO HAVE YOUR HEALTH"

says Mrs. Jenny Evans, of Detroit, Mich. Few of us appreciate our health until we lose it. Mrs. Evans worked in a factory, but owing to a weakness, and pains in her back she was forced to give up work. She says: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me well. It is grand to have your health, to feel well all the time and to go around like other women without that awful torture of female troubles." Women who are suffering from such troubles should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the tried and true medicine, now recognized everywhere as the standard remedy for female ills.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.
Sir:

In his fine sermon of Tuesday evening the Rev. Dr. Campbell Morgan said (as reported in The Examiner): "That's what's the mater with the church today. . . . It has lost its passion . . ."

If Dr. Morgan would kindly tell us the whole truth that I am sure must be in his mind he would say not that it has lost its passion but that the clergy have lost their faith. Think for a moment of the absurdity of criticising God.

If you say you are not criticising God, then you don't believe that He is speaking to you through the Bible for surely no one would believe that God wrote or inspired the Bible and then reviewed it as he would a novel.

Then we have the churches being dragged into decisions on moral questions which, as Dr. Morgan says, must be left between each human being and his God. And to give the finishing touch to the breaking up of the "passion" of the people we have the economic movement (because founded on the demand of dollars and cents) now fiddling with the assemblies of the people (called churches) today and no camouflage can disguise the subtle purpose of the agitators. People are gradually "getting into it" and when they do they will "get to it." What is needed surely is a revival amongst the clergy. Let the people alone. Who can look for faith in the pew when it's not in the pulpit?

REMAINS PRESIDENT OF ALBERTA UNIVERSITY

EDMONTON, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press)—Dr. H. M. Tory will continue as president of the University of Alberta. After consideration of the offer recently made him to take the chairmanship of the Canadian Scientific Research Council he has given an answer to Hon. Perron Baker, Minister of Education, to the effect that he will remain at his present post.

Negotiations are still pending with the scientific research council, however, with a view to working out a plan by which Dr. Tory may be able to take an active interest in the direction and operations of that organization while continuing to serve the university.

A real man is one who would rather tell the truth than be popular.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

CAUSE OF GOITER

The cause of goiter has been recently subjected to much discussion on the part of physicians and laymen alike.

Much light has been thrown on the so-called sources of focal infection. Mysteries which have surrounded goiter, chronic rheumatism and diseases of the stomach and kidneys, have been under strict observation. Intestinal stagnation may cause true infection by micro-organisms penetrating the tissues. However, many cases of chemical poisoning, it is now believed, are due to focal infection, arising in other regions.

Dr. De Courey of Cincinnati, head of the goiter clinic at Seton Hospital, has advanced the statement that goiter is caused by fatigue or excessive exercise. After the treatment of three thousand patients, he is positive that much careful thought must be given the subject of physical exercise in schools and other places, by girls and women.

Eight women develop goiter to every two men.

"Excessive athletic and gymnastic work, especially in high schools, when girls are going through the adolescent period, in my opinion is being overdone at present," the doctor says. "Several years ago I advanced the theory that fatigue plays an important part in the production of goiter, and I felt that the growth develops when the normal limit of a patient's endurance is exceeded, whether suddenly or gradually. Women develop goiter more readily, because their zone of endurance is more narrowed than that of men.

If the growth of goiter in girls and women can be prevented by careful dieting and, as Dr. Courey says, by avoiding nervous tension and strenuous exercise; one of the greatest disasters may be a thing of the past in a comparatively few years.

CUSTARDS

Custard makes an ideal summer dessert. A meal deficient in meat supplying the necessary calories of protein is brought to perfect balance by the right dessert.

Custards require careful watching during baking to make them perfectly firm and smooth. The oven must not have a growing fire back of it because the temperature should not increase. Eggs should always be cooked at a low temperature and the milk and egg combination is no exception.

Baked custard is so easily digested that in a family with children or an invalid the one dessert answers for everyone.

Custards with fruit are delicious and most acceptable when fruits are in season.

Apple Custard

Two pounds apples, ¾ cup sugar, 4 eggs, 2 cups milk, ⅛ teaspoon salt.

Pare, core and slice apples. Stew with one-half cup sugar and three tablespoons water till soft. Rub through a fine sieve. Scald milk. Beat yolks of eggs with remaining sugar and salt. Pour scalded milk slowly on yolks, stirring constantly. Return to fire and cook over hot water until custard coats the spoon. Do not let the custard boil during cooking. Beat the whites of two of the eggs until stiff and dry. Beat in four tablespoons of sugar. Put apple pulp in a baking dish, pour over custard and cover with meringue into buttered custard cups or one large buttered baking dish.

Sprinkle with nutmeg. Set in a deep pan of scalding water. The water should come at least two-thirds of the way to the top of the molds. Bake about 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Do not let the water boil while baking. When a silver knife is cut into the custard and comes out clear the uest is done.

Caramel Custard

Six tablespoons brown sugar, 2 tablespoons water, 2 cups milk, 3 eggs, ¼ cup granulated sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla.

Put the brown sugar in an iron or aluminum frying pan. Heat, stirring constantly, until sirupy. Add boiling water and cook two or three minutes. Butter and warm custard cups. Put two tablespoons caramel in each cup. Beat eggs slightly with sugar and salt Scald milk and stir into mixture. Add vanilla. Pour into cups and bake in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven.

Maple Custard

Boil ½ cup maple sirup until thick and reduced one-third. Use as the aramel is used in the preceding recipe. Make custard as in caramel custard.

These proportions are calculated to serve four persons.

Bake eight minutes in a moderate oven.

Plain Baked Custard

Two cups milk, 1-3 cup sugar, 3 eggs, ½ teaspoon salt, nutmeg.

Beat eggs slightly with sugar and salt. Heat milk to the scalding point and add to egg mixture. Stir until sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Pour

UNABLE TO PAY COST OF LOVE NEST TAXI

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 21.—A "love nest" in a taxicab, which sped over the roads of western Pennsylvania for 49 hours, was broken up when E. R. Shirey, 28 years old, was brought into Frankstown avenue police station on a charge of having failed to pay the bill, which amounted to $110.65.

The "love nest" was started at 2 o'clock, and came to an end 24 hours later. The "girl in the cab" was not arrested. She was held to be an innocent party to the failure to pay the taxi bill.

Officials of the company appeared at the courts hearing and asked for Shirley's discharge saying an agreement was made whereby the bill was to be paid, and Magistrate R. E. Smith complied with the request. The identity of the girl in the "love nest" was not revealed.

FOMENTED BY MOSCOW.

LONDON, Sept. 21. — Reuter's Limited, says it learns the Bulgarian Minister of the Interior has made a statement at Sofia on the recent Communist activities, which he said originated from the report of an outbreak of revolution. He added that the documents seized in the hands of arrested Communists leaders proved that a coup de etat had been planned for September 16 in conjunction with the agrarian party.

The minister also claimed to possess documentary evidence that the Moscow Government, in conjunction with Bulgarian Communists, was trying to forment distrust in Jugo-Slavia of the new Bulgarian Government with the view of providing an armed conflict between the two countres. It is asserted that the Minister admitted that there had been some casualties in connection with the arrest of the Communists and searches of Communist head-quarters.

BUSY REMOVING TRACES OF FIRE

J. C. Turnbull Company's Big Store Will Soon Present Finished Appearance.

Repairs and renovations to the J. C Turnbull Company's big store are proceeding with satisfactory dispatch. It is anticipated that within two or three weeks the establishment will present its usual trim appearance, when the small army of workmen now employed have finished their various tasks. Already, traces of the fire which gutted the first and second floors have almost completely disappeared, and the store is nearly ready to emerge with brand new renovations to every department.

The most up-to-date ideas have been carried out in the reconstruction work, which is mainly in the hands of Peterborough contractors. Mr. Harold Fry, a local man, has charge of the repairs and renovations, the fine panel work in the windows, done in beautifully grained mahogany, is in the hands of the A. McDonald Lumber Company; Messrs. Dufmitt Brothers of this city are putting in counters and store fixtures, and electric fixtures of the newest type are being installed by Messrs. Miller, Powell & Watson, the former overhead lighting apparatus giving way to the latest idea in electrical display, with pendant fixtures carrying large white globes.

Among the projected changes, all of which have been planned with an eye to affording the maximum amount of convenience to customers, is the opening of a basement entry in the centre of the main floor, instead of at the back, as formerly. Directly between the candy and underwear counters, and facing the George street entrance, the descending stairway to the basement will be placed.

The upper balcony at the rear of the main floor has been removed, and the offices transferred to the second floor, where they will occupy the former corset section, which has been moved farther up toward the front of the same floor. On the second floor also, at the west end, will be placed the dress goods and silks department, brought up from the main floor in order to give daylight convenience to customers in these lines.

A great deal of careful attention has been given to repairs and renovations and placing of departments, in order to bring the big store up once more to its position before the fire, when it was considered the finest store building of steel and terra cotta construction in the province of Ontario. From the ground floor to the roof, in all of the five selling floors, decorations have been renewed, calculated to enhance to the utmost the attractive appearance of goods displayed.

WOOLLEN INDUSTRY OF VALUE TO CITY

Directors Apply to City Council for Fixed Assessment on Property

When Council's Manufacturers' Committee next meet they will discuss, and report on a request from Canadian Woollens Limited for fixed assessment on the whole of their property. This was decided by councils' committee of the whole, last evening, after Wm. Tinker, Secretary-Treasurer for the Company, had concisely laid the Company's request before that committee. Pointing out that the ten years' fixed assessment enjoyed by the Bonner-Worth concern, now absorbed by Canadian Woollens Limited, had expired, Mr. Tinker stated that the last three years had been especially hard on the woollen industry generally and his directors hoped for municipal recognition of the value to this community of these mills by granting a fixed assessment. Declaring that Canadian Woollens had made no profit this year, while their present assessment on the Auburn plant is $38,000 and on the former Bonner-Worth premises $32,000, Mr. Tinker stressed that the company employs 550 hands, with a pay roll this year amounting to $450,000.

Ald. Stocker warmly supported the request, urging that a company paying nearly half a million in wages was entitled to municipal consideration.

On motion by Ald. Holloway and Stocker this question goes to the Manufacturers' Committee to in turn report their recommendation.

GREAT VICTORY FOR PREMIER POINCARE

Papers Emphasize Anglo-French Solidarity Has Been Cemented.

PARIS, September 21. (United Press. — Premier Poincare has scored a great victory, and Anglo-French solidarity is restored, the Paris morning papers declare in commenting on the German offer to surrender; a marked change in the attitude of England is noted, following the publication of Germany's peace offer made through the Belgian minister to Berlin.

Other papers declare that it was Anglo-French solidarity that caused Germany to capitulate.

Either way round, Pertinex, writing in the Echo de Paris, says that time is working for France. Franco-Belgian unity is stronger than ever. Germany's dislocation will be evident shortly, and she will be forced to recognize her defeat.

IMPROVEMENT IN FEDERAL RESERVE

Remarkable Gain Shown on New York Stock Market This Morning

NEW YORK, September 21 (United Press). — Extraordinary improvement was shown by the Federal Reserve Bank statements. Combined ratio at 77.2 per cent. was less than a half point from the year's high, while the figure for the local regional institution jumped in a single week from 81.3 per cent. to 87.7 per cent., the highest point since 9th August, 1922. This remarkable gain probably explained the 3 1-2 per cent. rate for all money on Wednesday and Thursday. Stocks, however, continued heavy in the early dealings, showing little recovery from Thursday's close when they stood at the lowest level reached since 31st July. Stocks in the general list steadied toward the end of the first hour under the influence of pronounced strength in New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Southern Railway, and other leaders of the carrier group.

Woollens Came Back.

American Woollens came back to 78 against its early low of 76 1-4, reflecting the statement by President Wood in which he expressed optimism regarding the company's trade outlook, and pointed to its record in maintaining established dividend rates as the best answer to bearish rumours that the eighty-seventh annual common payment would have to be reduced.

Although some attention was paid by the speculative community to the prospect of early suspension of the passive resistance in the Ruhr, the principal consideration in the morning trading was devoted to the Federal Reserve Bank statements. That the improvement in the Reserve position did not reflect a slowing down of business was shown by the fact that commercial loans of 77 leading banks were at the high point of the year. These banks represent about one-third of the banking assets of the country. Since 25th July they have increased commercial loans more than $200,000,000 indicating a total expansion of commercial loans amounting to about three times that aggregate. However, other commercial loans are considerably below the year's peak.

QUILL PENS PASS

LONDON, Sept. 21 (Associated Press) —Quill pens have been abolished at Southwark county court. This breaks a tradition of 150 years, and deprives barristers of an implement of many uses.

Quill pens in skilled hands have been known to be useful for other things than writing. They were waved to drive home arguments. They were flourished to distract attention from some specially obvious flaw in reasoning. Stubborn and timid witnesses often were impressed by a quill twirled in time with the legal twitch of the eyebrows.

The last quill pens have been removed from the court and cheaper steel pens substituted.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

MISSEZ GROUSE IN TROUBLE

Mister Gallop, the cowboy fairy, stopped his pony suddenly and motioned to the Twins to do likewise. Then he put his finger over his lips and nodded toward a dead tree that hung crookedly over the mountain path where they were riding.

There sat Chatterbox Magpie in his gorgeous coat of black, white and red, acting like a bad school boy. For, although Chatterbox is a friend of both mountain folk and plains folk, the birds hate him. He treats them shamefully. And just now he was making fun of Missez Gadabout Grouse and her eight brown children.

"Why doesn't your husband stay at home, Missez Grouse? Is it because you have a bad disposition or just because you and your children are so ugly? Why, you're just a plain speckled brown, all of you, and when I look down from my perch I can hardly tell you are there. Ground birds, that's what you are Ugh"

"Why, we have a good reason for staying on the ground, Mister Magpie," answered Missez Grouse meekly. "It's because we can't fly so very well and, therefore, can't get out of the way of hawks or eagles, or any big bird that might chase us. We know we match the ground and that's why we stay close to it—so we'll be safe."

"Well, then, is it because you gad about so that Mister Grouse doesn't stay at home?" asked Chatterbox curiously. "Is that how you got your name?"

"Oh, no, sir" said Missez Grouse. "It isn't my name, but my husband's name. I took his name when we were married. It's his name that is Gadabout not mine. I only go around to get food for my family. But with him it's different."

"Ah, ha" exclaimed Chatterbox quickly. "So that's it, is it? He is just a sporty fellow who won't stay at home and likes to keep bachelor's hall. Um h'm" I knew there was a scandal somewhere

"No, that's not it at all" declared Missez Grouse, indignant at last. He has a good reason for leaving us here alone and going off by himself high in the mountains."

I'll tell you tomorrow what the Twins heard her say then.

FOUR TIED IN THE MATTRESS CONTEST

Mrs. Fitzgerald, 300 Aylmer Street, Adjudged Winner by a Draw.

Guesses in the Marshall mattress contest ranged all the way from 2 5-16 pounds to 750 pounds, and four persons tied for first place. Mrs. Fitzgerald, 300 Aylmer street, was adjudged the winner on a draw by G. L. Hay, secretary-treasurer of the Peterborough Examiner.

This popular contest was arranged by the J. C. Turnbull Co. during the exhibition, and attracted a great deal of attention. The exhibit of Marshall ventilated mattresses was a centre of interest in the main building, and the guessing competition drew widespread attention to the light-weight features of the mattresses.

The weight of the mattress was unknown until F. Bullied weighed it on the market scales, and it was afterwards weighed by Mr. Kingan. According to the terms of the competition, the winner is requested to bring her duplicate folder and claim the mattress.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), lovely and unbelievably innocent is impersonating her beautiful half-sister.

Juliet Divine, known as the Million Dollar Doll—whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's Dream Prince, furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child. His wife's infidelity is making him wretched and in order to facilitate her obtaining a divorce, Miles offers the Million Dollar Doll $20,000 to take a yacht trip with him. Juliet is unable to take the trip herself, but working on her little sister's gratitude to Miles, she persuades Terry, who is an exquisite counterpart of herself, to take her place. Miles does not recognize the little girl he befriended so long ago.

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek who does not know of Terry's relationship to Juliet, is in love with the younger girl.

Mrs. Harkness, Miles' old servant, is Terry's maid on board the yacht. Her early disapproval of "The Million Dollar Doll" is swiftly disappearing under the influence of Terry's child-like charm. Miles has stipulated that he will have nothing to do with the girl, on the voyage, but under the impression that Terry is flirting with him, he breaks his bargain and kisses her.

Terry goes to her room wretchedly unhappy.

CHAPTER XLVI

New Fears

The girl wondered how she had been able to get through the evening without breaking down.

"I couldn't have done it," she thought, "unless we'd talked about history and things like that."

But she had got through: and she believed that the trembling of her hands and the constant effort to make her voice sound natural had passed unnoticed by Sheridan.

"If I'd guessed what it would be like I shouldn't have dared risk going up to dine with him," she told herself.

She said now, in looking back at what had happened, that she must have been numbed at first by the shock, for after her horror of the change in Sheridan had been turned to self-reproach by his scolding, she had been conscious of no sensation at all.

She had forced herself to think that he could have meant no wrong; that she had misunderstood, and must atone.

But as she sat opposite to him at dinner, striving to be composed, a voice seemed to shout question after question in her ear. The questions were so loud, so insistent, that often she could scarcely hear through their clamour, what Sheridan was saying; and she was afraid, when he spoke, of answering them, instead of replying to him. The effect upon her mind of this confusion was unnerving.

"What does he think of you?" the voice would scream, over the sounds in the room, and the noise of the sea without.

"What does he think of you that he should walk into your cabin and shut the door, and kiss you, and then say the fault is all yours?

"Is that the way good men behave to girls?

"What have you done to him that he shouldn't respect you?

"Is it because you came on board this yacht alone?

"Is it just because you are you—or is it because he thinks you're Julia?

"What has Julia done to make him act like that, and look at her like that, though he never knew her, never even saw her before?

"Is it because she is an actress?

"Do men treat all actresses like that?

"Was it even more terrible of you come on the yacht for this trip with him than you thought it was, or than Julia told you when she said people would misunderstand, and you would have to sacrifice the respect of the world?"

Now, as she lay on her bed reviewing dry-eyed what had passed, the girl saw that there was something very wrong somewhere, either about Sheridan, or Julia, or about herself—or all three.

The thing she had done could not be undone. She would not undo it, even if she could, because it was for Sheridan's sake; and in spite of his harshness at first, and worse than harshness at last, he was the Prince. She owed everything to him.

But oh, she was paying And he was like the rest of the world, in not respecting her. She hadn't realized that it would be so with him, as well as others.

And she could not see ahead, into the future.

She was afraid, and trembled.

* * * * * * *

Sheridan did not meet his guest on the day that followed. She was keeping out of his way; he understood that, of course. It would have been a slow moving brain not to take in that fact.

But Sheridan puzzled over the point of view—the real point of view—of such a woman. In spite of trying to push the thought of her out of his head, it crept back again and again.

"Why does she think it worth while to go on acting as if she were aggrived?" he wanted to know. "Why do I feel as if I'd been a brute to her, when I know that these million doll-women appreciate a man only when he is a brute?"

He wished that she would walk on deck, as usual, and give him a chance to throw her a word, as if nothing had happened. If he could see the girl, he would stop thinking about her in this stupid way, that was a mere trick of a brain too highly keyed.

But she did not come; and that evening Sheridan said indifferently yo Mrs. Harkness, "I suppose your charge—Miss Divine—got through that little squall last night as well as she did the big one. Not upset at all?"

"No, Mr. Miles, she seems pretty well," replied the old woman. "She hasn't been about much, because she wants to rest her ankle a bit before we land at Monaco tomorrow. She's been reading in her cabin a good deal."

At least the girl hadn't given him away to Harky; He could tell by the look in his old nurse's eyes that she'd received no shock.

And it would have been a shock if she had had any hint of the scene in Miss Divine's stateroom.

NO EDUCATION

given, and to contain all that man needs to know, while not solving all the riddles of the universe, the speaker said he would like to persuade all people in trouble to leave alone other books discussing the Bible—his included—and study only the Bible.

A devout will is also necessary. "I can't say it is an easy thing to study the Bible. If you are going to be a Bible student you will have to sweat. There is no short cut to anything."

"The Bible is not a book. It is a library containing about 66 books, written by 30 or 40 authors over a period of 1,500 years. They contain little pieces of history; condensed reports of preaching; a little collection of poems."

Commenting on the way in which the books of the Bible fit together, the sepaker asked his audience to try to pick out 66 pamphlets from any fifteen centuries and bind them together so that they fit like mosaic.

Religious Literature.

The Bible is religious literature. It is not necessary to declare on starting that it is the literature of the only true religion. That conviction will come. It is not a system of philosophy. People do not come to it for that, but that does not mean it is unphilosophical.

It is not systematic theology. "I am not declaring against systematized theology," the speaker interjected. "The Bible is a book of religion—it tells of the relation of God to man; of man to God and of man to man."

Dr. Morgan advised the beginner in Bible study to choose a book in the New Testament, using the best translation obtainable.

"I think I would start with the New Testament," he said, "because you can't read a sentence in the New Testament without going back to the Old."

He also declared against the chapter and verse marking of Bibles, saying that in the majority of cases the breaks are in the wrong place.

"Read the book right through," he said. "Don't stop at the hard place. Get a general view of the whole book at one sitting if possible. Get an idea of the movement and content. I have read the books aloud on an average 50 times each. I have been studying the Bible 40 years and I am just finding out how little I know."

This is the telescopic method of Bible study, and should be followed by the misroscopic method, by which the book is taken to pieces and analysed with a study of the derivations of the words.

"The Bible will set up upon your conscience a moral and spiritual demand immediately you begin to study," the speaker concluded.

Afternoon Meeting.

Rev. Dr. Morgan took as his subject, "Christ as Man," in his discourse on the Gospel of Luke, at St. Paul's Church yesterday afternoon, when his large audience almost filled the big edifice, demonstrating once more in their quiet attentiveness through an hour-long address, the quality of interest which this speaker draws from his hearers, who listen with intent, soundless appreciation to his brilliant expositions of the Scriptures. Dr. Morgan imposes on the sacred writers the bias of his own analytical mind, drawing from their words in logical rotation his own individual interpretation of hidden shades of meaning.

Luke, the Greek physician, showed Christ as "the second man and the last Adam," dealing with His personality, drawing His picture first as perfect, then as perfected, through its perfect functioning, and finally as perfecting many sons and bringing them to glory. As a baby, then as a boy, then as a man, he drew the picture, giving His genealogy through Joseph, son-in-law of Heli, father of Mary, and thence back to Adam, showing the ideal Man as the offspring of God.

"I feel that in the Protestant Church we have wronged Mary too long. I am not pleading for the worship of Mary which is idolatry. But in our rebound from idolatry, we have left Mary in obscurity. We have wronged her. If there is nothing higher and lovelier in all the world than pure motherhood, then there is no mother of all the mothers who should be held in greater reverence than the mother of the Lord."

Speaking of the virgin birth, and the revelation of the Angel Gabriel to Mary with regard to her high destiny, the speaker referred to the Hebrew form of the Greek word Jesus as being Joshua. In the Old Testament, the first Joshur was Hosea, whose name meant "salvation." He was the servant of Moses, who, realizing that Hosea would follow him, incorporated with his name the name of Jehovah, making it Joshua, or "the salvation of the Lord."

Regarding the controversy over the virgin birth, Dr. Morgan reminded his hearers that the first person to raise a doubt about it was Mary herself, when she enquired of the angelic visitor how such a thing could be. There were two problems involved in the message of Gabriel, one, the problem of the virgin birth, the other the problem of the immaculate conception. The angel assured her, "Wherefore, also, He shall be holy."

"I submit to you to-day that the man or woman who declines to believe in the virgin birth does so as a result of his or her philosophy of God. If God in His universe is limited by the laws that man has so far discovered, this thing could never have happened. But is He? I say that God never breaks a law in His universe, but there are laws that you and I have never discovered. In order to live within the law, you are constantly negativing another law. The law of muscular contraction, exerted in the act by which I hold this book up in front of you, is negativing and halting the law of gravitation, which strives to draw the object to the floor below. There is nothing supernatural to God. He can use laws that I don't know about to accomplish His purpose. I decline a God who is limited in His universe by laws that have so far been undiscovered by a two by four humanity. The man who starts out to question the virgin birth of Christ will inevitably progress to a doubt of the virtue of His life, the vicarious nature of His lying and the victorious manner of His resurrection."

Referring to the dogma of the Roman Church with regard to the immaculate conception, the speaker said it differed from the Protestant version in this wise, that it declared Mary, Christ's mother, to have been immaculately conceived, instead of stressing the immaculate conception of her Son.

"The Roman dogma is a modern one. It was only promulgated by a Bull in 1846. It was considered for centuries before that by Roman theologians and the whole College of Cardinals, and it was only in 1846 that the Pope, speaking ex cathedra, or infallibly, and that is the only time that the Pope does claim to speak infallibly, declared that the sinlessness of Jesus was accounted for by the immaculate conception of His mother. But we are Protestants and we use our reason. If Mary was conceived immaculately, how about her mother? One would have to go back in a long line of sinless people, immaculately conceived, which is impossible. The immaculate conception of Jesus was through an act of God."

"If you deny the sinlessness of Jesus and His immaculate conception, you have to accept the doctrine that a child of a sinful race, born with the sinful tendencies of man, struggling against the sin of His human nature, was strong enough to produce an unlifting morality which has been the dominant force of nineteen centuries."

Luke, in his later chapters, went on to describe the temptation of the Lord, His teaching, and His transfiguration, in His relations to the lower, the surrounding and the upper worls, functioning perfectly in His human relations, coming to the ultimate climax, the hour of metamorphosis, on the Mount, when, through His love for humanity, He refused to leave the world and went on to Golgotha and the Cross.

WORLD FAMOUS ROMANCE OF OLD ENGLAND COMES TO THE ROYAL MONDAY

Next week Peterboro will see the Canadia premiere of Stoll's big English film, "Dick Turpin's Ride to York," which comes to Canada direct from tremendous runs in London and Liverpool.

The story of Dick Turpin is famous throughout the world, and Stoll spent over eighteen months in making the film and has captured all the fascinating romance of the merry days of old England. The part of Dick Turpin is taken by an eminent English actor, Matheson Lang, and Dick Turpin, Tom King and all the fair mistresses actually live in the photoplay. The name of Dick Turpin, the highwayman, in the days of old England, was known far and wide, and on the road to York, he held up travellers, and though he robbed wealthy squires of their purses, he was never known to take more than a kiss from a fair lady, and Turpin laughed in the faces of His Majesty's Bow Street Runners, who in the days of George II, held up the authority of the law, for Turpin rode so fleet and shot so well that none in the country could even touch him.

The famous ride of Dick Turpin and the Bow Street Runners is a feat of horsemanship which excels anything seen in the present day. Many of the London critics remark that a ride such as this could only have been staged in England. Turpin on his famous horse, Bonnie Black Bess, leaps seven-foot hedges, fences, and toll gates and is the wonder of the countryside and in his wake come dragging along the Bow Street Runners. In some cases, they follow jumping as did Turpin. Some of them clear the jump and some fall, and in many other cases, they wait till the toll gate is opened by the keeper. On one occasion Turpin's road is blocked by a donkey and cart and Turpin and Black Bess coming tearing along at full speed and leap right over the top of the startled animal and wagon.

The film is full of romance and red-blooded thrills from the start, and when it reaches the famous climax of the ride to York, it is something that will set everyone's blood tingling. In London and Liverpool, where Dick Turpin played to its first English showings, it absolutely brought the housese down when this climax was reached.

THE JOLLIEST BIT OF OLD LONDON HUMOR WE HAVE SEEN DESCRIBES "ME AND MY GAL" NOW PLAYING AT ROYAL.

"Me and My Gal" is the jolliest bit of old London humor we have had here for some time. It attracted large crowds to the Royal Theatre yesterday. "Squibs" is a delight. They say in London that Betty Balfour is ousting Mary Pickford for first place in the hearts of scre followers. She has a piquant little face and takes readily to character work.

The piece, which reals with the love of the little flower girl ("Squibs") for the London "Bobby," has mostly slum scenes, but there is a bit of country and Squibs' attempts at cycling and roller skating are very funny. It has a touch of pathos, too, and the text is very human.

Not the least appreciated were the familiar views of old London. "There's Piccadilly—just like it really is," you hear someone say, and the tower of London and the Zoo and other well known spots are also seen.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Realism is the keynote of the sea pictures in the Capitol feature for this week end; "Down to the Sea in Ships." In an intriguing manner, the producers have wound about their close-up thrills of the whalemen pursuing the monsters of the deep with the quaint, soft-tinted romance of a demure Quaker maiden, with her grey draperies and meek, parted hair and little, curtesying bows.

There are many fashions in movie dramas. One may go any night of the week to different theatres and see varying styles in the production of the silent pictures that display changing types of the strictly mechanical development. There is a touch of Griffith's method in this picture, with its swift transitions of mood and tense, its changes in back ground and action. At one minute, the audience sees the stately old four master, sailing to port on a quiet sea, and at the next, the fury of the elements leaping in forked lightning against a black sky, drenching rain washing the decks of the laboring vessel. The fury of two men, battling in the Quaker meeting house, while a storm rages outside, and a shocked congregation watches in the background, changes suddenly to a peaceful daisy field, and the Quaker wife rocking her cradled child. The village crier, loud bell ringing, is pursued by his tattling companion in a note of comedy that swings instantaneously to tragedy in a whaling vessel's hold, where a brutal master taunts a helpless girl.

A very attractive feature of this production is its accompanying music. Loud claps from the gallery greeted the stirring strains of "Nancy Lee" that ushered in the opening reel, "Abide with Me" lingered about the scenes in the old Quaker meeting-house where the rigid men worshippers sat with hats on head until the Lord spoke to them, and "Home, Sweet Home" gave the note to the wanderer's return.

Quaint, sweet, shy, the Quaker maiden bowed to her father's wrath when he discovered the little gay parasol her lover had presented to her, and, obedient still, she went out in the storm to wed his choice for her as a husband, the yellow haired, Siggs. "Thees" and "thous," the old horse-drawn vehicles of another time the quiet streets of the whaling city, lent their note to the old romance.

The most stirring scenes are the grimly realistic sea pictures, with mutiny aboard a whaling vessel, and the the fight of the whalers with the monsters of the sea, huge mammals breathing "frothed defiance" to the skies. There is a wonderful view of a captured whale, fighting for life, overturning the men in the frail boat, its companion sharks cutting through dark water in ghostly grey shapes. Vivid action and thrilling intervals, woven about the quiet Quakerism of a forgotten time, make a distinctly interesting picture, just a little different to the ordinary run.

Harold Lloyd, companioned by Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels make a vivacious trio in "The City Slicker" a hilarious comedy, there is plenty of cartoon fun in the Krazy Kat episode that involves a lost baby and some exquisite colored pictures in the flower series.

While silence is a very good substitute for brains, perfume is a very poor one for soap.

C. G. E. Tied With Oshawa --- Yanks Win the Third Consecutive Championship

ROSE'S LONG HOMER WINS FOR CHAMPS OVER OSHAWA TEAM

C.G.E. Beat Visitors 7 to 6 and Even up Series. Frost Stopping Oshawa Rally When Danger Threatened.

THIRD GAME NEEDED

The Canadian General team evened up their Intermediate O.B.A.A. series with Oshawa General Motors yesterday by beating the motor town crew 7 to 6 at Riverside Park, the game being called on account of darkness at the end of the first half of the seventh inning. A third game is now of course necessary to decide which team will meet the Picton-Brockville winners in the semi-finals

The Oshawa team proved anything but soft picking. They were in front 2 to 0 at the end of the third inning and although the Electricians put four runs across in the fourth frame and added three more in the sixth the motor outfit staged a batting rally in the next inning that drove Scotty Galbraith to the showers and when "Bun" Frost in the role of life saver retired the side the visitors were only a counter down and had two runners on the sacks. Frost stopped the rally in a hurry after five Oshawa players had crashed out hits in succession off Galbraith for four runs.

Up to that stage the C.G.E. portsider, pitching his first game since July had gone along nicely, holding the motorists to four hits and showing nice speed and good control. The sudden assault in the seventh was an unexpected development but the effectiveness of Frost as a rescue expedition saved the situation, "Bun" striking out two men to end the Oshawa big inning.

Bennett the right hander who performed in the gunning pit for Oshawa was not much of a mystey, being found for fifteen hits, but he was well supported in the main and got ou tof some tight corners. Ray Rose led in the attack upon him with three hits in three times up, his last safety being a tremendous drive to the bushes in right field for a homer, chasing two runners in ahead of him. It was one of the longest wallops of the year and it won the game for last year's champs.

C.G.E. made five errors against two misplays by the visitors but none of the local miscues figured in the run-making, while one of Oshawa's boots cost a run. Each team scored six earned runs so that the fielding slips did not occupy a very prominent place in the affray.

Stroggly in the limelight from a fielding standpoint was "Scotty" McPherson, the C.G.E. right fielder, who roamed far and wide to grab of five flies. C. Bennet in centre field for Oshawa had a nice running catch to his credit.

The game was played under very adverse conditions, rain falling until the battle got under way and the diamond was sodden and greasy. Under the circumstances the exhibition was a snappy one and it was admirably handled by Umpires Skitch and Barnes of Cobourg.

First Inning.

Oshawa—Thompson walked. Hall hit to Rose but Barrie dropped the toss to second and both runners were safe. Jubb flied to McPherson. Critney also flied to right, McPherson making a nice running catch. C. Bennett forced Hall at second, Barrie to Rose. No runs, hits, one error.

Peterborough—Barrie rolled to Thompson. McCarney beat out a hit to third but was out stealing. Dugan bounced a hit of Hall's shins. Rose singled to right sending Dugan to third. Rose stole second. Brown threw out Jackson. No runs, three hits, no errors.

Second Inning.

Oshawa—Hobbs popped to Ross. Brown struck out. McPherson made a nice catch of Hipwell's drive to right. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterboro—McPherson was safe when Hall's throw pulled Hobbs off the bag. McPherson died stealing. J. Hall fanned. Hall tossed out Galbraith. No runs, or hits, one error.

Third Inning.

Oshawa — G. Bennett fanned. Thompson doubled to left center, the first hit off Galbraith. Hall was hit. Jubb flied to Rose. Critney doubled to centre, scoring Thompson and Hall, and reached third on Barrie's high throw. C. Bennett flied to J. Hall. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Peterboro — Ross singled past short. Barrie beat out a bunt. McCarney sacrificed. G. Bennett tossed out Dugan. Rose was hit, filling the bases. Jackson fanned. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Fourth Inning.

Oshawa—Hobbs grounded to Galbraith. Brown singled to centre. Hipwell fanned. McPherson went back and grabbed G. Bennett's long fly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterboro— McPherson singled through short. J. Hall singled to center, sending McPherson to third. Hall stole second. Galbraith flied to C. Bennett, McPherson scoring after the catch. It was a nice grab by the centre fielder. Ross beat out a tap to third and stole second. C. Bennett missed Barrie's fly to centre aftre a run, Hall scoring. Barrie stole second. McCarney was thrown out by Thompson, Ross scoring. Dugan singled over second, scoring Barrie. Dugan stole second. Rose singled to right and Dugan was out at the plate on a nice throw by Jubb. Four runs, five hits, one error.

Fifth Inning.

Oshawa— Thompson fouled to Ross. Hall singled off Galbraith's glove. Jubb fouled to Ross, a nice catch by the backstop. Critney hoisted to McPherson. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterboro— Jackson singled to right. Thompson making a nice stop. Brown threw out McPherson. J. Hall rolled to Hobbs. Galbraith rolled to G. Bennett. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Sixth Inning.

Oshawa—C. Bennett was safe on Jacksons' wide throw in fielding his bunt. Hobbs forced Bennett, Rose to Barrie. Brown flied to McCarney. Hipwell got a life on Rose's fumble. G. Bennett fouled to Dugan. No runs or hits, two errors.

Peterboro—Ross walked. Barrie beat out a bunt. McCarney sacrificed. Dugan popped to Brown. Rose hit to deep right for a home run, scoring Ross and Barrie. Jackson singled to centre. McPherson singled between short and third. Hall forced McPherson at second. Three runs, four hits, no errors.

Seventh Inning.

Oshawa—Thompson popped to Barrie. Hall singled to centre. Jubb singled through short. Critney doubled to left, scoring Hall and sending Jubb to third. C. Bennett singled between short and third scoring Jubb. Hobbs doubled to centre scoring Critney and Bennett. Frost replaced Galbraith on the rubber. Crowter batting for Brown fanned. Hipwell was safe on Barrie's fumble. Hipwell stole second. A. Bennett fanned. Four runs, five hits, one error.

The game was then called.

THIRD PENNANT FOR THE YANKS

Lead of Seventeen Games Over Cleveland Clinches Championship.

NEW YORK, September 20.—The New York Yankees to-day clinched the 1923 American League championship, their third successive pennant victory, by defeating St. Louis at the Stadium 4 to 3.

The Yankees who have made a runaway of this season's race, now can lose all of their remaining 13 games and still finish at the top, even if Cleveland in second place, wins all of its remaining nineteen games.

Should the Yankees lose and Cleveland win all of their remaining games the final standing would be:

Cleveland, won 92, lost 62, per centage .597.

By clinching the pennant to-day, two and a half weeks before the scheduled end of the season, the Yankees have scored one of the most decisive victories in the history of the League. They now hold a margin of 17 games over the second place Indians.

The Yanks have set the pace practically from the start and have not been seriously threatened since midseason. Challenged first by Connie Mack's Athletics, who spurted sensationally in the spring, and later by Cleveland's rally, the Yankees have stood off these threats and maintained a championship stride while their rivals fell by the wayside.

CAN WHITEHOUSE STOP FALLS CREW?

Local Fandom Will Tell The World He Can in Spite of Reputation of Visitors.

Everything is set for the big Junior O.B.A.A. final at Riverside Park tomorrow between Niagara Falls and the Peterboro Lakviews and judging by the interest shown around town the local fans are going to turn out in large numbers and give the Peterboro outfit plenty of support in their battle for the Ontario championship.

The game is called for 3 o'clock sharp, the Niagara Falls outfit arriving at noon. Reports from the neighborhood of the cataract, herald the Falls team as a crack organization, Brantford Alerts pronouncing them the heaviest hitting team they have encountered. Such advance notices are not worrying the Lakeviews, who are pinning their faith on Frank Whitehouse's good left arm to subdue the swatters from the peninsula, B. Smith who has only had one run scored against him in two games will drill them over for Niagara Falls.

During the game bulletins of the other three games in which Peterboro teams are engaged tomorrow, the Maple Leafs at Hamilton, the Curlers vs the Hamilton Typos at Oshawa and the Oshawa-C.G.E. play off will be given out so that the fans who take in the local clash will be in touch with all the other fixtures.

Never in the history of Peterboro have four Peterboro teams been in action in Provincial competition on the same day and the various outfits are giving the city some mighty fine advertising as a live sporting centre. To live up to that record the Niagara Falls-Lakeview clash should be witnessed by a record junior crowd.

The teams will line ups as follows:

Niagara Falls	Peterboro
Clunie, ss	Cameron, ss
Clarke, 2b	L. Lebarr, 1b
O. Smith, lf	Moore, 2b
Aiscott, c	Whitlow, m
Dumas, m	Collins, c
Steel, 3b	Whitehouse, p
Slymm, rf	Bradshaw 3b
B. Smith, p	Halliday, 3b
	McIntyre, lf
	J. Lebarr, rf

BIGGEST BASEBALL BILL IN HISTORY OF PETERBOROUGH

Four Local Teams Playing To-Morrow on Widely Scattered Diamonds—Hamilton, Oshawa and Cobourg — Lakeviews Clash with Niagara Falls Here—Titular Contests.

They're off at the ball lots tomorrow. At home and on foreign fields Peterborough's representatives in the Intermediate, Junior, Juvenile and Midget series will match their wits with other competing ball clubs, giving Peterborough the biggest baseball bill ever known here, and probably never produced before in any place throughout the length and breadth of this broad Dominion. Here is the week-end bill:

Intermediate O.B.A.A. (Third Round)
Oshawa vs. C.G.E. at Cobourg
Junior O.B.A.A. (Finals)
Niagara Falls vs. Lakeviews at Riverside Park
Juvenile O.B.A.A. (Finals)
Maple Leafs vs. Hamilton at Hamilton
Midget O.B.A.A. (Finals)
Hamilton vs. Curlers at Oshawa

That's saying a mouthful. It is hoped that Peterborough ball fans will rise to the occasion. All may take part in the doings of a memorable day by attending the Niagara Falls-Lakeview game at Riverside Park.

* * * * * * *

Canadian Generals took an awful chance yesterday afternoon and played in the rain, nosing out a win over Oshawa to create a tie and make a third game necessary. But the ball club that doesn't take chances usually joins the spectators. And having taken a big chance and pulled out with a victory, Canadian Generals should land out in front again tomorrow. They will then wait for the result of the Brockville-Picton series and play the winner for admission to the finals for the Intermediate championship.

* * * * * * *

The Niagara Falls-Lakeviews game should be a great contest. Both clubs will show something real good in the pitching department, and that in itself should commend the game to the fans. And while the fans are following the contest before them they will also hear reports of the games in Cobourg, Oshawa and Hamilton.

* * * * * * *

The Maple Leafs should have a fine trip to Hamilton. The team will leave here tomorrow morning at 4.58 o'clock, care having been taken to arrange for special reservation for the players, on the Canadian Pacific train. The team will arrive in Hamilton about nine o'clock and will stay at the Y.M.C.A. The youngsters will have plenty of time to become accustomed to their surroundings and to size up the playing field. As the game will not start till 2.30 o'clock, the Leafs will be able to put on a good work-out. They will be in Hamilton till 7.30 p.m. The return trip calls for a stop-over of nearly two hours in Toronto, and they will reach home at one o'clock. As several supporters of the team will accompany the players, they will be in good hands throughout the day.

* * * * * * *

Oshawa fans are going to turn out and witness the Midget final between the Typos of Hamilton and Alex. Kay's Curlers. The local lads will make the trip in motors, and they will have a good outing. Here's luck to all four teams.

FOOTBALL NOTES

Only one football game is scheduled for Saturday afternoon and that is the Peck Cup Final between the Canadian Woollens an dG. W. V.A. to be played at the Oval. Kick-off at 3.30 prompt.

The Canadian Woollens received a bye in first round, then eliminated the Quaker Oats in the semi-final; and G. W. V. A. defeated the Thistle in semi-final.

When football was organized after the war, the Woollens was one of the teams to enter the league and are now the only eleven who has had a continuous record of being in the game without a break; also, have had the misfortune never to win a trophy so far, in spite of the fact, that they have played in many finals of various competitions. Perhaps they may be successful to-morrow.

The G. W. V. A. were one of the originals but dropped out of the game for two seasons and re-entered this year. They won the Gordon Cup and represented Peterboro in Ontario Cup series also feeling confident that they will annex the Peck Cup to-morrow.

Among the players that will participate in the Peck Final, Jack Cridland, at full-back, has always played that position with the Woollens since football was re-organized after the war. James Shaw is one of the originals who has not missed a season. He signed with the Caleys, then Woollens, last year Comrades but returned to Woollens this season Crowe played with Machine Gunners, Dyer with DeLaval. Burrows, Vets-C.G.E.-Vets. D. Perry, Gunners Woollens. James Sharman, Vets-CG.E.Vets.

Peterboro's Soccer Representain Ontario Association — Mr. Fred Sutcliffe—has been notified to attend O. F. A. meeting in Hamilton on Saturday, when it is expected that InterCity-T. F. A. division in soccer circles will be settled amicably.

KEENE HORSES IN MONEY AT LINDSAY

Baby Show at Fair Swarmed With 135 Entries.

(Special to the Exam'ner)

LINDSAY, Sept. 21.—The first two days of Lindsay Fair have been greeted with rather unfavorable weather conditions. Wednesday was opening day with an evening programme which attracted a goodly number. The chief attraction was a band competition, Woodville band carrying off the honors. Mr. R. Gliddon of Peterboro, officiated as judge.

The rainfall Thursday afternoon spoiled the attendance somewhat. Sir Adam Beck was billed to open the Fair but he disappointed the directorate. Hon. I. B. Lucas took his place.

There were 135 entries in the baby show competition. Mrs. G. Anderson, of Lindsay, won the sweepstakes. The entries in the different departments are up to last year's record.

WILLS MATCHED FOR TEN ROUND BOUT WITH SMITH

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press)—Harry Wills, negro heavyweight title contender, has been matched to fight Homer Smith, of Kalamazoo, Mich., in a 10-round contest at the Queensboro Stadium the night of September 27. The bout will be of unusual interest, not only because it will mark Wills' first ring appearance in a year, but also because Smith gained prominence by staying the limit of a 10-round match with Luis Angel Firpo last August 3, at Omah, Neb.

Wills has declared his willingness to meet Firpo to decide which shall be entitled to the next bout with the champion.

ITALIAN HEAVYWEIGHT CHALLENGES DEMPSEY

MILAN, Italy, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press)—Erminio Spalla, the Italian heavyweight pugilist, has issued a challenge to Jack Dempsey for a fight for the heavyweight championship of the world. He desires the fight to occur immediately. Spalla is now in training at Streha.

"I am ready to go to America immediately to meet Dempsey at any time and at any place set by the champion," said Spalla to the Associated Press today. "I am in fine condition and will be able to give the champion the biggest run for his money he has ever had."

CONDITIONS ON LOCAL MARKET BRIEFLY TOLD

Prices to Grain Producers Remain Fairly Steady —Egg Grading Regulations Are Endorsed.

FRUIT SITUATION

Prices to producers of grain products remain fairly stationary in local markets. Although alsike had a splendid growth this year, the crop, about three-fourths of which has already been placed on the market, shows a slight rise on the best quality of 25 cents on the hundred. Peas, only half a crop this year, are up to $1.50 a bushel. Buckwheat will be on the market within the next fortnight.

Hogs on the hoof have suffered a slight decline in price during the last ten days. The dressed variety has increased by a dollar a hundredweight.

Butter is stiff, and on the up grade, the best quality asking 45 cents a pound, with dairy butter slightly lower in price. Eggs are selling at 35 cents a dozen generally.

Egg Grading.

One of the largest retail grocers in the city is of the opinion that a strict adherence to the Government regulations regarding egg grading would make for better eggs and for a better regulated price also. They may be procured, if properly examined, in many grades, the highest the strictly fresh, then the Number One, later the 'fresh' eggs, under which cognomen most of the higher-priced eggs are now offered. In a section of Alberta, where the regulations were enforced by sending an egg grader to work on the open market, the man's first day's work netted a total of 150 dozen discarded eggs. His next appearance on the market resulted in a lesser amount being thrown out, and his third attempt found no culls whatever.

In the 'hides' section, of interest to rural stock raisers, there is a considerable decrease in sheep skins, the former price of $1 to $1.50 dropping to 40 to 65 cents apiece.

Fruit Offerings.

The fruit stores are crowded with the season's offerings of peaches, grapes, pears and plums. Crawford peaches, the housewife's favorite, from the Niagara Peninsula, sell at 60 to 80 cents for a six-quart basket, the 11-quart containers going from 80 cents to $1.40. There has been a slight increase in price in these peaches during the last few days. Black Roger grapes are much in evidence, with green Tokay grapes from California selling at 30 cents a pound.

The blue damsons that make such good jam are in the stores and plenty of green gages. Yellow egg plums are 65 cents a basket, and Italian prunes, identical in color and shape with soft blue plums, sell at $1.50 for a box containing about 13 quarts.

The frost that is on the pumpkin at this season of the year has also touched the tomato vines, with the consequent soaring of price that accompanies such untoward manifestations. An advance of 15 cents on an eleven-quart basket has been registered within the past week.

Big Bartlett pears sell for $1.40 in an 11-quart container, the Duchess variety is $1.25 to $1.50, and the Anjou pear $1.25. California aristocrats, ruddy-skinned, are five cents apiece.

Cauliflowers are good this year, with a great growth to the head, that brings their price up to 50 cents apiece in some instances. Bantam corn, not especially noticeable in the stores, sells at 25 cents and 30 cents a dozen.

Local melons are much in evidence, the nutmeg variety from our local gardens, and the Sunflower canteloupe from Niagara. The only importations in the fruit line from across the border appear to be Malaga grapes, lemons and oranges and the big, smooth-skinned, grapefruit that are coming along in quantities just now.

Honey 25 and 30c.

In the groceries there is honey, in the comb, dark and light, at 25 and 30 cents, the Government-graded Beekist brand at 5 lbs. for 83 cents, 10 lbs. for $1.60, the mixed honey at 5 lbs. for 59 cents, and 10 lbs. for $1.15, and the pure clover honey, 5 lbs. for 75 cents.

Big, attractive looking Spanish onions, that go so well with bread and butter, sell at three for a quarter. The little cooking onions ask the same price for four pounds.

There is a hint of winter in the latest note in window dressing in some of the stores, where large 'washed' Brazil nuts are displayed at 30 cents a pound, and the California butter walnut, which sells at 50 cents a pound. Bulbs are another cold-weather herald in the florists' shops, where hyacinth and crocus specimens are on sale.

Sugar Situation.

The sugar situation has taken another variation. One of the retail dealers in the city, whose sale amounts weekly to an average of nearly one hundred bags, received word yesterday of a decrease of 25 cents on the hundred from U.S. points. The present price is around $10.57 per hundredweight wholesale. Local dealers, selling surplus stocks, are in some instances retailing as low as $10.50 per hundredweight. The Tuesday price for raws was five cents a pound, the spread between this and the price charged the consumer being laid to the door of refiner's charges, depreciation, bagging, warehousing, and rates of freight, customs and bank exchange.

This dealer is of the opinion that prices will not advance to any great extent, Remarking that sugar was handled chiefly for customers' convenience, and was also easily disposed of, suffering very little deterioration and being a quick seller, this retailer compared it as a non-producer of revenue, along with its companions, butter and eggs, to the cotton stocks of dry-goods men, on which, it was claimed, very little profit was made, their sale being chiefly a matter of supplying the wants of customers for other products.

The sugar market, now dependent on supplies of sugar beets and sugar cane, may in time be fed from another source. German scientists are authoratively declared to be engaged in investigations which have to do with the sugar-making properties of certain types of sweet grass.

FULL-SIZED COLLIERY TO BE A FEATURE AT EXHIBITION NEXT YEAR

LONDON, Sept. 21. — (By Mail).—A full sized colliery, complete with headgear, pit ponies, underground stables, washeries, and all the up-to-date paraphernalia of modern coal-mining, seen in actual operation is to be one of the features of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley next year. The idea originated with the Mining Association of Great Britain, the coal-owners' organization which granted the money necessary for the purpose. The cost of plant and construction is estimated at 100,000 and that sum was readily voted. It was felt that so comprehensive an undertaking as the British Empire Exhibition would not be complete without illustrating some of the problems with which the coal mining industry has to deal, and the enormous progress that has been made in technique.

One of the principal features of the mine will be an electric winding engine, which will be able to lower into the workings 2,000 people an hour. Over the top of the shaft, which will be 18 feet in diameter will be erected a steel headgear 80 feet high. The headgear will be of lattice-work, and equipped with pulleys 15 feet in diameter. Next to the winding engine house will be a lamp room, containing electric and oil lamps. Adjacent to this will be offices, bathrooms for miners, a motor ambulance house, workshops and electrically driven air compressors. An electrically driven fan will be seen in operation, ventilating a labyrinth of underground tunnels extending a quarter of a mile.

In a large hall on the surface the primitive tools formerly used by miners will be on view, together with the early lamps carried by miners, and the more elaborate tools of today. The visit to the Wembley Colliery will conclude with a cinema entertainment, showing miners actually at work underground. The purpose of the exhibit, it is explained, is to give to the public a glimpse of the highly technical and complicated business of coal mining.

10 CENTS GOES LONG WAYS

PETER SIRBU

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 21.—Peter Sirbu, 5, claims the prize for traveling the farthest on the least money.

With a suitcase several sizes too large for him and 10 cents in cash he boarded a railroad train and landed in Jersey City.

The conductor didn't even ask Peter for a penny.

However, dad decided that his son was too young to see the world, so he wired authorities to put Peter aboard a train and send him home.

"I wanted to see the world" Peter told his parents.

ENGLISH DERBY WINNER STARTS LONG JOURNEY.

NEWMARKET, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Papyrus, the English Derby winner, began his long journey to the United States at daybreak to-day. He was accompanied by Bar Gold, his stable mate, which will keep him company across the Atlantic.

Papyrus was quickly boxed and placed on board a special train with Bar Gold by his side. At Clapham Junction the two horses were transferred to another special train which conveyed them to Southampton, where they were taken on board the liner Aquitania.

The Derby winner appeared in thorough racing fettle, having fully recovered from effects of the three cuts he received in running ot the St. Leger. Veterinary Surgeon Jones, of Newmarket, will go with Papyrus as medical advisor. English betting men are already offering odds that Papyrus will not defeat the United States champion.

TO UNRAVEL STRANGE MATRIMONIAL TANGLE.

TORONTO, September 21. Canadian Press. — Magistrate Patterson to-day made a further remand in the strange matrimonial tangle in which William Everingham is charged with bigamy, as a result of his first wife turning up after he married his second, following official information from the Militia Department while he was a soldier overseas that wife number one was dead.

Magistrate Patterson took the ground that he should have made verification of this official report before going through the marriage ceremony with another woman, by whom he now has two children.

Counsel for Everingham, said he would seek a divorce, on good grounds, from the first wife, if he was acquitted on the bigamy charge. The magistrate is considering the matter further.

BRITISH PREMIER LEFT PARIS FOR HOME TO-DAY

PARIS, Sept. 21. — (Canadian Press).—Stanley Baldwin, British Prime Minister, left for London by the noon train to-day after a most cordial leave-taking with Premier Poincare, who went to the railway station to see him off.

The two Premiers had a short but animated conversation in Mr. Baldwin's car. Then just as the train was moving off M. Poincare reached up and grasped the hand which the British Premier extended through the car window.

CAPITULATION TO FRANCE CONFIRMED

Belgium Determined to Adhere to Her Policy Regarding Germany.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 21.—(United Press).—It was officially confirmed that Chancellor Stresemann of Germany, has mad, concrete proposals for evacuation of the Ruhr to the Belgian Minister, Count De La Fille, at Berlin. (This informatton was carried exclusively by the United Press on Wednesday, Sept. 19, twenty-four hours before it was semi officially confirmed by the German Government and made available for other Press Associations.)

It is understood that Belgium is determined to adhere to her present policy, whereby she will make no agrement with Germany as long as passive resistance continues.

A Stumbling Block

A Berlin dispatch declares Premier Poincare of France is the stumbling block which prevents acceptance of the latest German proposals for evacuating the Ruhr, as made through the Belgian Minister, Wednesday, according to the belief of persons who have kept the United Press informed of the negotiations.

These sources, said Chancellor Stresemann first attempted to get the French Ambassador to transmit the proposals, but he refused when he learned that Germany attacked conditions, declaring only unconditional surrender would suffice.

Stresemann then approached the Belgian minister who agreed to transmit the offer, which the German actionary groups claim amounts to practically complete capitulation.

United Press information reports that despite the action of the French Ambassador, the terms were received by Poincaire from Belgium and that the French Premier is studying them.

INTEREST WAS KEEN IN WALKING RACE

LONDON, Sept. 21. — (Canadian Press).—A good deal of interest was taken in the recent walking match between Captain G. Ainsworth, Conservative member of the House of Commons for Bury, and Frank Gray, Labor M. P. for Oxford city, which resulted in a win for the Labor representative after a punishing contest. The walk was between Banbury Cross and Oxford, a distance of 23 miles.

Gray, who averaged 3.83 miles an hour during the contest and collapsed at its conclusion, is 42 years of age. Ainsworth is in his 50th year. He suffered so much from foot trouble that when about two miles from the goal he fell to his knees and was forced to give up. Both men served in the war and both showed considerable pluck in continuing the grilling contest when virtually exhausted.

The match was the outcome of a half serious challenge which Gray made at a dinner given in London that he would walk any man of his own age over the distance between Banbury Cross and Oxford, carrying a full infantryman's pack. Captain Ainsworth started with an eight-year handicap. Each carried an army pack weighing 60 pounds, including trenching tool, steel helmet and rifle.

Both M. P.'s started splendidly and settled down to a swinging pace of over four miles an hour. They actually covered the first four miles to Adderbury station in 52 minutes when they slowed up a little. They kept pretty well together until about 15 miles out, where Gray stopped and was served by his followers with cold tea. This halt enabled Captain Ainsworth to get a lead of nearly 300 yards, as he had been some distance ahead of Gray at the moment. He maintained his lead for a little while when the foot trouble began which ultimately put him out of the race. He removed his boots, attended his feet and was delayed an appreciable time.

Twenty miles had been covered in 4¾ hours and only three miles remained between the walkers and the goal, the Martyrs' Memorial at Oxford. At this stage it looked as if neither of the men would be able to finish his task. First the Oxford M.P. who appeared to have been in distress for some time, staggered to the roadside and collapsed. He recovered, had his pack replaced, and again took the road. Captain Ainsworth in the meantime had gone on ahead, but the trouble with his feet continued, and in addition he was receiving painful reminders of a leg injury received in the war. As he walked he almost sank to his knees, and was compelled to make frequent halts.

Gray passed Ainsworth. The latter, bracing himself up, actually ran a few yards, but was ordered a minute or two later to be taken to the city in a motor car by his physician, who was among the followers of the contestants. The captain drove the remaining two miles accompanied by his wife, who had ridden out of Oxford to meet him. Meanwhile Gray had struggled on, and when at last he reached the Memorial he was in a state of collapse. He fainted as he touched the railings around the monument.

He had covered the 23 miles in exactly six hours, the average pace being 3.83 miles an hour, as stated.

You never can tell. Many a man with the dearest little wife in the world would swap her for a cheaper one.

ESCAPING GAS WAS CAUSE ONE DEATH

While Only Use of Pulmotor Saved Life of Another.

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Escaping gas from partly opened jets was responsible for one death in the city last night, and only prompt medical attention and the use of a pulmotor for more than thirty minutes prevented a second death.

Mrs. Mary, aged 54, was found dead in her room on McCall Street this morning with the gas jet partly opened and the windows closed.

George Young, a roomer at a Jarvis Street house, was found in an unconscious condition by his landlady, and, according to the police, a tube was stretched from the gas jet to his bed. After the use of a pulmotor for more than half an hour, Young partly recovered and was taken to the General Hospital, where he regained consciousness at noon.

HOODWINKED WOMEN FIGHT FOR RIGHTS.

Claiming Men Hoodwinked Them—Organizations Appeal to the Home Secretary.

LONDON, Sept. 21 (Associated Press) —That women have been deliberately hoaxed by men lawmakers is the deepening suspicion of feminist leaders in England. So strong is the feeling that a deputation representing the principal organizations of women throughout the country is to wait upon the Home Secretary to urge amendment of the Sex Disqualification Removal Act.

In the opening sentence of the act it is laid down that a person shall not be disqualified by sex or marriage from the exercise of any public function. It is now clear, say the feminists, that whenever it is challenged the act fails to secure sex quality. Its chief effect has been to enable women to sit on juries which, rightly or wrongly, is regarded by most English people as a penalty rather than a privilege of equal citizenship. Further, women have been admitted as lawyers, but this is because the legal societies have accepted the spirit of the act and have not chosen to challenge its letter. Apart from these points the act, according to its women critics, has signally failed in some vital particulars.

The act does not give women equality of opportunity in the Civil Service, and it does not safeguard the position of women public servants, as exemplified in the differentiation between men and women police when, the plea of economy being necessary, most of the latter were dismissed. It does not secure women public servants from dismissal on account of marriage. It does not secure admission for women to the universities on equal terms with men, and it does not permit women, otherwise qualified, to sit in the House of Lords.

These complaints, when aired in the Dail, bring answers from ministers to the effect that the Republican prisoners are waging a deliberate campaign of disorderliness in jail in order to make political capital of their resulting discomforts. Such was the procedure of the ministers themselves against the British in the old days, the Free State officers say, and they charge that the rebels are imitating the tactics which they employed.

Not Ill-Treated

At a recent session, government officials read letters from prisoners to their wives saying they were well fed and cared for. Critics of the prisons discounted the letters, contending that the captives made light of their suffering to reassure relatives.

Little has developed to substantiate the charges that the prisoners are cruelly treated. Evidence was produced at one investigation confirming the allegations of beating captives, but these appeared to be isolated cases. Numerous prisoners, on being freed, have told newspaper correspondents that they found the jails irksome, but were not inhumanly treated.

Congestion in the prisons is traceable to the lack of space and the fact that the total of prisoners is far in excess of Ireland's jail accommodations.

The government, say its representatives, is making every reasonable effort toward humane treatment of those in detention. To criticism of the imprisonment itself, however, they answer that the 12,000 captives "have taken part in treasonable revolt, have shot down soldiers and carried on a campaign of terrorism which throws the Black and Tan regime into the shade."

WEDDNG BELLS

SMITH—ROSE.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. John's Church at seven o'clock this morning, when Miss Margaret May Smith, of Peterborough, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Thomas Elgin Rose, of Picton, Ont.

Rev. G. H. Lloyd officiated.

The bride wore a tailored suit of ladies' cloth, orange scarf and hat to match, and carried a bouquet of roses. She was given away by her sister, Mrs. Thomas Duncan, the bridesmaids being Misses Jean and Jessie Irwin, who were neatly attired, each carrying a bouquet of flowers. The groom was supported by Mr. Thomas Duncan.

After breakfast and a drive around the city, the happy couple left by the C.N.R. for Picton and points e'st. They will reside in Peterborough.

Society

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. L. Bothwell left to-day for an extended trip to Los Angeles, California, after a visit spent with parents and friends.

Members of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., who are desirous of attending the District meeting of the I.O.D.E. in Port Hope on Wednesday next, September 26th, are requested to notify Mrs. H. E. Stenson, at telephone number 1133.

Miss Maiyle Mahood is spending her vacation in Elora, the guest of Miss Dorothy Ferguson. Next week Miss Mahood and Miss Ferguson intend visiting the former's uncle, Mr. Jack Mahood, principal of Elmira Public School.

OTONABEE HOME WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE.

John Hewie, of Blezard's Station, Otonabee, suffered the loss of his house by fire, which completely decimated the fine brick structure. The loss, amounting to about $5,000, is partially covered by a small amount of insurance. The cause of the fire is unknown. A fire in the kitchen stove was allowed to go out about half-past six o'clock in the evening, and three hours later, the family retired for the night. At 3.30 a.m. Mr. and Mrs. Hewie were aroused by smoke, and found the kitchen and the woodshed in flames. The children were taken out in their night clothes, and a hurried call sent by telephone to neighbors, who responded at once, their efforts, however, proving unavailing in stopping the spread of the blaze.

HOME FROM WEST

Dr. Blagrave is on his way home from Calgary, where he has been attending the committee meeting of the General Synod. He will preach at both services in St. John's Church on Sunday.

INTERESTING TALK TO MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

The first meeting for this season of the Peterborough Medical Association was held last evening in the rooms at the Public Library with a good attendance of members. The visiting speaker, Dr. K. McIlwraithe of Toronto, one of the leaders in the department of Obstetrics at the University of Toronto, gave a very interesting lecture on "Modern Views in the Conduct of Childbirth." The subject, covered in a thorough manner, brought forth a general discussion. In the absence of the president of the society, Dr. H. M. Yelland, the chair was occupied by Dr. A. Moir.

FROST.—In loving memory of our dear daddy, Pte. Tom Frost, who died in England, Sept. 21, 1916.
Sleep on dear daddy thy work is o'er,
Thy willing hands will toil no more.
It was God's will, we will not complain,
But hope some day to meet again.
Seven years have passed since that sad day
God called the one we loved away.
Forget him! No, we never will,
As years roll on we love him still.

END STRIKE OF PRESSMEN SOON

Optimistic That Deserted New York Presses May Be Manned Tonight or Tomorrow.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(Canadian Press).—At a meeting late this afternoon of three representatives of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union and three members of the New York Publishers' Association, a contract will be drawn up between the two organizations, whereby the members of the International will man the presses deserted Monday night by members of the local union.

Lester Jones, acting secretary of the Publishers' Association, announced that the parley which continued in session all yesterday afternoon and evening until midnight, and again this afternoon, had adjourned without definitely agreeing to a proposal submitted yesterday by George L. Berry, of the International. "We expect, however," he said, "to get some sort of contract signed at a special committee meeting this afternoon." Mr. Jones declared that while the publishers had not definitely agreed to the provisions of the Berry proposal, concerning wages and working conditions, they had decided to put their views in the hands of a representative committee, which will meet with the International committee to-day. The session this morning, Mr. Jones said, was not attended by representatives of the International.

The Publishers' Association to-day announced the circulation of combined morning papers was 99 per cent. of normal. This was said to be an increase of 41 per cent. over yesterday's sales.

Say Settlement To-Day.

Members of the Publishers' Association considering the proposal submitted to them yesterday by the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, whereby the International undertook to man the presses of the leading local newspapers deserted Monday night by members of the local union, to-day agreed to the provisions of the proposal concerning wages and working hours, it was learned from a reliable source.

It was stated that the publishers who had been in conference for the better part of this morning with George L. Berry and other officials of the International Union, were conducting the details of an agreement with the International, and that a completed agreement probably would be ready within an hour or two.

THE SACRED HEART MISSION MEETINGS

Services This Week Devoted to Women—Meetings Next Week.

The mission conducted by Redemptorist Fathers at the Church of the Sacred Heart, which commenced a fortnight's duration on Sunday last, has been most successful. This week was devoted exclusively to services for the women, with sermons at each of the morning Masses and in the evening. School children have been instructed during the first three days of the week.

Rev. Father John McPhail and Rev. Father A. McCann are both interesting speakers, the former of the forceful, dynamic type, the latter mild and impressive. Sermons this week have been along the general lines of Redemptorist Missions, the addresses calculated to inspire in their hearers a fear and a love of God, and a desire to work out His commandments in their daily lives.

The saving of the immortal soul, with reference to the foremost ideal of the Christian, which places the salvation of the soul above every other consideration, was the subject of the opening discourse, followed by sermons on death, the general judgment, and the perils which beset the path of youth in relation to modern modes of life and thought. As always with Redemptorist missionaries, the sermons bring the mind to a realization of its relation to God and His commands, they point out the dangers to the soul of lax morals, bad companions and an indifferent mental attitude toward the supreme business of life; the redemption of the soul of each individual, and they waken in their hearers a resolution towards better things. They are spiritual tonics administered to weary and tired humanity, and base their appeal on the fundamental truths of Christ's teaching and example, as applied to everyday trials of men and women.

To-morrow (Saturday evening, the usual service in honor of the Blessed Virgin will be held, when the entire congregation of woman unite in a ceremony dedicated to the Mother of God.

The attendance during the week at all services has been exceptionally good, the large church holding overflowing congregations during the evening services, and having splendid numbers turning out for the morning Masses.

POINCARE HAS A TRUMP CARD OVER GERMANS

Great Britain Is Out Of It Until Imperial Conference Meets Next Month

TERMS REVEALED

LONDON, September 2 (United Press). — More and more the question of how the various Dominion Governments regard the foreign policy of the Empire is dominating the international affairs, and it is this that has really been the cause of the exceedingly non-committal note issued after the Baldwin and Poincare meeting, for both the British and the French Premiers are jockeying for time, and the former in order to gauge adequately Empire opinion and the latter expectant that resistance in the Ruhr Valley will not be the policy of Germany after the end of next week.

Premier Poincare seems to be playing the winning hand, but Stanley Baldwin is non-committal, and will probably make no more important statement on the question of the British foreign policy until he has consulted with the overseas Premiers at the forthcoming Imperial Conference unless he speaks in the Commons after his first meeting with the Dominion statesmen.

The great question that the Empire has to face is as to how Britain and the overseas possessions become inter-dependent in the economic field and in the matter of naval, military, and air defences so that the whole question of German military and industrial possibilities are inextricably interwoven into the Imperial Conference, as are also the possibilities of French competition and the complexities of the Near East.

The whole future of the British Empire seems to be at stake at the Conference.

German Collapse.

Prime Minister Baldwin was expected to confer with Foreign Curzon to-day regarding what British statesmen considered as the imminent collapse of Germany.

It was declared, however, that the latest secret German proposals for the abandonment of the passive resistance in the Ruhr on the condition that German citizens expelled and arrested be allowed to return to their homes, does not apply directly to Great Britain, since it was submitted through the Belgian Minister in Berlin.

Great Britain, however, is following the situation closely, and understands Chancellor Stresemann's proposals have been submitted officially to both Premiers Theunis and Poincare.

Premier Baldwin was silent on the subject of his conversations with Premier Poincare in Paris that well-informed persons believed that the new German proposals may have been considered by the two Premiers and were not nearly so sanguine as the French about the truth of reports widely printed in Paris that Baldwin and Poincare had reached a basis for agreement.

Great Britain expects "anything to happen" in Germany when Stresemann finally is forced to announce publicly its complete capitulation to the French.

Some surprise was expressed at the French Foreign Office to-day over the unfavourable comment from a considerable portion of the British press regarding this week's friendly meeting between Premier Baldwin and Premier Poincare.

The development of any prolonged controversy in the press of the two countries is deprecated by the Quay D'Orsay, which points to the extreme cordiality of the interview and of the official communique issued at the end of the meeting, which is understood to have been written in English by Sir William Tyrrell, Premier Baldwin's right hand man, Mr. Baldwin giving the document his approval.

Municipal officials and industrial and labor leaders from all sections of the occupied areas also will be present at a meeting.

The situation in the Ruhr and the Rhineland will be canvassed carefully both with respect to its economic and political and its social aspects.

The Chancellor is desirous of having the head of allied German States come into personal touch with representatives from occupied regions and has adopted this method of bringing them together. Despite recurring denials emanating from Paris and Brussels, political circles in Berlin profess knowledge that the Belgian Minister here has been actively seeking to establish the point of contact between Chancellor Stressemann and Premier Poincare for the purpose of inducing the latter to accommodate the Chancellor with concessions that will enable Dr. Stressemann to call off passive resistance in return for the amnesty for all Germans deported from the occupied areas by Allied authorities.

WITH NO NEW YORK PAPERS FEMALE SHOPPERS SCARCE

Big Department Stores Deserted as a Result of Customary Advertising Space Not Being Available in Morning Papers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. — A dearth of woman shoppers at the height of the bargain season is laid to the fact that New York is without newspapers, because of a strike of pressmen.

A visit to the larger department stores found them deserted in comparison to their usual rush.

Clerks Are Bored.

"The slump in shopping is caused by our inability to advertise in the newspapers," asserted the executive of one of the largest department stores. "The first day of the strike, business was not so bad—the impetus of the previous 'day's advertising carried us over."

Clerks in the stores are ready and anxious to serve customers —to break the monotony of idleness.

"We're like a lot of ornaments," said one sales girl. "Usually we have to have a guard around us to keep anxious and impatient customers from mobbing us for service—but not so now. Don't tell me this newspaper strike will last long—we work on commission, and it's the newspapers that bring the people to the store."

She characterized the sentiment of the numerous clerks interviewed.

Can't Find Bargains.

In the basement of one store where general merchandise sold at sale prices was a shawl-clad woman, wrinkled with the age of years. She was questioned. "You know," she confided, "when all the ads. are published I can look for the cheapest prices of the articles I want. Now I have to search from store to store for the bargains that are so necessary."

One large store has broken an ancient rule and filled its great show windows with signs inviting the passersby within. At the door the customer is met with special "sale cards" and page newspaper ads—prepared by the newspapers, but printed in job shops. "This is the ad. we would have published were it possible," a legend at the top of the sheet reads.

THE RHUR SITUATION IS GETTING SERIOUS ACCORDING GERMANS

Germans Are Getting Tired of the Situation and a Final Crash Is In Prospect.

COMMUNISTS ACTIVE

BERLIN, September 22. United Press. — The situation in the Ruhr is becoming constantly worse according to information here to-day. Some officials even predict a nation-wide outburst inside of a month, unless the Ruhr problem is liquidated in the near future. To-day's situation in Germany resembled that of 1918 when Germany's armies admittedly had fought many months too long.

Conservative Germans feared the Ruhr war also has been overfought by at least four months. They saw the demand of Premier Poincare of France for Germany's "complete and public capitulation" as the only exit for the government, unless it wishes to face a revolution similar to that which succeeded the armistice in 1918.

On everyside there are indications that the internal situation is plunging toward a final crash.

Discharged workmen in the Berlin factories are threatening to prevent by force their colleagues from working and thereby so injuring the factories that owners would be forced to suspend further alleged artificial closings.

Already thirty per cent. of the workers, largely trained metallurgists, have been discharged in Berlin, while clerical forces will be discharged completely beginning in October. The same situation applies in varying degrees throughout the nation, while the prospect of increasing unemployment probably will cause outbreaks similar to those of last week in Baden and Upper Silesia.

Efforts to guarantee the workers a stable wage have been futile because of the continued tobogganing of the mark. Although theoretically the workers are obtaining now more than their pre-war wages,many of them are working for the equivalent of a dollar a week and being told to accecpt it or quit.

Communists were utilizing this situation to stir up new troubles, preaching violence against the police, overthrow of the government and the erection of a Soviet-like regime.

Chancellor Stressman has summoned Premiers of the federated States of Germany for a conference on the Ruhr situation, it was learned to-day. The conference was asked to take place on Tuesday. It is looked upon in political circles as presaging early action on the issue of abandoning passive resistance.

AUTO RAMMED BY STREET CAR

Mr. and Mrs. J.N. Sargent in Hospital, Suffering from Injuries—The Car Wrecked.

John M. Sargent and his wife are in hospital to-day, suffering from injuries received at 3 o'clock yesterday evening when the car in which they were driving was rammed by street car 30 at the corner of McDonnel and George Streets.

The street car was proceeding south on George Street, when Mr. Sargent came east on McDonnel, driving his almost new automobile No. 184-695. S. Pogue was the motorman on the street car and R. Sanderson the conductor. It is said that the impact threw the motorman to the floor of the car, but that he recovered and stopped the street car in twice its length.

The victims, who were on their way to St. Paul's Church to join in Dr. Campbell Morgan's service there, sustained injuries to their heads, but Dr. J. A. Morgan, who was called to the accident, could not make a definite statement as to their condition. Mr. Sargent, it is believed, was the greater sufferer, having several ugly gashes on his face and head. The car was wrecked.

DUTIES OF PARENTS TO THEIR CHILDREN

The duties of parents to children was the subject of the discourse delivered by Rev. J. McPhail, C.S.S.R., at the Church of the Sacred Heart last evening, in connection with the Redemptionist Mission now being conducted in the south end church.

Father McPhail spoke of the difference between natural and supernatural love, of the force of example in the home, and of the necessity of maintaining discipline and enforcing obedience from children toward their parents. He said that a baby in arms was quite cognizant of the easiest way to get round a mother and circumvent her wishes, and parents should take this into account and see that their desires were carried out by their children.

Peace and harmony should also be a part of every houshold's daily round. Quarrelling among children was deplored. The reverend speaker also alluded to the habit of parents allowing the teacher to take responsibility for everything, sometimes even sending their boys and girls to school without having taught them simple prayers.

NORMAL SCHOOL OPENING.

The Normal School here opens on Tuesday next, September 25th. The number on the roll for the ensuing year is not yet available as many do not signify their attention of attending until the opening day.

TRANSPORT MEN CLAIM STRIKE WAS EFFECTIVE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—(Canadian Press). — The Marine Transport Workers' Branch of the I.W.W. has called the strike effective last month on the Great Lakes, and say similar strikes are in effect or will be called in the gulf and seaboard ports, for the release of war prisoners and other demands, according to local officials.

Local steamship officials said no strike was in effect to their knowledge.

FORMER RUSSIAN ARMY OFFICERS NOW LABORERS.

ELLENSBURG, Wash., Sept. 22. —Sixteen highly educated Russians —lawyers, doctors, and army officers under the Czar's regime—are among 45 laborers at Upham, near here.

One of the laborers is a count. Several were officers under Gen. Kolchak. From Siberia they moved to China, later to the Philippines and then to the United States.

OBSERVATIONS FROM GATEMAN AT EXHIBITION

Says Everything Was Splendid Excepting the Weather, and Fair Grander Than Ever.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS

(By F. H. Dobbin).

If the weather could be dealt out to us in routine, much as the picture show attractions are apportioned, then the Directors of the Peterborough Central Exhibition could pick good and fine days. That the unfavorable weather was a deterrent as to attendance, we are sure. All else was fine. Greater and grander than ever. It is simply marvellous the public spirit and intensity of work that a handful of men throw into this enterprise. And all from a feeling of loyalty to the city and district, and the persistence that makes for success and a determination each, to hold up his end. This old world would stop in its public activities if it were not for the unpaid services of men who work, contribute, think and ponder, all for the public good and welfare. The Fair is now an Institution. It should expand, and will, if both city and individuals come to its assistance and catch hold and lift.

Things have been written, in relation to the doings at and of the Fair, but the intimate happenings are passed bye, dwarfed in the larger objects and aim of the institution. The attendants at the entrance gates have little time for observation. Their cares are to get the crowd safely into the grounds and also get its money. But the man at the Grand Stand gate has more time for observation, as his care comes by fits and starts. He gets a fair view of human nature as the hundreds file past. Each one seems natural, engrossed in the thought to get in, get a good place and preferably under cover. For the open area of the stand is not esteemed if the weather is bestowing or promising rain.

The man at the Gate has an approving eye for all who come to the stand entrance and exhibit, while waiting the length of the approach, signs that they are going in and have the coin to pay entrance fees. Specially welcome, and easily identified is the man who begins to feel in his pockets (pants pockets preferred), when within fifty feet of the entrance. And if he has with him his womankind he is esteemed beyond the one seeking single admission. Strips of tickets of four, six and even eight, showed that while the citizen was set back in his resources from one to two dollars, he knew he was doing a gracious and appreciated act, and ushered his party to the gate with conscious pride in his demeanor. It is a tangible testimony of the loyalty to the Fair in the many women who came, carrying children. Good hearty and weighty kids, not to be left at home and an infinite care when present. With a couple of others to strive with and keep quiet. No mere man would undertake the chore, not on his valuable life. And then the younger man, ushering along maidens of attractive personality, indicating in some subtle way the rights of possession and a prospect of engagement rings, marriage licenses and bridal bouquets of the near future. It takes the Fair to show the public what is going on.

Suggestions! Well, yes. The definite opinion of very many is that about $15,000 should be spent in arranging all sorts of things and conveniences. Nearly all are heedless of the fact that once a year each may contribute twenty-five or fifty cents to the general upkeep, even if all the cash taken in at the stand was spent on its betterment, which cannot be the case. Some day, when in funds the balance of the stand may be covered, but the pressing need for additional buildings and a host of really necessary things will, as they should, have preference. The Directors have accomplished wonders, both in economy and in judicious expenditure. Have had to live within the income, which is never assured as coming. The covered part of the stand seats about 600. What is really needed, and some day may come, that the stand be doubled in capacity, and a ten-cent admission fee charged. That would be fine and please the public mightily. With the performance shifted to the east, all would have excellent view.

On Friday (the brightest day of the Fair, bright weather), at half past eleven o'clock, there was one solitary car parked opposite the grand stand, in the accredited parking area. Two hours after there were 187 cars in ranks of three deep. With many additions during the afternoon. About a quarter million of dollars in wheeled vehicles, taking an average of $1200 each. The whole county seemed to be on wheels. Now this problem of convenient parking is growing. The orderly arranged lines of cars look fine, and, what is additional, prosperous. It is not the placing that perplexes, but the extracting of a car from the mass that bothers. The Directors, who have with infinite patience and good judgment, handled many problems of the Fair, will presently devise a scheme to govern this detail.

But the parking problem is not confined to the motors. Not by a jugful. Others have claims. We all know that the Fair has growing pains, and so much is needed in promotion and betterment and enterprise and so few sources from which to draw substantial support, that one is diffident in suggestion. In fact nearly everything that is proposed seems to have been considered by the Directors and, perhaps, laid aside on account of immediate cost. But there is one detail that might have attention next year, and the expense only moderate. It concerns the matter of baby carriages, at and about the grand stand. For, like the poor, we have these vehicles with us all the time.

POSSIBLE WAR STILL CLOUDS BALKAN ISSUE

Italy and Jugo Slavia Have Not Made Up Their Minds To Be Good Boys.

DIPLOMATS BUSY

LONDON, Sept. 22.—(United Press).—Rumors of a possible Balkan war continued here today as the long drawn out negotiations between Italy and Jugo Slavia for settlement of the question of Fiume failed to reach an agreement.

The new Italian dictator of Fiume General Giardino, intends to depart from Rome Sunday to make a personal report to Premier Mussolini on the situation, the Fiume correspondent of the Daily Express telegraphed.

The string of decrees pouring from the Governor's Palace show unmistakably that Rome is determined to remain in Fiume, trade or no trade, thus ensuring security of the position of Trieste as the principal port of the Adriatic, the correspondent said.

One decree provides for the constitution of a new government council which will act in a purely advisory capacity, under "express regulations."

Jugo Slavia views the whole situation with bitter suspicion the Serbs envisage an attempt to exclude them while allowing importation of Italians in today's decrees entry into Fiume of anyone, who has not lived in the Fiumean state for at least one year.

Bulgarian Legation said it had received word that Sofia government had taken steps in order to prevent spread of insurrectionary agitation.

Legation announced that it had received an absolute denial of reports circulated abroad to effect that provincial revolutionary government had been proclaimed in some parts of country.

SMITH TOWNSHIP FOX RANCH READY

Animals Will Arrive Some Time Next Month and Public Will Be Excluded.

Fox ranching which is about to start on a large scale in this district is an interesting occupation, to judge by the preparations being made near Chemong. The runs and pens are now in place and construction is going forward on the other ranch buildings, and the site will prove interesting to anyone who inspects it.

From the rustic entrance to the burying of the wire fences which necessitated the digging of 3,200 running feet of trench, the ranch has many interesting features which well repay a visit.

After the arrival of the foxes on October 2, no visitors will be admitted, the rules being very strict and the animals requiring careful guarding. Forty pairs will be installed, valued at about $1000 a pair.

BAD TIMES IN GLASGOW.

Shipbuilding never so Slack—Many Thousands Unemployed.

OTTAWA, September 22.—Very serious conditions existing at the present time in Glasgow are emphasized by Canadian Trade Commissioner G. G. Johnson at that point, writing to the department of Trade and Commerce. Perhaps never in the history of shipbuilding on the Clyde, he remarks, has such a lean period been experienced. The gross tonnage launched during August was 1865, as compared with 53,123 tons in August, 1922.

There are at present 75,000 unemployed in Glasgow, the Trade Commissioner reports, which means that some 200,000 people in the city are directly affected.

BIBLE STUDY

As a result of Dr. Campbell Morgan's masterly address on "How to Study the Bible" there will be aroused a renewed desire, on the part of a great number to study the Book of Books with renewed and keener interest. In order to assist those who feel sure a desire The Young Men's Christian Association will arrange classes in Bible Study for young men and all interested are asked to get in touch with the General Secretary. These classes will be open to young men whether members of the Association or not.

KU KLUX KLAN INITIATION HELD IN THE WHITE HOUSE

Dining Room of U.S. President's Official Home Scene of Ceremony, Declares Rev. Basil Newton of Oklahoma—Assertion Denied.

CHARLESTON, W.Va., September 22 (Special to The Examiner). — That the Ku Klux Klan held an initiation in the dining-room of the White House was the statement of the Rev. Basil Newton, of Oklahoma, representing the Klan Imperial Council, in an address to a large audience of Klansmen and others at Hurricane, last night, during the Klan celebration of the opening of the Charleston-Huntington Road.

"We have 227 members in the House of Representatives and 27 in the United States Senate," the speaker said. "And we had one initiation in the dining-room of the White House. You know what that means."

"He forgot to mention five members of the Harding Cabinet," Dr. V. T. Churchman, of Charleston, head of the Klan organisation in that section whispered to newspaper men beside him.

TOO RIDICULOUS TO DISCUSS.

At Washington, the above statement of Rev. Basil Newton was declared by White House officials to be "too ridiculous to discuss."

THE FARMERS MARKET HAD A BIG VARIETY OF VAUDEVILLE TO-DAY

TO-DAY'S PRICES

The farmers' market was a busy centre this morning. Anything and everything in the vegetable and fruit line appeared to be available, and there were novelties in the line of "nice fresh catfish" at 10 cents a pound, a little Scotch collie pup that attracted a great deal of fond attention and could be had for $5, and a quantity of elderberries for elderberry wine, selling for 10 cents a quart.

There were bunches of sage and summer savory, tiny little red and green peppers at 15 cents a dozen, and large ones at 5 cents apiece, kohl rabi,—tight, little knotty green specimens at a nickel apiece—that is said to taste something like a white turnip when cooked, and there were pigs in pokes. A callous buyer shoved the wriggling, squealing small things down into gunny sacks, where they writhed visibly.

Apples were everywhere, in prices ranging from 75 to 30 cents a peck, in every color. A red apple that looked like an Alexandra was 40 cents a peck, Tolman Sweets were 30 cents, McIntosh Reds 50 cents, Wolf River 50 cents also, and Wealthies were $5 per barrel, for the No. 1's. Firm-looking Greenings were the same price, and Wealthies in No. 3 category were $4.25 for a barrel. The green Culvert apple was selling for 50 cents a peck, and Yellow Transparents were 40 cents. The little boy who asked for a yellow apple was told to help himself to one by a generous owner, and the fruit dealer who likes to express himself in rhyme remarked, as he presented an enquirer with blue plums, "Taste and try. No harm if you don't buy."

Grapes in purple and green and red, with the touch of dew on their firm, round globes, were 50 cents a large measure. A small basket farther on brought the same price.

Potatoes were plentiful also, and of splendid variety. The price for a mealy-looking sort called the Hebron Beauty was $2.25 a bag, while the Sir Walter Raleigh was $2.

Red tomatoes were 60 cents for an 11-quart basket, and green were 40 cents.

Peaches at the fruit stand were 70 and 85 cents and 90 cents to $1.15 in six and eleven-quart basket sizes and qualities. Plums were 55 cents, and grapes 60 cents in the large containers.

Little White Leghorns in a crate were selling for 50 cents apiece, and White Wyandotte pullets were $1.25.

Corn in small quantities was selling for 15 cents a dozen for the little Bantam, 25 and 30 cents for Stone's Evergreen with white kernels, and 30 cents for the Black Mexican that has nothing black about it.

Large bunches of beets and carrots were a nickel apiece, small white onions were $1 a basket, watermelons, with a brisk sale, were 20 cents apiece and nutmeg canteloupes were 10, 15 and 20 cents.

There was a good deal of honey on the market, selling in five-pound pails at one section for 50 and 75 cents, pure and mixed, at another for 75 and 80 cents, with small jars of pure clover at 35 cents and comb honey at 30 cents.

Upstairs, butter was fairly plentiful, but there was a famine in eggs. The temperamental tendencies of the farmyard queen, whose fashion edict prescribes a change of feather adornment at this time of the year, prevent the usual supply. When Biddy is moulting, she doesn't care about working too hard, and consequently eggs are scarce. The visible supply sold for 40 cents a dozen, and butter dropped a couple of cents from its opening price of 40 cents.

Fowl was present in large quantities. Chickens ranged in price from 20 to 35 cents a pound, and hens were 25 cents. The warm weather of this morning brought back the flies that were supposed to be laid away in peace until another summer, and the ladies were provided with paper fans to protect their products.

Big, comet asters were 25 cents a dozen, and bunches of smaller ones could be had upstairs for 10 cents. Red, blazing zinnias were selling for two bunches for a quarter, and there were red geraniums in flat bouquets.

A Quit Claim To Rink St. Property Not George Street

The by-law passed by the City Council Thursday night authorized a quit claim to the property on Rink Street, on which the former candy factory stands (part of the old shovel factory), and not to the property on George Street, where former chicle factory stands, as reported by mistake.

The George Street property is owned by the Western Clock Co., Ltd., of this city.

RECOVER BODY THIS MORNING

Victim of Drowning In Stoney Lake Lost Her Balance In Skiff - Another In Bethany.

The body of Thelma Cassan, who was drowned in Stoney Lake yesterday, was recovered by Mr. Brown this morning, according to a report received by the Peterboro Police Force.

Sergeant James Reid and County Constable S. R. Pearson grappled in the locality from 4 o'clock yesterday evening until dark, without result, and the search was continued this morning.

Further information to-day is to the effect that Mrs. R. D. Brown who employed the drowned girl as maid, was an eye-witness of the tragedy. Miss Cassan was in a skiff, picking moss from the rocks, when she lost her balance, and fell into the water. Mrs. Brown, who was 400 or 500 yards away, rushed to the spot in a skiff with her little boy, but the unfortunate young lady had disappeared.

Mrs. Cassan, mother of the drowned girl, lives in Bethany, and Miss Cassan, who was 20 years of age, had been employed as maid at the summer cottage occupied by Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Brown.

GRAIN LOADING BREAKS RECORDS

High Marks of Last Year Are Surpassed.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The year 1922 was a record one for grain loadings and markets on the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways, but the shipments to date exceed those of the corresponding period last year, and amply justify the reports of a record year in Western Canadian grain production. On Thursday there were 5,874,543 bushels of grain marketed and 2,716 cars loaded in the Prairie Provinces, as compared with 5,502,997 bushels marketed and 2,560 loaded on the corresponding day of 1922. The Canadian National Railway loaded 1,288 cars and marketed 2,614,000 bushels, while marketing on the Canadian Pacific totalled 3,260,533 bushels of all grains.

With the completion of harvesting operations in many Western districts, farm workers are returning to their homes in the east, 1,000 having left this city since Sept. 7.

WHAT SHALL I DO WITH JESUS CALLED CHRIST

Subject of Concluding Sermon by the Rev. Dr. Morgan Last Evening Thoughtfully Discussed

CHURCH CROWDED

The words of Pilate; "What shall I do with Jesus that is called Christ" formed the text of the concluding sermon in the series delivered this week by Rev. Dr. Morgan, speaking in George street Methodist church last evening before an audience that once more packed the building to the doors and left many to stand within the edifice itself and at its doors.

"These words form the climacteric question of the Gospel according to Matthew," said Dr. Morgan, referring to the small events in history which have had far-reaching consequences. The Galilean peasant standing before the Roman procurator, representative of that "damnable empire that sat upon the seven hills," in the era of the Pax Romana, "a peace more deadly than war," when the hegemony established by the empire resulted in a condition that frowned on freedom of any sort, was confronted by a threefold antagonism in the forces of government, religion and democracy. It was not Christ who stood arraigned before His judges but the human soul that waited at the bar. Jesus was not the prisoner, but the judge.

Principle or Passion

Government, represented by Pilate, had to choose between justice and policy, religion, represented by the priests of the Jewish dispensation had to choose between truth and tradition and democracy, represented by the mob that demanded the blood of Christ had to choose between convenience and conscience. "And I don't think that these alternatives, as created cause any shuddering, even in the souls of you people. That is what is the matter with us. We are shocked by a vulgar manifestation but not by the spiritual manifestaton that lies behind it. When a man is murdered, we are shocked by the crime. God does not shudder when a man is murdered as much as He shudders at the spectacle of a human heart filled with the wish to murder a fellow-human, if that heart could summon up the pluck to do it."

Pilate harassed by the Jewish priests, threatening complaint to Rome if he refused to do their will, chose to violate justice and keep the peace. The priests, whose hide-bound, man-made traditions of religion had been outraged by Jesus throughout His entire ministry, chose tradition and prejudice and submerged the clear light of truth. The mob allowed passion to sweep away all vestiges of principle and Pilate sacrificed his conscience to his own convenience.

"And what happened" Pilate, despite his complaisance towards the priests, was shortly afterward deposed from his position and tradition says that he committed suicide. He sacrificed conscience to convenience, and convenience blasted him. The religion of the priests was smashed that day, and democracy lived to see the Roman eagle sweep down upon them, and bring to them what they had wished; the blood of that innocent man upon their own heads.

The Old Story

"That is the old story, but it is as fresh and as patent and as pertinent to-day as it was then. What shall we do with Jesus that is called Christ It is the one test question for religion, democracy, government and the human soul. It is the only question worth discussing.

Canada Goes to the Conference Without a Single Grievance

KING DEFENDS GOVERNMENT IN QUEBEC SPEECH

Premier Attributed Major Problems to War or the Previous Administration.

BALEFUL CAMPAIGN.

QUEBEC, September 22. — Canadian Press. — In a farewell address delivered at a dinner tendered him by Hon. Ernest Lapointe at the Garrison Club last night just previous to his embarkation for London where he will attend the Imperial conference Right Hon. Mackenzie King vigorously defended the record of the Federal government, and replied to criticism which had been levied at his administration by Opposition critics with particular reference to financial, immigration and railway policy.

The Premier touched but briefly upon the forthcoming Imperial conference giving as reasons for his reticence in this connection that he preferred to wait until the other prime ministers were assembled before expressing views upon the agenda, and that Canada did not desire any change in her constitutional relations with Great Britain or the other dominions.

Relations are of Best.

"It is my privilege to go to the conference in the name of the people of Canada without a single grievance," said the Premier, "and to say that our relations with Britain and all parts of the empire are of the best."

In defending the policy of the administration, the Premier claimed that the leader of the opposition, and a section of the opposition press had been carrying on an organized campaign to discredit Canada. He referred directly several times to articles which have appeared in the Montreal Star under the caption the "Whisper of Death," and declared that the object of the campaign was political and the consequences unfortunate.

"I would not say," said the Premier, "that the synchronizing of the campaign with my visit to England to attend the conference was an evidence that it had been intended as an occasion of embarrassment to me while representing the interests of Canada in the Old Country, but such will undoubtedly be its effect."

Burden Inherited.

Premier King felt that there are three themes in particular which the Montreal newspapers and Mr. Meighen stressed in common, viz., the finances of the country, the national railways and immigration. He entered into an analysis of the financial situation confronting Canada, discussed the government's railway administration and its immigration policy in replying to his critics, he admitted that Canada's burden was large, but claimed that two-thirds of the cost of government to-day either arose out of the war or was attributable to the previous government's marine and railway policy. The Premier expressed the belief that Canada's revenue and expenditure will be made to balance this year for the first time since 1913.

FUTURE TRADING TAX IS RESENTED

Manitoba's Levy on Saskatchewan Products Is Disputed.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 22. — Contending that the Manitoba government has no right to collect taxes on the produce of Saskatchewan, an application for the disallowance of the tax levied by Manitoba on future trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange has been made to federal authorities by the Saskatchewan government Hon. W. R. Craig, Provincial Attorney-General, announced today, Mr. Craig received notification to this effect from Ottawa Thursday.

Snow Blankets Renfrew Ranch

HIGH RIVER, Alta., Sept. 22.—(Canadian Press). —Enjoying the sight of a real Alberta September snowstorm, Lord Renfrew put in a quiet morning around the E. P. Ranch today. The storm held up activities on the ranch for the time being and everyone took a well-earned rest.

Lord Renfrew put in his time preparing for the trip over the week-end to Banff. The special train will leave High River with Lord Renfrew and his party at 2.30 p.m., arriving in Calgary at 3.45 p.m.

The train will stop only ten minutes there to switch over to the main line, and the distinguished visitor is not expected to leave his car, plans no reception, and will pass through Calgary as any other traveller.

EITHER TOURIST OR IMMIGRANT

Persons Entering Canada Must Declare Their Classification.

QUEBEC, Sept. 22.— A curious light was thrown on the status of the United States and other tourists in Canada in connection with the habeas corpus petition presented here to-day for the release of J. Austin Montgomery, sr., alleged to be wanted in the United States on serious charges. Caron Pratte speaking in the name of the immigration department Ottawa said that immigrants or tourists were subject to the same regulations regarding their entrance into Canada and were obliged to make declarations which qualified them as of one or the other class Failure to make such declaration rendered a tourist liable to deportation, and it was incumbent on such tourist to advise the immigration officers instead of the latter getting after the tourist for his declaration.

Asked by Mr. Justice Gibson if this did not seem that a tourist failing to make such declaration was liable to arrest atany time, Mr. Pratte stated that the Canadian immigration law was precise on the subject.

Judgement was reserved.

SISTER WANTS HER SHARE OF DELORME LOTS

Claudia Delorme Asks For Division of Estate in Accordance With Will.

CLAIMS ONE-SIXTH.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—A new development in the affairs of the family of the Rev. Father Delorme is revealed by the return to the Superior Court to-day of a writ directed by Claudia Delorme against Rosa, Florence and Lily Delorme and Adelard Tetreault, curator of the priests estate, asking that three vacant lots valued at $11,000 in the city of Verdun, be divided or sold.

Claudia Delorme in her action declares that her father, Alfred Delorme, by treatment dated May 30, 1916, gave all his property to his children to be divided equally among them, with the exception of certain special legacies. Three lots of real estate in Verdun, valued at $11,000 were not so divided. The action in the Superior Court now asks that the estate be divided or if that be not possible that it be sold. The declaration asks that the lots be divided in the proportion of one-sixth to Claudia, Ross, Florence and Lily, the remaining one-third to go to Father Delorme in virtue of the will of the late Raoul Delorme, his murdered half-brother, who gave his share in the property to the priest.

Sixth Sense

Seals hafe an odd way of making their living. Pa Seal establishes his residence on a big floating cake of ice. He drills a hole down through this ice, into the water. Every morning Pa Seal and Ma Seal go down this hole and swim off to bring food to their babies, whom they leave playing on top of the ice around the hole.

Along comes Captain Robert A. Bartlett, the explorer. He mixes up the babies of various families of seals, shifting them from one ice cake to another. But he reports that when Ma Seal returns home she detects the substitution instantly, and hustles around to the other ice fields until she finds her own babies.

That is instinct, the sixth sense.

Bartlett also learns that when the baby seals flop down through the hole in the ice and take their first swim, they have no trouble finding their way back to their own iceberg, even though it has been moving steadily with other bergs in the ocean current.

This, again, is instinct.

It's like the dogs or cats which travel phenomenal distances cross-country and find their way back home. Bees fly by a sense of direction, or instinct; move the hive a trifle and they bang into where the entrance used to be. So on, all through nature.

At some time far back in the past, man probably had the sixth sense or instinct of other animals. Lost, long ago. It survives faintly, at times, as when we are conscious that some one has turned on the street to look at us, or in the dark when we "feel" that we are about to collide with furniture we cannot see.

So-called psychic phenomena may be related to the sixth sense.

SWITZERLAND IS CENTRE OF DRUG DISTRIBUTION

A Heavy Exportation to Canada and United States Charge at League Commission Meeting.

Public Disappointed.

GENEVA, Sept. 21.—The charge that great quantities of harmful drugs are being manufactured in Switzerland and clandestinely imported to the United States and Canada caused a stir during today's discussion by the League of Nations Opium Commission which yesterday decided to recommend an international conference for the promotion of the fight against opium.

Dame Edith Lyttleton, Great Britain, expressed regret that Switzerland, which had not yet ratified the Hague narcotics convention, should be turning out drugs based on opium and morphine and smuggling them by ingenious means into Canada and the United States. Dame Lyttleton added that Swiss public opinion should be aroused and that the Swiss Government should act promptly in the premises.

Gustove Ador, former president of Switzerland, quickly protested against "these grave accusations." He insisted that Switzerland was doing everything possible in the situation and hoped to ratify the convention next year.

Embarrassing Situation

Mr. Graham the Canadian member of the commission, read documents which he declared proved that drugs were being fraudulently exported from Switzerland to both Canada and the United States. Other speakers then intervened and saved what appeared to be developing into a most embarrassing situation.

They expressed the belief that Switzerland would do what was necessity. A resolution was adopted asking the Council of the League to press Switzerland, Argentina, Columbia, Costa Rica, Latvia, Lithuania Paraguay and Cuba to sign the Hague convention.

The Irish Free State entered vigorously on the stage of League activity to-day when Marquis MacSwiney insisted that a representative of Celtic culture should be added to the permanent commission on the international cooperation, the membership of which will be increased so as to include several world culture groups. Ireland, said Marquis MacSwiney, was the natural country to represent the culture of the Celts, whose apostles had contributed so much to European civilization.

The disarmament commission of the League concluded its first reading of the proposed treaty of mutual assistance. The text of the treaty will be reported shortly to the Assembly though a number of points are still to be definitely drafted by the jurists.

Expect United States

One point submitted by the experts seems to be based on the idea that the United States one day will sign this treaty. It declares that the treaty will be considered as entering into force when it has been ratified by the United States.

The attitude of Italy toward the League of Nations having become a closed issue through the decision to turn over the entire covenant to the jurists for interpretation, there is a general feeling of relief in Geneva However, Herluf Bahle of the League Assembly's committee on finance, delivered a jolt to-day to those who were excessively optimistic about the League. He told the Assembly that there were clouds of disappointment and distrust which were darkening the League's horizon. He said the delegates wanted something accomplishd on disarmament, the private manuafacturer of arms and the institution of compulsory arbitration.

HIGH PRICES ON MILLFEEDS ARE EXPLAINED

Federal Amendment Effective October 1st Forced Revolution, Millers Say.

EARLY ADJUSTMENT.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22. (Canadian Press).—In accordance with the amendments to the Feeding Stuffs Act passed at the last session of the House of Commons and which becomes effective on October 1, 1923, the millers generally have had to readjust values for feeds in complying with the law as it now stands. The wide variation in prices during the last few weeks has been largely due to the adjustment which has been taking place.

It now appears that the new value for millfeeds will be considerably higher. This is due to the restrictions placed on the mills by the new amendment. At the present moment the spreads between bran shorts, and middlings has materially increased and millers state that they see no possibility of the spread being reduced if they are to comply with the act.

It is also announced that a great many of the well known specialty feeds which have been on the market for years will have to be discontinued. This will mean a serious shortage of feeds and a concentration of mill by-products to a few standards.

The millers generally state that the higher values for feeds are beyond their control being forced on them by the new act which has seriously interfered with the well-established practices of years of study and experience in the marketing of economical feeds which were demanded by feeders.

LAKEFIELD FAIR'S SPECIAL EXHIBIT

Work of the Blind Soldiers of Pearson Hall Will Be Shown.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 22.—An exhibit of the work of the blind soldiers of Pearson Hall, will be shown at the Lakefield Fair on Tuesday and Wednesday, and will be under the direction of the G. W. V. A. and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G. W. V. A. This will be something new and will be an added attraction to the inside exhibits.

The Fair directors and their friends (which include the entire population of the village) are hoping for a real day this year, with no rain, but warm sunshine to bring out the crowds.

Lawns Green Again

The rain which for the past couple of weeks has been of almost daily occurrence has made the lawns green again after their burnt condition in August. With the exception of the little touches of autumn coloring showing in a few trees the lawns and flowers suggest summer rather than late September.

Almost without exception the garden crops in the village are many degrees below normal, the tomato crop in particular was almost a failure. Cucumbers were even worse than tomatoes. Housewives who rely on their gardens for the chief ingredients of pickles and relishes, are heard to rejoice in the extra large store laid away last year as this year there is nothing to pickle in the gardens.

Death Swift to Trainmen

NORTH BAY, Ont., Sept. 22. — (Canadian Press). — George Ferrier, freight conductor on the T.N.O., was instantly killed about 2.30 o'clock yesterday morning when he fell between a car and the tender while walking along the top of the train at mileage 144, just north of Englehart. He is married and lives at Englehart. This is the second fatality that has occurred within a few miles of the spot within 24 hours. Only the morning before Brakeman George Quinn of North Bay was killed when he was struck by the buffer beam of a passing freight engine.

FINE WEATHER FOR FERGUSON

Reports of Snow on the Abitibi Is Scorned As "Bunkum."

NORTH BAY, Ont., Sept. 22. — W. H. Maund, secretary treasurer of the T. and N. O. stated this afternoon that he has received no official word of the government party which included Lieutenant Governor Cockshutt, Premier Ferguson and Chairman G. W. Lee of the T. and N. O. commission, since they embarked in canoe on the Abitibi River last Saturday. Reports of the party travelling over six inches of snow north of Cochrane by dog sled are characterized here as bunkum, as the fine weather of the last few days makes it probable that in stead of shivering in the cold the members of the party are more likely to be sitting on the dry ground swapping stories or taking a hand at the paddles with their coats off.

230 STUDENTS REGISTER AT NORTH BAY NORMAL

NORTH BAY, Ont., Sept. 22 —The record attendance established last year when 230 students were registered at the North Bay Normal School will be broken when the school opens next Tuesday. There is an ever increasing demand for admission due partly to the government grant and also to the declining hesitancy of teachers to comply with the conditions of teaching three years after graduation in Northern Ontario Schools.

KLAN NEARING CRUCIAL TEST IN OKLAHOMA

45 Members of Legislature Defy Governor and Call For Special Session.

Governor's Dilemma.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 2.—Events in Oklahoma to-day moved toward a showdown between Gov. J. C. Walton and some members of the State Legislature over the excutive's authority to declare martial law in his war on the Ku Klux Klan and mob floggings.

A call for an extraordinary session of the House to consider a series of charges that Gov. Walton had usurped despotic powers, and had supplanted constitutional government with a dictatorship, was issued early to-day.

The call, made public by W. D. McBee, representative from Stephens County, bore the names of 45 House members, and promised that during the day the list would grow to 54, constituting a majority of the House.

Defies Jail Threat

Mr. McBee declared that he anticipated no attempt by the Governor to carry out his threat to jail the legislators if they convened.

"The folly of attempting tocarry out his threat to arrest members has been made apparent to him. He realizes that call is legal and cannot be forestalled," Mr. McBee asserted.

At almost the moment the legislative call was promulgated Mr. Walton appealed to the people of the state, in a proclamation, to repudiate the attempt of the lawmakers to assemble, charging that those legislators sponsoring the movement are "Klan members," inspired by the "in visible empire" and aided by the "Klan press."

It was asserted by Mr. McBee that the governor, in conjunction with Murray F. Gibbons, speaker of the house was contemplating the issuing of a call for a special session "in a last desperate effort with the hope that some of the boys might be won over to his cause, by a show of desire to remedy a situation that he has created." McBee released the call drawn by house members, he explained, "to beat the governor to it."

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1923.

A VALUABLE INDUSTRY.

The request of the Canadian Woollens, Limited, for a fixed assessment upon their property here will shortly engage the attention of the Council, and in view of similar concessions that have been granted other manufacturing establishments, will probably be favourably received by the city fathers and endorsed by the ratepayers.

Although the last year or two have not been particularly rosy from the viewpoint of the woollen and knit goods manufacturers, the Canadian Woollens plants here have given employment to a large number of citizens and their pay-roll has been a heavy one.

Altogether the company employs 550 people in Peterborough, and its pay-roll this year amounts to $450,000.

The two plants are a distinct asset to the city, and the value of the industry in view of the general conditions might well be recognized by the granting of the concession now asked for.

Citizens generally have shown themselves willing to assist local industries which have proved of civic value, and there is no reason to imagine that they would put the Canadian Woollens, Limited, upon any other footing than other concerns that have been helped in this way.

THE NEW LOAN.

The new issue of bonds announced by the Minister of Commerce to repay the five-year bonds issued in 1918 will be quickly snapped up by the Canadian people.

That is one good result of the war. People have learned to appreciate the value of Government securities, and bond dealers who a decade ago would have had considerable trouble in disposing of a much smaller quantity of Government bonds than the present issue represents have a much simpler proposition.

The Victory Loans educated the people of this country to the fact that a Canadian Government bond is a reliable and a valuable investment.

Mr. Fielding is offering a loan of $50,000,000, which will be increased latter on to $172,000,000, the amount of the war loan which falls due this year. This loan is taxable, and as it will be used to pay off a non-taxable issue, the Government is ahead on the transaction, while at the same time will profit by a smaller interest charge.

It is expected that the whole loan will be absorbed in Canada, as the majority of people who now hold 1923 bonds, it is thought, will be found anxious to invest their money safely for a longer period.

The manner in which this offer will be received will prove the financial strength of Canada and show the world that there is little justification for any "whispers of death" in Canada.

STOP THE PILFERING.

The visit of a number of officials of the sanitary district of Chicago, intended to facilitate negotiations looking toward an adjustment of the difficulties in which Chicago finds itself by reason of its illegal diversion of water from the Great Lakes system to the Mississippi River, should bring this matter forcibly to the attention of the people of this Province.

How badly we are hit by this diversion of water is shown by the fact that it represents a loss of $35,000,000 a year in water power.

The suggestions made by the Chicago sanitary district, no matter how plausible they may seem, are detrimental to the water-power resources of Ontario, and it is time that the danger of the situation was realized and steps taken to have an immediate adjustment with the United States arranged.

Every municipality interested in the Hydro-electric scheme should see to it that its representative at Ottawa presses for action by the Federal Government.

To remain silent and allow the sanitary district of Chicago to illegally divert an enormous quantity of water from the Great Lakes at the expense of the people of this Province would be folly.

Ontario owns the surplus waters flowing in boundary waters, including the St. Lawrence River, so that the loss in water power occasioned by Chicago's action laffs directly upon the Province.

Ottawa must act firmly and without delay.

"O CANADA."

The Canadian Clubs of Canada at their convention authorized an effort to procure a standard set of words for "O Canada."

There is no argument over the question of the necessity of such a standardization.

Unfortunately, though, if the Examiner's memory is sound, two or three other Canadian bodies have been at work on the same problem.

The result promises to be two or three "standard" versions and no improvement over the present condition of affairs when any attempt to sing "O Canada" in public produces half a dozen different wordings, and from the great majority of the audience no words at all.

"O Canada" has its enemies—witness the Toronto Telegram, which declares that "all the cooks of Canadian versification cannot broil, boil, bake, stew or otherwise prepare words that will breathe the life of Canadian nationality and British unity into the dry bones of "O Canada"—but its use as a national anthem is becoming steadily more general.

Under the circumstances then a uniform version should be adopted.

But it cannot be secured if half a dozen different organizations set themselves the task of arranging a standard edition.

The job should be turned over to one body, and then perhaps the effort would get somewhere.

GOOD NEIGHBORS AND BOOTLEGGERS.

We sincerely hope that the postponement of the proposed conference between the United States and Canadian Governments looking to co-operation against illegal entrance of liquor from Canada into the United States does not mean indefinite delay, says the Ottawa Journal. The conference should be held as soon as possible. It should be held as soon as possible because the existing situation reflects no credit upon either Canada or the United States.

In so far as Canada is concerned, the position is simply this: that although in most Provinces we have made it a crime for Canadian citizens to sell liquor to Canadians, we blandly acquiesce in Canadian citizens selling liquor to our neighbors. This would be immoral enough, or hypocritical enough, were these neighbors, or the majority of them, anxious to buy our liquor. But when, as is clear, we permit our people to add to a dubious traffic the wrong of helping a lawless minority to break the laws of a friendly neighbor, our position becomes indubitably immoral.

The late President Harding, in his last and most memorable address, spoke of Canada as a "good neighbor;" and we feelingly cheered his words. Well, a good neighbor does not permit—if he can help it—the black sheep in his family to help debauch or corrupt the members of the family of his friend. On the contrary, he does everything in his power to prevent such a wrong.

Canada's obligation is simply the obligation of a good neighbor. Technically, it is not our task to help enforce the laws of the United States. Morally, ethically, from the standpoint of being a good neighbor, from the standpoint of maintaining those friendly relations which stand as one of our greatest contributions toward world peace, it is our duty to help destroy such a reprehensible trade. To argue otherwise is to add folly to the sin of Pharisaism and hypocrisy.

LABOR VINDICATES ITSELF.

The Cape Breton coal strike which was to be the precursor of a brilliant display of Communistic pyrotechnics if certain radical agitators had achieved their object, but which spluttered out until only the charred stick of broken hopes remained has been discussed once more at the Trades and Labor Congress at Vancouver. It is a far cry from the Sydney area to the Pacific Coast, but with J. B. MacLachlan, chief organizer of the outlaw strike on hand, there was bound to be a re-echo of the Nova Scotia disorders.

J. B. MacLachlan was deposed as secretary of the local of the United Mine Workers when he defied the authority of the International headquarters and encouraged sedition within the ranks of the U. M. A., and it is difficult to understand on what authority he appeared before the convention of organized Labor and was allowed a hearing.

Yet it is fortunate on several counts that this arch-agitator was allowed even a brief hearing at the annual congress; for the reception he got ought to have convinced him even against his will that Labor stands by constitutionalism and law and order and has neither sympathy with nor attraction for the disturbers who care not a whit for the organization of which they are sworn members if they can serve their own selfish and disintegrating ends.

J. B. MacLachlan has been an enemy of society—as it is at present constituted—for years past. Speaking at Sydney eighteen months ago he declared with a smug satisfaction:

"They say MacLachlan has not much respect for the law."

"You bet I haven't," and his lean and flashy rhetoric was cheered by the laughter and applause of the red element among the miners. MacLachlan has been preaching his extremist doctrines since May, 1920, holding up Lenin and Trotzky as the idols of Labor and sowing discontent and contempt for authority of all kinds in the unstable minds of the weaker members of those who will listen to him. At that time he urged the men to reduce their output by fifty per cent., while the attempt of the foreigners who invaded the Drumheller field under the guise of the One Big Union, financed by mysterious and suspicious funds, to gain control of the duly authorized unions in the Alberta field, had the support and the sympathy of MacLachlan.

MacLachlan failed to foment the strike which was to spread from Cape Breton to Nanaimo, was arrested on a charge of publishing false statements, and was deposed as secretary of the "local" by Mr. Lewis. This action on the part of the international authorities Mr. MacLachlan challenged by appearing at Vancouver. The rules of debate seemed to have been stretched with a generous tolerance until the discussion was closed by the chairman on the grounds that the resolution proposed in support of MacLachlan was wholly out of order. Even then the authority of the chairman was challenged by one of the extremists, but this attempt was overwhelmingly defeated.

So Mr. MacLachlan has received one more lesson that his way of stirring up class hatred is not to Canada's liking, that his methods may pass muster in Bolshevist Russia, although even there they are apparently fast being discredited, but they will not do here. Mr. MacLachlan some months ago repudiated the Lemieux Act, which was that measure's finest testimonial. Now he wants the case of his abortive little revolution in the Cape Breton area discussed three thousand miles away from the scene of action in order to justify his incitement to lawlessness and to wreak his petty vengeance on those who spanked him and put him in his place.

Organized labor has repudiated him through its officers and now it puts him in his place by the overwhelming vote of the delegates. Labor goes on record once more on the side of order and decency against anarchy and Bolshevism.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Red Cross campaign on behalf of the Japanese earthquake victims should be actively supported.

The announcement of the increase in the price of coal at the mines will occasion no surprise. The public always knew who would have to pay.

The Toronto Telegram proves by its references to Hon. Mr. Nickle that it did not exhaust all its vocabulary in attacking his predecessor.

Peterborough's paving programme is beginning to assume progressive proportions. We still, however, have a long way to go before we catch up to some of our rivals.

About the only thing that has been discovered at the inquiry into the escape of the Kingston convicts is that the men got out—and four of them are still out.

Perhaps Hon. G. H. Ferguson took that Hudson Bay trip to get away from people who wanted to ask him what he intended to do with the Ontario Temperance Act.

TORONTO CATTLE.

TORONTO, September 22.—The market opened on Monday with a heavy run of over 5,000 cattle offering. This number was increased in the following markets to a total for the week of well-over 7,000 cattle, or more than 2,000 over the total for the previous week. Notwithstanding the heavier offerings, the market this week not only held but has slightly gained over the price advances made in the previous week. Demands this week have been quite active in practically all the cattle grades.

In the butcher section the demand has been keen and active all through the week, especially for handy weight fine quality butcher stuff. Prices closed strong at $6.85 to $7.25 for choice butcher steers, and $6.50 to $7.00 for good butcher loads steers and heifers, excepting the heavy steers class. While there was a limited export demand, it was not active enough to advance prices in this section over last week, the market holding just about steady for export cattle at from $7.00 to $7.75, with an odd steer or two at $8.00.

There was quite a sharp advance for fat cows, due to the extra demand for the Jewish festival trade. Extra choice heavy cows sold up to $6.00 to $6.25 for this special trade. The general run of fat cows were firm around $5.00 to $5.25. Good fat cows, $4.50 to $5.00.

A few fat bulls were in demand early in the week, around $4.25 to $4.50, but generally the bull market is a little weak.

There is a good inquiry for quality stockers and feeders. Supplies in this section have fallen off this week, owing chiefly to the present strength of the Winnipeg market. The telegram received yesterday from Winnipeg by the H. P. Kennedy Company intimated that few Western stocker cattle would be coming this way for the next week or two, in view of the fact that returns from shipments to St. Paul and other middle states markets over the border showed half a dollar higher than from the Toronto market. Some cattle might come through on definite orders, but more on speculation.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, September 22 (Canadian Press). — Reports that Argentine was under-selling Canada had a bearish effect yesterday on the wheat market here. Closing prices were weak, 1-2c to 1 1-8c net lower, with December $1.02 3-4 to $1.02 3-4 to 7-8, and May $1.08 1-4 to $1.08 3-8.

Corn finished at a range varying from 3-8c decline to 1c advance; oats at 1-8c off to 1-8c up, and provisions 7c lower to a gain of 5c.

With Liverpool quotations lower than had been looked for the wheat market here showed a downward tendency at the opening, but later took a decided upturn, aided by the early firmness of prices at Winnipeg. After December delivery here had risen to about 3c over Monday's low point, however, offerings increased, buying power seemed to fade away, and the market receded, influenced largely by gossip that cheap offers of new Argentine wheat were responsible for the low prices current at Liverpool and for a late break in Winnipeg. Besides European demand for United States and Canadian wheat was said to be slow and the country marketings in Canada much larger than a year ago.

Chicago wheat prices closed at nearly the day's lowest level. In some degree, the late weakness appeared to be due to lessened optimism as to the likelihood of any immediate help being given to agricultural interests through proposed plans at Washington. It was generally assumed that any definite relief programme was yet more or less remote.

Corn and oats followed wheat except the September corn advanced owing to scantiness of readily available supplies. September corn reached within less than one cent of the best price of the season.

Provisions were governed mainly by changes in the hog market.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, September 22 (Canadian Press). — There was no further change in the condition of the domestic market for cash grain yesterday, prices being generally maintained. A fair amount of business continues to be reported in the flour market. The undertone to the millfeed market was strong, but the market for rolled oats was quiet.

There is not much business in baled hay. Indications are that much higher prices will prevail in the egg market, but there was no change yesterday. The tone of the potato market remains firm. The tone of the butter and cheese markets is also firm.

OTTAWA, September 22 (Canadian Press). — The market remains practically unchanged. Receipts of high quality fresh continue light, but there are plenty of the lower grades on the market. VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

BABY DID NOT WIN.

The Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of September 19 you report in connection with the Baby Show that my boy won a prize—third in the class over 18 months. The Well Babies' Clinic is wrong in this statement, as I had not a boy entered. My baby girl was entered and classed 100 per cent, at the show, but was not re-examined on Tuesday.

BABIES, PHYSICAL AND MORAL.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir,—We had quite a time in Peterborough this week discussing a baby contest. Most of us were interested in the physical side of the question. What about the moral? I hope to see the day when my child will win laurels on his merits via truthfulness and honesty. If he ever wins by a dishonest action, at least I will see that he never points the finger to me and say, "You showed me the way, mother." It will amount to nothing if his physical condition is passed perfect and his morals are nil.

Your sincerely,
A MOTHER.

Sir,—I hear there is a rumor in town that Markson has jumped his bail. I hope you will be good enough to dispel that rumor. Markson is not afraid of the petty persecution by the master class of Peterborough. I will be right there when the times comes to answer their charges.

I remain,
Yours truly,
B. MARKSON.

UPTURNED CANOE GAVE CLUE TO DROWNING OF YOUNG HASTINGS MAN

PADDLED OFF ALONE.

HASTINGS, Sept. 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Kennedy were notified by telegram on Friday of the drowning of their son, Leslie, in Canoe Lake, in the Algonquin Park district, where he was working with Mr. Hugh Wilkins, the surveyor, of Norwood.

The first information announced that the young man was missing, but it as followed by detailed and distressful news confirming the first fears of a fatal accident, and stating that the body had been recovered and was being forwarded to Hastings.

Leslie Kennedy was twenty-one years old, and was known to all the people of this town. About four months ago he left with Mr. Wilkins on a surveying engagement at Canoe Lake. On Wednesday of this week he had occasion to paddle across the lake, and that was the last seen of him alive. The apprehensions of the little camp were first aroused by the finding of his canoe drifting upside down. A search party was formed and the body was recovered nearby within a few hours.

Mr. Wilkins wired the parents that he was having the body embalmed and was accompanying it home to Hastings as quickly as possible. It was not known definitely last night when he would arrive here. The deep sympathy of the whole community is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy in the loss of their son.

FIRPO UNWILLING TO SIGN UP NOW

May Not Be Matched With Dempsey Until Next Year

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Though a return match between Jack Dempsey and his Argentine rival, Luis Angel Firpo, is regarded by ring followers as inevitable, details of their second clash for the heavyweight title may not be arranged for some time, probably not until next year, when the battle is most likely to take place. Tex Rickard, promoter of the historic battle at the Polo Grounds a week ago, has made little headway in negotiations this week with Firpo and Jack Kearns the champion's manager, despite the willingness of both fighters to enter the ring again.

Firpo, however, is averse to being involved in another long-term contract such as he had with Rickard this year. He is willing to fight Harry Wills, negro contender, in addition to Dempsey, but not until next year. He prefers to wait until then before coming down to definite agreement.

The champion's dapper manager has conferred in some detail with Rickard regarding a return match with Firpo, but like the Argentine, is inclined to let negotiations drop for a while. He probably will leave in a few days for Los Angeles, where he will join Dempsey and decide upon plans for the immediate future.

MOTHER

Convicted of beating his aged mother and throwing her out into the street, a young man in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., is sentenced by the judge never to see her again.

His mother, of course, will soon forgive him—probably already has.

Mother love is more than an emotion. It is a definite force, like gravity or magnetism. A great many of the things we call emotions are natural forces, too powerful to be controlled by the individual. In their clutches, we get our great inspirations or make our big blunders. Man is a violin played by the bow, nature, producer of more discord than harmony.

FLOCK OF SHEEP MANGLED BY DOGS

Stray Curs Cause Serious Loss to Joseph Guiry of Emily Township.

KING'S WHARF, Sept. 22. — The dogs are at large again. Last Monday night Joseph Guiry had his flock of sheep badly worried, and again on Thursday night. They were badly mangled, their ears were torn off and large pieces of flesh were hanging from their sides. A number of them may die. The dogs are stray curs, and at 8 o'clock this morning they could not be driven off the sheep with stones. It was thought the sheep killing dogs were gone, but they seem to appear every once in a while. It is a big loss to Mr. Guiry as his flock was a valuable one. It is to be hoped the dogs will be shot.

Finishing the Harvest.

The frost Monday night did serious damage here to the gardens. Everything was burned. It also ripened the buckwheat and corn. The farmers are finishing the harvest with corn, buckwheat and clover, and all are only about half a crop.

A large number from here attended the School Fair held at Downeyville Monday. The two schools here, No. 6 and S. S. No. 15, were both represented.

The Misses Mary and Nora Harrington left for Lindsay to attend St. Joseph's Academy there.

Mrs. F. Wiedrick and daughter, Marian, were visitors at Mr. William Herlihey's, Sr., Saturday en route to their home in Rochester, N. Y.

DESTROYED LANDSCAPE

ETAPLES, France (United Press) — High explosive powder is not useful as garden fertilizer, according to a peasant gardener living near here. Bit by bit the gardener has stolen seventy pounds of British explosives from an army dump. The powder was buried in the garden. The recent French heat-wave was no respecter of gardens, and the stolen explosives were warmed along with the rest of the landscape.

With the thermometer around 96, the powder ruined the garden, the thief's house, the houses of his neighbors and a good portion of the surrounding farm land. Two houses were cut in two and a dozen were unroofed when the "fertilizer" went off.

SEEKS GREATER SECLUSION

DOORN, Sept. 20 (Associated Press). —Instead of time softening the seclusion of the former German emperor, he is about to retire even more completely from the gaze of the sightseer, for he has ordered the erection of a barricade to prevent his residence from being overlooked from the high road. The frame-work for the new screen, which is eight feet high, will successfully prevent anyone from getting even a fleeting glimpse of the fretful monarch as he walks in his garden.

The recent publicity given to a bonfire celebration in the grounds of Doorn House is said to have been the motive for the greater privacy.

RUSSIA IS NOW RULED EFFICIENTLY BY SOVIET

(By JOHN GRAUDENZ)

MOSCOW (By mail to United Press) —Congressman Fred Britten, of Illinois, is taking back to the United States very decided news on the future of Russia. He has just left Moscow for Warsaw, Poland, en route home.

Britten told the United Press that he had not changed his opinion that the two countries should meet, with a view to settlement of their differences. He said that leaders here were ruling the population with a velveted-mailed fist and in a most efficient manner, which is probably what these people need because they are as yet unable to rule themselves, he said. The Russian rulers are fighting for an ideal, which, if their methods were modified, might turn out to be a wonderful thing, said Britten. The people in general seem much happier than under the old regime, Britten said.

American ought not to permit Germany to get too strong a footing in Russia, he declared, because if those two countries succeeded in developing each other, it would mean a danger to the entire world.

For American Capital

Among other opportunities, Britten said American capital could build electric railways, paper-mills, factories for the construction of machinery of all kinds, especially agricultural machinery and implements, printing, and manual labor-saving devices, manufacturing cases, tractors, etc.

Britten also told the United Press correspondent the substance of a conference he had with Tchitcherin, in which both warmly contested various questions. On Britten's question whether he had any message for America, Tchitcherin declared: "Convey to the United States Government that Russia hopes for an opportunity to meet America on equal terms with a view to promoting a commercial and diplomatic agreement. Russia must not and cannot subordinate herself to America. America's claims against us, and vice versa, can only be adjusted through a meeting of our respective representatives. That which transpired before the evolution of nature is forgotten and New Russia began at that moment. All properties which have been nationalized cannot under our system of government be returned to their former owners."

GERMAN ART THIEVES BUSY

MUNICH, Sept. 20.—(Associated Press).—Burglars recently rifled the villa of the late Franz von Lenbach, painter of the well-known Bismarck pictures who has been dead for 20 years, and stole a number of valuable masterpieces. These included a picture of Franz Hals called "The Laughing Boys," two pictures by Teniers, an original sketch by Rubens, and a number of paintings by Lucas Crannach and other celebrated artists.

CHANGE

"The cable now cannot successfully compete with radio, due to the greater advantage of speed on the part of radio and also to direct communication." This is said by Owen D. Young, chairman of General Electric Co. and Radio Corporation of America.

Later it will be discovered that the steam railroad, running on steel tracks, cannot compete with the airplane.

FATALLY HURT IN GRAVEL PIT

Thomas Moffat, Sr., of Malone, Crushed By Earth That Tumbled Upon Him.

MARMORA, Sept. 22.—An inquest was held in the town hall on Thursday night, September 20 relating to the death of Mr. Tom Moffat Sr., of Malone. Last week while he was working in Mr. Downward's gravel-pit the earth caved in. Mr. Moffat had both legs broken and was injured internally and died on Monday. The verdict of the inquest was that his death resulted from the injuries he received at the time of the accident.

Rev. D. R. Clare went to Toronto on business Friday.

Springbrook School Fair.

Springbrook School Fair was held Thursday, September 20. Although the weather was unfavorable there was a good attendance.

The school children who took part in the parade were all daintily dressed. Some were decorated with different colors of tissue paper but the schools who won first and secprizes had the most unique costumes.

School No. 11 whose teacher is Miss Gladys Danford won the first prize. The school represented a tribe of Indians in costumes, the boys carrying bows and arrows, the girls carrying baskets of corn. Their banner was a landscape scene and wigwam done in crayon.

The school from Spry's Settlement led by their teacher, Miss Bradley won second prize. The little girls were dressed in white with tissue paper ribbons. They carried umbrellas of red, white and blue tissue paper while the boys carried flags of the same colors.

These two schools received first and second prizes at Stirling Fair Tuesday.

All the schools presented the usual drills, songs and recitations.

Oratory Contest

The public speaking contest showed that careful preparation and though had been spent on the subjects chosen. Five of the speakers spoke on the subject, "The Value of Consolidated School." The different pupils brought forward valuable information to their audience.

The exhibits of grain fruit, vegetables, cooking and mannual training were all of the best.

In spite of the rain a good program of sports was carried on, which the children were eager to take part in.

SHAKES

A convention of postage stamp collectors recently canceled an engagement to shake hands with President Coolidge. It's part of the campaign to relieve the president of this form of physical exhaustion. An average of 1200 people a day show up at the White House to clasp mitts with the chief executive.

The League Against Hand Shaking claims that the complete elimination of handshaking could do a lot to curb communicable diseases. They are right. After all, shaking hands is as foolish a custom as oriental bumping of foreheads or rubbing of noses.

NEWEST IN LIFEBOATS SEEN AT COWES HARBOR.

COWES, England, Sept. 20—(Associated Press).—A strange motor-boat painted red and blue, bulky in the beam, with a single mast and peculiar contraptions on her deck, came out of Cowes Harbor at dawn recently and made her way through Spithead at 11 knots. She was the William and Kate Johnston, described as the largest and most complete lifeboat in the world.

The new craft is fitted with every device man's ingenuity can conceive for fighting storm and saving life. Her length is 60 feet, and she is 15 feet wide. She is driven by twin propellers in protective funnels, and her engines are two six-cylinder 90 horse-power motors.

The engines are encased in separate water-tight compartments. In their rigorous tests they were run with these compartments full of water for three hours, and kept going full speed all the time. Forward and aft of the engines are cabins, each capable of holding 25 people. One has a stove, and for the first time the rescued will have shelter, warmth and food immediately they ge aboard. The life-boat can hold 150 persons in cabins and on deck.

The most notable "gadget" on deck is a life-saving net of stout rope erected amidships into which people on ships can jump for their lives with a reasonable chance of success.

There are also on deck a line-throwing gun with a range of 200 yards, a powerful searchlight, and a screen to protect the helmsman and engineer at the motor controls.

In addition the boat has nearly 100 buoyant air cases. She cannot capsize, and is practically unsinkable. She will be stationed in the Mersey, but to thoroughly test her she will first be given a tour of 2,700 miles round Great Britain.

GUARD THE BABY AGAINST COLDS

To guard the baby against colds, nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a mild laxative that will keep the little one's stomach and bowels working regularly. It is a recognized fact that where the stomach and bowels are in good order that colds will not exist, that the health of the little one will be good and that he will thrive and be happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CROWN RUST OF OATS AND THE COMMON BUCKTHORN.

The stem rust of cereals, which causes immense losses in some years, is well known. The crown rust of oats is not so well known, nor do the losses caused by it attract much attention, as they are not usually so severe as in the case of the stem rust. Crown rust is, however, common, and it seems to be growing more severe, especially in western Canada. It attacks the leaves of oats, killing them and thus reducing the vigor of the plants and lessening the yield. The rust appears as small orange reddish masses on the leaves of oats in the summer. Later the black stage appears on the dying leaves and gives them a dark or black appearance.

Just as the stem rust of wheat may live on the barberry, so the crown rust of oats attacks the common buckthorn in the spring, and produces yellowish masses of spores (seeds) that blow about and carry the rust to oats. Last year in western Canada, owing to favourable conditions, the spring spore stage of the crown rust was very abundant on the buckthorns in some districts—so abundant that they appeared yellow even at some distance. A very heavy attack of crown rust on oats followed, killing practically all the leaves of the oats much before ripening. In consequence the yield must have been much less than if no rust were present. Many experiments in the greenhouse have shown conclusively that the rust on the common buckthorn readily infects oats. In these experiments rusted leaves of the buckthorns were placed above oats growing in pots, so that the rust on the buckthorn leaves would fall on the grain in the pots. The oats were then sprayed with water and placed in very moist air. In every case the oats became heavily rusted with the crown rust.

The common buckthorn is a shrub frequently used for hedges and for ornamental purposes. It is valuable for these purposes, but there are many other shrubs that can be used which do not spread rust. The buckthorn is hardy and can readily become established. Should it become general, either from extensive planting or spread from seed, it would cause very serious injury to the oat crop. The native buckthorn in Canada is attacked by a rust, but this goes chiefly to swamp grasses and does not attack oats.

There is no doubt the common rust of oats is a serious enemy of the oat crop, killing the leaves and reducing the yield. There is also no doubt that the common buckthorn helps in the overwintering and spread of this rust. The common buckthorn, therefore, should not be planted ot be allowed to grow in countries where oats are a valuable crop. The common barberry and the common buckthorn should be destroyed in grain growing regions.

HYDRO PLANT WILL PROVIDE IRRIGATION WATER.

A hydro-electric development costing about $20 000 000 will be started at Flaming Gorge on the Green River in Utah as soon as the necessary license has been granted by the Federal Power Commission. A preliminary permit has already been issued to the company which is undertaking this work. When completed water will drop approximately 415 feet from the dam to the generating station in passing through a tunnel 25 feet in diameter and three and a half miles long. It is stated that this project when completed will develop 125 000 horse power.

The Flaming Gorge dam will be 215 feet high and 600 feet long at the crest. When the water impounded by this dam has passed through and done its work in the generating station it will also be available for irrigation uses. The electric current developed here will be marketed in Salt Lake City 120 miles as the crow flies to the west and will also be sold to the coal miners around Rock Springs and Kemmerer Wyo. It is estimated that construction of the high tension electric transmission line fom this dam to Salt Lake City will cost in the neighborhood of $2 500 000.

TRACTOR GIVES ELEPHANTS MORE FREE TIME.

Circus elephants the country over are in high-glee. From their keepers and the tent men they have learned that from now on they'll have more time for munching hay begging peanuts and contemplating the infinite in true Hindu style. No longer will the calm of elephant row be disturbed when the animal cages have to be moved about. Electricity has done it. Circuses are now using storage-battery tractors for handling cages of lions tigers leopards and bears. The elephants and tent-men are not the least bit sorry for pulling such cages around on the soft earth under the "big-top" is a husky job for a good-sized elephant or sixteen extra able-bodied men.

This is how it came about. When the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey circus was showing in Newark, N. J. a little while ago a persevering tractor salesman asked the general manager to let him demonstrate what an electric tractor would do. The circus master mechanic was called in and for the purposes of the test supplied a cage holding twelve polar bears whose combined weight was over four tons. The tractor was hitched to the cage and started for the center ring where the bears were to go through their act. The trip was done so quickly and easily that before "the biggest-show-on-earth" had reached its next week stand an order for a tractor had been given. Now the other circuses are asking how soon they can get tractors for this job.

Spain Has Her Own Troubles, While the War Clouds in the Balkans Are Dispersing.

RUHR SITUATION.

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

If every country had a national bird or animal, like the American eagle, the British lion and the Russian bear, the ox ought to be reserved for Argentina.

The ox is very, very strong—but slow, extremely slow.

Bulk and strength are Argentine characteristics, but shiftiness distinctly isn't.

The Universities Club, Buenos Aires, is the home of Argentine boxing. I've seen dozens of the republic's best men, including Firpo, in action there and they're all more or less alike—plenty of power, but no speed. Let one of them land and down goes whatever he landed on. But he can't follow up an advantage. It isn't lack of science. It's inability to think and act quickly.

Wets and Drys.

Attorney General Daugherty, reporting on three years of prohibition, calls it "one of the most tragic epochs in American history relative to law enforcement"—"a sordid story of assassination, bribery and corruption" involving "the very sanctums wherein the inviolability of the law was presumed to be sacred."

However, the report concludes that the Attorney General is "highly satisfied."

It will be recalled that some time before his death President Harding asked if the navy can be used in enforcing prohibition. Attorney General Daugherty now answers "no" —no, without Congressional authorization. It's announced from the White House that President Coolidge doesn't intend to ask such authorization.

Trouble in Spain.

The Catalan provinces, in the country's northeast corner, are Spain's great industrial region. Being the big producers, the Catalans pay a large share of the taxes. They say the Government wastes them, mainly on a needlessly long-drawn-out war in Morocco.

Finally they've balked on keeping this up. In doing so, they invited other big taxpaying districts to join in their revolt. The Basque provinces, in the central north, where the mining's done, and Galicia, in the northeast, accepted.

It was so serious that Premier Alhucemas' Cabinet had to quit. What's described as a "military directorate," headed by Primo Rivera, captain-general of Catalonia, has taken the Cabinet's place.

Virtually it's something like a Fascisti movement, but there are many "reds" among the Catalans and Basques and it may take a communistic turn yet. It amounts to a near-revolution already and threatens to become a real one.

Italy Rather Milder.

Italy, which seemed bent on war in the Balkans, has modified her tone a little.

Premier Mussolini agrees to release the Greek Islands he grabbed on Sept. 27. And he's made a new offer to Jugoslavia concerning control of the disputed city of Fiume. Jugoslavia meant to fight before accepting his first proposition. She's considering the new one.

There may yet be trouble, but it's been delayed anyway.

Jugoslavia (Greater Serbia) has sent a threatening note to Bulgaria, owing to the presence of bands of Bulgarian irregular troops on her frontier. Another danger!

Germany and France.

Chancellor Stresemann admits Germany's lost her "passive resistance" fight in the Ruhr. He says he's willing to mortgage German private industry, commerce, finance and agriculture to France to secure payment of war damages.

Negotiations haven't progressed far enough yet to judge how they're likely to end.

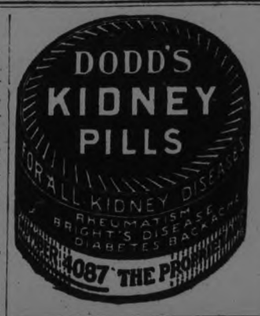
A PERSONAL INSTRUMENT

The general popularity of the piano that instrument which has long been a classic unit of the furniture of the home is not the result of some arbitrary choice of the householder. According to a famous pianist the satisfaction which the listener finds in this instrument is the result of the complex tonal effects which it is capable of producing and also of its peculiar adaptability for conveying fully and directly the message of the performer.

What a remarkably personal instrument the piano is. It is capable of impressing upon auditors with unique thoroughness the personality of the artist or the character of a work. If music has any value that fact may be determined by playing it over on the piano. We frequently hear composers say that their compositions for orchestra show to advantage only when presented by an orchestra and that they should never be judged when played upon the piano. This it seems is only an excuse for hiding utterly worthless stuff under a maze of orchestral coloring. If a composition has real musical attributes these may be easily discerned when played upon the piano. In fact the piano is such a peculiar personal instrument that it is possible for the works of certain composers to be properly set forth only by their creator.

Some folks are known by their intentions, and others by their work.

It is better to profit by our own mistakes than to permit others to profit by them.



Unhappy Marriages Matter Blood Test.

PHILADELPHIA, September 22 (Canadian Press). — Unhappy marriages can be prevented by means of blood tests, Dr. William S. Bainbridge, of New York, to-day told the American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists, and Abdominal Surgeons in convention here.

Dr. O. M. Gruhzit, of Detroit, presented the theory that there were four different kinds of blood. In the question that followed, Dr. Bainbridge asserted that by taking the blood test of persons in love, unhappy unions could be forestalled, as only the mating of persons in the same blood group could be married.

To-day's card is a thoroughly good one, and brings together some of the best horses that have been seen under the colours in Canada this season, reinforced by a few arrivals from New York.

SEWING CLASS FOR WOMEN OF CAVAN

Women's Institute Decide to Ask For a Demonstrator

CAVAN, Sept. 22.—The September meeting of the Cavan Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. David Hunter on Thursday afternoon. There were twelve ladies present.

The president, Miss Bertha McNeil, presided. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, the position of secretary of the meeting was taken by Mrs. J. D. Hunter.

There was a discussion as to whether or not a sewing class would be formed, and a sewing demonstrator asked for. It was moved that a class should be formed and a demonstrator asked for, to come the first two weeks in May. It was thought that the spring would be the most advisable time to hold such a class.

Miss McNeil read a very interesting paper on "Canadian Women of Note."

There was a good discussion on the making of catsup.

Ample justice was done to the lunch and a social time enjoyed around the tea table.

The Institute wish to announce that the Sewing Class will be open to all ladies and young girls who wish to join. Anyone interested is referred to the secretary, Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, for information.

A SHORT COVERING ON STOCK MARKETS

To-day's Markets Closed Higher. Still Evidence or Weakness.

NEW YORK, September 22 (Special to The Examiner). — Short covering was the principal activity of the week's close in the stock market. Having far to push the main body of stocks to the year's lows in the previous session, professional operators apparently decided to retire from the market to see what happened over Sunday.

The evening up of the transactions supplied a demand for the stock under pressure most of the week which lifted these issues one to three points above Friday's bottom prices. New developments were more or less negative so far as European developments were concerned in their relations to security values, but the despatches did maintain a more cheerful tone about the reparations mix-up. Wall Street heard reports of further curtailment in the steel and motor industries. But these were offset by the weekly surveys of mercantile agencies which reported steady expansion in general fall trade. No change took place in the character of the market in the final dealings. The industrials continued to rally, but the movement failed to gain impressive proportions.

Baldwin rallied to 115 against Friday's low of 112 3-4. Other speculative leaders came back to about the same extent. Sugars continued the best acting group under the lead of Cuba Cane Preferred, which made a new high on the movment 49 1-2.

Despite evidences of weakness displayed at various stages of the previous session, the industrial average showed little loss on the day, and still held above the year's low point established at the end of July. Encouragement derived from this resistance to bearish pressure was increased by the optimistic tenor of the weekly mercantile reviews, which reported that fall trade was expanding cautiously but steadily.

The market closed higher.

Closing prices: United States Steel 87 3-4 up 3-8, Bethlehem Steel 48 1-8 up 1, American Locomotive 69 unchanged, Gulf State Steel 76 3-8 up 1, Baldwin 114 7-8 up 1, Texas Co. 40 1-2 up 3-4, Pan-American 56 1-2 up 1-4, Studebaker 101 up 7-8, Kelly Springfield 27 up 14, American Can. 92 1-4 up 1 1-8, American Woollen 78 3-8 up 3-4, Cuba Cane Preferred 49 1-8 up 1 5-8, Cuban American Sugar 31 3-4 up 7-8, Anaconda 38 3-4 o 1-8, Southern Railway 32 7-8 up 1-4, Baltimore and Ohio 51 1-2 up 1-2, Southern Pacific 86 3-4 up 1-4.

ABOUT RAMSAY MACDONALD

LONDON, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press—Ramsay MacDonald, Leader of the Labor Opposition in the House of Commons, during his forthcoming trip to Constantinople is not likely to let himself go after the manner of the British stateman Disraeli when he went yachting in the Near East ninety years ago.

"You should see me," he wrote home, "in the costume of a Greek pirate—a blood-red shirt with silver studs as big as shillings, an immense scarf for girdle, full of pistols and daggers, red cap, red slippers, broad blue-striped jacket and trousers." He and his friends visited an Albanian boy, who could not understand their language nor they his, but whose wine and brandy put them on good terms.

"The boy drank all the brandy," said Disraeli, "the room turned round; wild attendants at our feet seemed dancing in strange and fantastic whirls. The boy shook hands with me; he shouted in English, I in Greek. 'Very Good,' he had caught up from us. 'Kalo, Kalo' was my rejoined. He roared. I smacked him on the back. I remember no more."

The description suggests that the boy could not have drunk all the brandy.

Mond Mine After Being Worked For 23 Years Is To be Abandoned

SUDBURY, Ont., Sept. 22 (Canadian Press).—After being worked for over 23 years and to a depth second only to one other mine in Canada, the Mond mine is to be abandoned by the Mond Nickel Co. and the plant moved to the Frood No. 2, less than a mile and a quarter from the heart of Sudbury. The ore from the Mond, which has now given out, has never been very high grade, but modern and efficient mining methods have enabled the company to operate it successfully.

When the famous cave-in occurred at the Creighton some eleven years ago, revealing unexpected great wealth in that mine, the Frood was abandoned and all the houses that could be carried through the rock cuts were loaded on flat cars and taken to Creighton. Since that time the settlement at Frood has been practically an abandoned town with John Conley, the caretaker, as the mayor, police force and chief population.

Dr. G. V. Corless, of the Mond Nickel Company, said that the equipment will be moved to the Frood No. 2 at once, which will take a number of weeks. As soon as the plant can be put into condition, the work of dewatering the old shaft will be started and it is the intention of the company to develop the mine before working it.

The proximity of the new workings to Sudbury will mean considerable more business for the town, when the new shaft is in full operation. The mine will likely begin shipping in the early spring of 1924.

While the Mond mine was a deep one, it was by no means the deepest in the world. That honour falls to a mine in Brazil while there are mines in Montana and in Northern Michigan which are also deeper but there is only one other mine in Canada that has been worked at greater depth.

EARL HAIG GETS A GREAT SURPRISE

LONDON, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press)—Earl Haig recently paid a surprise visit to Edinburgh Castle and the great Field- Marshal received a greater surprise than he gave by his unannounced visit. He was in mufti and accompanied by his wife and two daughters.

"Go back and pay your admission money," was the salute he received when attempting to pass the sentries, who, of course, did not know him under the circumstances.

Earl Haig did as he was told and then he and his wife and daughters proceeded to look around the Castle. He chatted with several of the men on duty, one of whom he recognized as having been service at Loos. He left without calling on the Castle authorities and the fact of his visit was not known until some time afterwards.

It would have been interesting to have heard Earl Haig's opinion of the statue of himself on the esplanade of Edinburgh Castle. It had been completed for nearly a year and had not yet been unveiled. The statue was a gift to the city of Edinburgh from an Indian admirer of the Earl. An endeavor was made to get the Prince of Wales to perform the unveiling ceremony, just after it was finished, but it was put off owing to the donor of the statue being recalled to India. This was followed by further postponements.

The statue when Earl Haig was at the Castle presented a very weather-beaten appearance. It was covered with a few old pieces of dirty canvas, and the figure of the horse stood on a pile of stone which showed traces of being rapidly overgrown with grass. The rider had a comic appearance, and a broken down barricade surmounted by barbed wire completed the sorry spectacle.

EAST BEHIND WEST IN MATTER OF READING

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 22 (United Press).—For all its many colleges, universities and libraries, the so-called effect East falls sadly behind the West, if quantity magazine reading is any indicator.

A survey made by Ward G. Reeder, assistant professor in the department of school administration, Ohio State University, shows that the people of California lead the nation in the consumption of magazine reading matter. The survey was based on the circulation figures of the 10 magazines having the largest circulation. It shows that Californians read about six times as much as Mississippians, who bring up the rear.

It is a curious fact that based upon the combined circulation of these magazines in each state contrasted with the population, eight Western states place among the first 10. Only Connecticut and Massachusetts are there to represent the East, where most of the magazines are printed. Ohio, the next Eastern state, ranks eleventh.

In similar fashion most of the Southern states are to be found at the bottom [illegible]. Of the last 17 in the list only [illegible] of the Mason and Dixon [illegible] upon the proportion of the readers of those magazines to the population, he points out, that the Pacific states (California, Washington and Oregon) outclass all other groups by a large percentage. He also says that the ranking of the states on reading as shown by the survey is about the same as their ranking on intelligence reached by army psychologists during the world war.

The District of Columbia led the nation in reading, judged by those magazines. There Prof. Reeder found 31.7 of the population were magazine readers. The ranking of the states follows: California, 25.8 per cent; Oregon, 24.9; Washington, 24.1; Nevada, 21.25; Wyoming, 20.8; Montana, 18.5; Colorado, 17.9; Massachusetts, 17.8; Connecticut, 17.2; Idaho, 17.0; and Ohio, 16.8. Illinois ranked twenty-third and Pennsylvania twenty-ninth.

TO THE FELLOW WHO'LL TAKE MY PLACE

We do not know the author. He was a man, a real man. There are times when we do not stop to think of the trials of the "other fellow." If we would only try to put ourselves in his place, we would be more generous in our opinions.

Here is a toast I want to drink
To a fellow I'll never know—
To the fellow who's going to take my place
When it's time for me to go.
I've wondered what kind of a chap he'll be,
And I've wished I could take his hand,
Just to whisper, "I wish you well, old man,"
In a way that he'd understand.

I'd like to give him the cheering word
That I've longed at times to hear;
I'd like to give him the warm hand-clasp
When never a friend seemed near.
I've learned my knowledge by sheer hard work,
And I wish I could pass it on.
To the fellow who'll come to take my place
Some day when I am gone.

Will he see all the sad mistakes I've made,
And note all the battles lost?
Will he ever guess the tears they caused
Or the heartaches which they cost?
Will he gaze through the failures and fruitless toil
To the underlying plan,
And catch a glimpse of the real intent,
And the heart of the vanquished man?

I dare to hope that he may pause some day,
As he toils as I have wrought,
And gain some strength for his weary task
From the battles I have fought.
But I've only the task itself to leave,
With the cares for him to face,
And never a cheering word to speak,
To the fellow who'll take my place.

Then here's to your good health, old chap,
I drink as a bridegroom to his bride;
I leave an unfinished task for you,
But God knows how I've tried,
I've dreamed my dreams as all men do,
But never a one came true,
And my prayer today is that all my dreams
May be realized in you.

And we'll meet some day in the great unknown—
Far out in the realms of space;
You'll know my clasp when I take your hand
And gaze into your tired face.
Then all failures will be successes
In the light of the new-found dawn—
So today I'm drinking your health, old chap,
Who'll take my place when I'm gone

Unsolved Mysteries

While practically all the histories which deal with the exploits of Santa Ana the Mexican liberator soldier and president, content themselves with references to the known life of this leader and do not attempt to delve into his origin there is a widespread belief that the man who posed as a Mexican was in reality an American—a native of Kentucky whose real name was Nat Saunders.

This account of the early life of the Mexican president, states that he was the son of a Welsh pioneer who settled in Kentucky and that his mother was an Indian squaw a theory which would account for Santa Ana's extremely dark complexion and many of the incidents of his later career. The nam of Nat. Saunders appears upon the roster of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point while the records of the time show that this same Saunders was implicated in the murder of a ferryman near Highland Falls N. Y. after which he disappeared presumably having fled to the south where he altered his name to Santa Ana and entered the Spanish Army. Some commentators who lean toward this version of the early life of the Mexican leader even go so far as to claim that he was recognized by one of his Kentucky cousins during the time that he was a prisoner in the hands of Sam Houston while others tacitly admit that the mystery connected with his early life is too deep to be penetrated at this late day.

It was at the battle of San Jacinto River in 1836 that Houston routed the Mexican army and captured Santa Ana who had treated American settlers in Texas with such cruelty that Houston had difficulty in preventing his prisoner from being lynched. The Mexican offered to purchase his freedom by acknowledging the independence of Texas but it was more than a year before he was permitted to return to Mexico where he immediately plunged into the turmoil of politics and finally succeeded in having himself made President. In 1845 the shifting tide of revolution removed him from this position and Santa Ana was forced to flee to Cuba where he conspired to secure the annexation of Mexico to the United States in return for the Governorship of the new province. But when war between the United States and Mexico was declared in 1848 the exiled leader was recalled appointed provisional president of the republic and given command of the troops which were dispatched to drive the "invaders" out of Texas.

This campaign was a sorry failure. As long as it was a matter of internal dissention with Mexicans fighting against Mexicans the side with which Santa Ana had allied himself was almost always victorious. But when it came to conducting a war against a foreign power the Mexican troops found themselves at a distinct disadvantage; despite the fact that they outnumbered their opponents nearly four to one. Gen. Zachary Taylor administered the first crushing defeat of the war at Buena Vista and two months later General Scott completed the rout with his victory at Cerro Gordo forcing Santa Ana again into exile.

The defeated general returned to Mexico City again in 1853 and was once more elected President but when it was discovered that he was plotting to change his one year term into a life tenure which would give all the power of an emperor he was again deposed his fortune confiscated and he was sentenced to death barely escaping across the border in time to prevent the execution of this order. On two other occasions Santa Ana made attempts to re-enter Mexico with the intention of resuming his former leadership but was balked in both his efforts finally retiring to the seclusion of a small house on Staten Island N. Y. where he lived for four years without revealing his identity.

In 1874 he at last succeeded in returning home where two years later he died in poverty and obscurity—a man of mystery who had devoted practically his entire life to the plots and counter-plots of Latin American politics.

She Claims Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did It After Everything Else Failed

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I feel that I ought to let you know about my case. I was ailing and could barely do my housework and washing I was so run-down, just from having one child. I took a lot of medicines and had doctors. Then I gave them all up and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel wonderfully good now. I do every thing that comes along, and we all take your medicine as a tonic when we don't feel just so. I am thankful for what the Vegetable Compound has done for my health and for my family."—Mrs. MARY SAIECHECK, 944 28th St., Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Letters like these testify to the value of the Vegetable Compound. These women speak from the fullness of their hearts. They describe as correctly as they can their conditions: First, those symptoms that affected them most conspicuously; and later the disappearance of those symptoms. They are sincere expressions of gratitude. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

LEAGUE BUDGET MAY BE VIEWED

Critics Says The League of Nations Is a Costly Affair.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22. — (Canadian Press).—In view of the oft repeated assertion that the League of Nations is being run on costly and extravagant lines and of the recent statement that "the expenses have grown beyond expectation," thus giving an impression of wasteful and uncontrolled expenditures, the League of Nations Society in Canada draws attention to the concluding paragraph of the Supervisory Commission appointed to check the League's Budget for 1924.

The commissioners say: "As a result of these additions for the labor office and for the provision of a pension scheme the 'General Budget' of the League as approved by the Supervisory Commission amounts to 24,988,375 francs. It will be noted that notwithstanding the inclusion in the estimates for 1924 of the sum of 2,520,274 francs for the Working Capital Fund as compared with 500,000 francs in the budget for 1923, the estimates for 1924 are 684,632 francs less than the budget for 1923.

"The Supervisory Commission believes that as a result of the reductions willingly accepted by the competent officials, the League will have been placed in a very strong financial position without the States members, being called upon to increase their contribution during the coming year. After the careful and exhaustive inquiry it has made, the Commission does not believe that any further reductions are possible in the Budget without affecting the essential work of the organization. The Commission therefore earnestly recommends to the Assembly that the Budget should be passed in the form now presented."

The Canadian Society points out and emphasizes the fact that the combined cost of the League, of the Permanent Court of Justice and of the International Labor Bureau for the ensuing year is $4,986,702, which is only one-fourth of the amount spent by Great Britain alone for one day's war expenditure and is about one-third the cost of one first-class modern battleship.

Canada's contribution to the League of Nations, it is pointed out, is $198,668 a year, or about $3,800 weekly, not a big price to pay for the best available insurance against another world war when it is remembered that this country will have to provide $56,629,480, or more than one million dollars a week, during 1924 to pay for the aftermath of the last conflict. The details of this expenditure are:

Great War Pensions	$32,583,700
Soldiers' Civil Re-Establst.	12,862,000
Administration of War Taxes	2,200,000
Soldiers' Settlement	8,400,000
War Graves Commission	373,780
Grant for Blind Soldiers	10,000
	$56,629,480

It is interesting to learn that the salaries paid in the Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment Department and the Board of Pensions Commissioners total $4,508,900, or only $476,000 less than the total cost of the League of Nations, Permanent Court and Labor Bureau combined.

In view of the widely held belief that the League of Nations Society derives financial assistance from the sums voted by Government for the League of Nations, it is opportune to say that the Society in Canada is maintained entirely by voluntary subscriptions.

She'd Make Cinderella Jealous

Louise Strang won six pair of shoes at the recent Monroe Centennial Exposition in Los Angeles. Out of 50,000 numbers drawn she caught the lucky one. Then she was permitted to go to a local department store and select her 3-a's in any style she chose.

CAVAN BLAZERS

The Toronto Sunday World of today's issue contains an extended account of the activities of the "Cavan Blazers" of olden time. The entire front page of the second section is used for the article which is illustrated copiously. The account gives a good idea of the humorous and serious adventures of the old "Blazer$," whose memory was invoked on many occasions during the recent Old Boys' and Girls' Re-Union held by Cavan and Millbrook.

Fashion demands slim people. Fat ones can reduce by talking to people who make them sick.

Educated Tractor

President E. C. Elliott of Purdue University, proved an adept at running a tractor for the first time as he does in running the university. Here he is on a power outfit used on one of the institution's farms in Indiana. It's a lot easier, he says, than busting broncs, which he had occasion to do during summer vacations while a college student years ago

INTERVIEW IN BED IS NEW SALES IDEA

Saleswoman Opens New Era With Uninvited Opening of Bedroom Door.

What might aptly be the subject of a lecture to salesmen and saleswomen on the method of successful approach was the system adopted by a lady house-to-house canvasser in the north end of the city today.

After vainly trying to draw attention by ringing the door bell at one house, this modern saleswoman opened the door and shouted "anybody home?" This bringing no results, she might reasonably have been expected to fold her samples and steal away. Not this saleswoman. She advanced into the hall and proceeded to investigate.

There was nobody in the parlor and nobody in the diningroom, and the saleslady was for a moment at fault. No sales? Impossible! There remained the bedrooms, every one with a potential customer, perhaps.

Grasping her sample case firmly, this pioneer of new method saleswomanship boldly entered the first bedroom. There wasn't any necessity to knock, for she had made so much noise now that no one could be unprepared. Boldly, therefore, she entered.

Her eyes opened widely and her teeth ceased their labors as the saleswoman advanced into the room with her stock opening. Samples were produced before the victim recovered sufficiently to know what was happening, and the saleswoman had worked through her piece to the closing talk before breath had been gathered to bid the visitor begone.

Even after the young lady of the house had asked her to leave, the model saleswoman made sure there were no other bedrooms sheltering possible customers, and tried to make a date with the young lady for a return visit. Tomorrow morning the door will be locked and the bell circuit broken, the young lady says, adding, "She had some nerve."

No sales were made, no orders were taken, but a new idea has been born into the practice of cornering victims for house-to-house canvassing. Business men whose appearance in their offices is sufficient to drive saleswomen away have a new terror added to their lives—that of the early morning saleswoman with the new idea approach.

Autumn styles are here. One season a woman's waist chokes her and the next it trips her.

WHAT I SHALL DO

"The question of justice or policy is precipitated into every question of national life. I am afraid that the great British Empire forgets this. If the British had put justice ahead of policy, the damnable Turk would have been thrown out of Europe forever. (Applause.) If our sister over the border had chosen to help it might have been accomplished. What if there was a danger of a Moslem uprising? Let them rise. Let us do away with this secret policy and these whispering premiers. Let us get things into the open."

"It is the test of religion to-day. What does any religion do with Jesus that is called Christ? You can take tradition and precedent and use it to smear the face of truth and batter it with the blood of your iniquity and yet call it religion."

What about Democracy?

"What about democracy? The great Wilson in the language of idealism, declared that the world must be made safe for democracy, but I say that democracy must be made safe for the world. There is no type of Caesarism or czardom or Kaiserism, that is as terrible as the democracy that has ousted God aside from its path, and that is ruled by passion instead of principle."

"As for the individual human soul with its conflict between conscience and convenience, what can you do with Jesus? You can crown Him or you can crucify Him. He has said 'He that is not with me, is against Me!' You can live your lives in trust and complete abandonment, and devotion toward Him, and so hasten the day of His ultimate crowning, or you can continue His suffering and postpone His victory. Which will you choose?"

Expressed Appreciation.

Dr. Morgan, speaking of the pleasure afforded him by his visit, thanked sincerely all who had helped to make his stay pleasant and successful. He paid a tribute to the work of his companion, Rev. A. F. Robinson, and also spoke in terms of praise of the excellent service rendered by the Peterboro Examiner in its press reports of his addresses.

Rev. W. H. Young, expressing himself as unable to adequately convey his appreciation of Dr. Morgan's work, called on Mr. A. Mowat, who voiced the thanks of the committee and congregation generally in a few well chosen words, acknowledged by the reverend speaker.

Afternoon's Address.

"Christ as God," was the subject of yesterday afternoon's address, which considered the Gospel according to John. John spoke of signs, and the speaker divided his subject into three parts, giving those signs, which were public testimony to the power and Godhood of Christ, those which were done in private, and the "sign" itself, contained in the latter part of the Gospel that narrates of the death and resurrection of the Lord, when the temple of His body was destroyed, and within three days re-builded again.

Signs in the realm of works during Jesus' ministry were, the changing of the water into wine, the cleansing of the Temple, the healing of the nobleman's son, the healing of the derelict with moral and physical malady, the feeding of the five thousand people, the stilling of the storm, the curing of the man born blind, and the raising of Lazarus.

The signs in the realm of words were comprised in the use of the words "I am" throughout the Gospel, as when Jesus said "I am the bread of Life," "I am the light of the world," "Before Abraham was, I am," "I am the door," "I am the good Shepherd," "I am the resurrection and the life," "I am the way, the truth and the life," "I am the vine, the truth."

"Jesus" was John's great word, declared the speaker. The name of "Jesus" appearing 176 times in the Gospel of Matthew, 100 times in Luke, and 97 times in Mark, was recorded no less than 256 times in St. John's Gospel.

Dr. Morgan went on to describe the method of the Gospel, in telling the story of Jesus from the 19th verse of the first chapter, leaving the prologue in the first eighteen verses as a principal declaration of the substance of Jesus Himself.

"Jesus was the exigesis of God, and we through all the teaching of this Gospel, the gleaming glory of the resurrection."

HOW TO KEEP YOUNG

He is a man of over seventy years of age, well beyond it, and he might pass for a man of fifty. He has an active step and bright eyes, without spectacles, a straight back and most of his own teeth. He has the vim and pep that many a younger man has lost long ago, so we asked him how he kept his youth. And this is the simple formula:

Eat a breakfast of bread and milk, and always use good sensible food, with enough water to satisfy.

The last item seemed to be the main thing, implementing the old adage, "Rise from the table with an appetite and you will never sit down without one."

POLICE INTERVENTION TO HOLD BACK CROWDS

Police intervention wes needed last night at the Royal Theatre to turn away the crowd in conformity with an order of Fire Chief Gimblet, that the aisles should not be crowded This is a standing order in Picture Houses and Theatres in the interests of the safety of the audience in case of accidents or fire.

In an interview this morning, Mr. McGiechey, manager of the Theatre said the crowds were phenomenal. All available seats were filled at 8 o'clock and the management had difficulty in explaining the circumstances to patrons who appeared after that time.

He said that to avoid a similar difficulty to-night he had decided to run two performance, and if the interest in his English picture keeps up this may be necessary more than once. He is anxious, he said, to keep within the regulations of the Fire Chief and the police department.

This fire order was also responsible for the turning away of hundreds from Geoge Street Methodist Church during the Mission conducted there by Rev. G. Campbell Morgan during the week.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

PERSPIRATION AND DIGESTION

Perspiration depends on the circulation of the blood. The body not only requires nourishment from the blood for cell growth and repair, but also demands the separation and elimination of waste which cannot be converted into blood and which must be thrown off daily in the normal healthy person.

Perspiration is a continuous process, invisible during periods of inactivity or sedentary life. Better condition of play, exercise or work, even in midle age or inrm adults, which will promote a healthy circulation and convey an abundance of blood to the glands of the skin, is desired for increased perspiration.

Physicians of the present day are well aware that the skin does not play the important part it was formerly supposed to perform in elimination. But it is a great cleansing agent and a sort of health barometer which clearly indicates a good circulation by normal perspiration. In addition to this activity, it is better than any medicine in the preservation of health and prevention of disease. It may be said to remove the cause of many disorders such as body poisons, fat excess and clogged glands and is a means of giving renewed strength and body tone.

Perspiration assists the digestion by the promotion of a healthy appetite. The exhilaration and renewal of both body and mind are also aids to proper digestion. Good appetite insures a good supply of blood for the body. Good food makes good blood. The life stream of good blood coursing through your body gives good skin activity by exercise and perspiration and so the wheels of body action are kept in healthy motion.

WORK

Without work no amount of talent, no amount of influence, will carry a man very far in this world. I am amazed at the point of view of some modern young men. They look at the successful men of the day as if they supposed success to be an easy master—giving rich gifts and requiring little in return. I wonder what they would think if they could see the average day's program of one of the men they envy. Theodore Roosevelt left a correspondence that of itself involved more work than the average man does in his active life. Yet it represented only a small part of his activities.

"The higher men climb, the longer their working day. And any young man with a streak of idleness in him might better make up his mind at the beginning that mediocrity is to be his lot. Without immense, sustained effort he will not climb high. And even though fortune or chance were to lift him high he would not stay here. For to keep at the top is harder, almost, than to get there. There are no office hours for leaders."—Cardinal Gibbons.

USING THE MEANS

When one seriously considers the various sorts of entertainment placed on the market under the classification of singing it is enough to mystify anyone not a close student of human nature. It is well enough to fall back upon the old saying "There is no disputing taste" but the question arises "Does not the word 'taste' in this connection imply specific knowledge?" If singing is an art it surely does. If singing includes any more or less tuneful effort on the part of anyone however unenlightened there can of course be no standard and therefore no criticism.

Judging from much of the current comment on singing especially on the study of it there does not appear to be any absolute knowledge of the subject. Each teacher has an ideal concept of tone which he is prone to regard as the only one and so when he tries to place his ideas on paper he can not say too much about the fallacy of trying to explain how to produce the ideal tone. Nine times out of ten he himself does not know how he accomplishes it and so he thinks writing about how to sing is of little value.

The truth of the matter is that there is a way of using the means at the disposal of the singer so that his voice will obey his desires. His tone will not then be a tone obtained by imitation but he will learn to use his own voice in accordance with whatever tone ideals his experience has provided him.

TENANT TELLS IMPRESSIONS OF HIS LANDLORD

BOSTON Sept. 22—The publication of a new life of Phineas Taylor Barnum has made more of a stir than some of us expected. "Is the world interested in Barnum now?" a fair flower of this generation asked me the other day. From the columns of space devoted to reviews of the book the name of Connecticut showman still seems one to conjure with as in the days when he was active head of the "Greatest Show on Earth."

Barnum was landlord of the house I lived in when a child says Fullerton Waldo in the Christian Science Monitor His own pretentious brick manse Marina was across the street. You could get down on your hands and knees and look under the pivet hedge and through the white washed granite posts and see a lawn filled with dark green metal statary. There was Apollo forever holding out a cloak on his arm instead of wrapping himself against the marrow searching breezes that whiffed over the sea wall from Long Island Sound. At a discreet distance was Diana clinging to the horns of her stag. With as much gauzy levity as monumental bronze permits Psyche was poised a tiptoe like a ballerina on the sward between. There was a St. Bernard dog or an equally rigid deer in the way of the lawn mower no matter in what direction it was turned.

Circus Spreads Out

No doubt the high stout fence was necessary for the winter quarters of the show were not far off and the circus had a way of snapping its tethers and dragging its stakes and overlapping into the surrounding region. The animals on the lawn were not troublesome for they were of metal but the live ones might have come marauding to visit their lord and master in the night if Marinda like some moated castle of old had not been engirded by various brist ling defenses.

One night the winter quarters most expensively burned down. The animals scattered to all points of the compass. Two lions chased a bob tailed car along Fairfield avenue. The driver lashed the horses to a gallop but the lions came on. Then he retreated inside the car and peered through the clot in the middle of the door. The lions looked the poor equine boneracks over decided they weren't worth the trouble of picking and trotted off into the natural fastness of Fairfield County to the woods of evergreen.

That night a farmer's wife in the suburbs carried a lantern to the barn to say goodnight to the cow. She saw a great dark creature lazying in the stall where the cow used to be. The cow had moved out to make room. The good woman waved her lantern and cried "Shoo" A royal Bengal tiger scrambled to his feet blinked at the light and coverted away most unroyally.

Paid Little Heed

Beyond a peep through a knot hole once in a while we children paid little heed to the menagerie behind the high gray fence of the winter quarters where the red and gold chariots rusted in idleness till spring. Admission was strictly forbidden

Thus much for the background against which Barnum himself appeared in lustrous effulgence now and then to prove to us that he was the Children's Friend as the billboards told us flamboyantly when the circus took to the road in spring. The picture on the billboard showed him with little tight red dish curls all over the top of his head and a smile occupying most of the front of it sitting with a child on his knee. He was running one hand through the child's hair and with the other he was writing. Maybe it was a book. Maybe he was taking down the child's wise or witty sayings. Or perhaps he was writing out a pass for the circus.

He was a particularly splendid apparation of Barnum Day at the high school. Then there was competitive speaking for prizes of $10 and $20 the interest of a gift of $1 000 to the Board of Education. On one occasion the principal rose in place and solemnly deposed that we had with us this afternoon the generous donor of the prizes himself and therefore it was an occasion fraught with significance in the annals of education. Mr. Barnum left his seat against the wall on a side aisle and lurched forward. His valet must have freshly curled the little spirals that sprouted like the rubicund countenance and his Cheshire smile. He liked to wear ruffled white shirts and a Gladstone collar but the resemblance to Gladstone ended there. He could not make an extended speech and on this occasion he said so candidly.

"Ladies and gentlemen I'm no hand at delivering an oration but in this little red book here"—he produced a small memorandum book from a left hand breast pocket—"I have some funny stories. Would you like me to read you some?" The audience gave assent with various outcries and Barnum opened his book and strode to the edge of the platform. Adjusting his glasses and humbling with the leaves he began to read in a high pitched nasal and quivering voice:

"A Negro woman went into a store and asked for some flesh colored court plaster. They gave her black. She said: 'I don't want that.' They said 'Why?' She said 'I didn't ask for skin color. I asked for flesh color." He laughed merrily at the threadbare tale and looked over his glasses to see if his hearers enjoyed it as much as he did. The applause was thunderous. He read two more stories equally hoary with antiquity and took his seat.

One afternoon he sent his faithful valet across the street to announce that he was coming to call on us his humble tenentry. When the great man himself racaked across our threshold we happened to be engaged in a string trio version of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." My father was conjuring an abysmal voice like that of fire breathing Fafner from the netherest recesses of the cello; sister Edith of the lily throat was evoking melodies sweet as a rat tailed file drawn across a window pane from the higher reaches of the violin. I was digging into the viola as if it were a royal tomb of Luxor. Then Barnum entered. It was rule No. 1 of our musical union that no matter who came in our concord proceeded. Beethoven we thought deserved the homage even of Barnum. The showman chased the cat from the red chair with a fat cushion. He settled far down into it making it creak as if it were a laundry basket. There he drowsed till we came one after another to the last bar of the music. Then he said decisively as if we had asked him what we wanted: "What I like is the music of a big brass band."

Soon after that on a day in spring I was giving my baby an airing in her journey perambulator. The hedge round Marina looked as though it might flower if the gardener did not come with his snippety shears and discourage the young shoots. The cast iron statuary actually seemed to take on a lighter shade of green. There they flaunted those lilacs proud as peacocks. Birds and insects found a rifling insolent way in and out among them. Their dense cluster made a jungle gloom between—there were caverns fit for piracy dividing one odorous mass of purple spires from the next. I forgot the commandment about coveting and thought only of what a brave and joyful sight those flowers would be cramming the baby carriage fore and aft and my sister abloom in the midst of them. I looked at her round small face; and she seemed to say I might.

I shoved the baby carriage into the lee of the bushes and laid about me in the color and the odor piling my spoils on the small pink princess that was my sister to the tune of her delighted gurgles. In my lawlessness I did not stop to look or listen. Then I heard a wrathy shout from the roadway.

"Hey young man What are yo doin'? Qui that an' git out"

It was Barnum friend of good children who paid 50 cents to see the show but not the friend of bad ones who ravaged his lilac bushes.

He was dismounting from his victoria. It gleamed with patent leather and with Brady the coachman and his silk hat. The black horses shone and their nickel plated harness as they tossed their heads impatiently. All Mr. Barnum's teeth were bared at me. He was coming on in a tumbling spluttering haste brandishing a thick cane of the hue of molasses. I knew Brady the coachman. At other times he was my friend. When he was pulling on his clay pipe in the stable shadow he was chatty and when I was playing tennis and the ball rolled his way he retrieved it and threw it back.

Just an Outcast

But now—he had never seen me. Never in his life. He gazed stonily ahead on the blue dance of the waters of Long Island Sound and I was an outcast.

"Don't you know you are stealing?" howled Barnum.

"No sir" I answered ready to shove the baby carriage into the bushes if he got too free and easy with the cane.

"Those are my lilacs" he screamed frothingly.

"I didn't know it sir. I thought they were wild."

"You get out of here" he shouted twirling the cane like a drum major with his staff. "And don't you ever come here again."

"I'm sorry I can't put them back Mr. Barnum. I didn't know they were yours. I thought this grove belonged to anybody. I'll dump them out if you want me to."

He said no more. He turned his wide broadcloth back on me and climbed into the carriage grumping to Brady to drive on.

I see now that Mr. Barnum had a heart within that ruffled bosom and that heavy broadcloth after all. I thought I was saving the baby but she had been the salvation of me. Her blithe face rising in all innocency over the piled profusion of the lilacs was probably all that came between me and a trouncing with that molasses colored cane. But I never quite forgave Brady the coachman for not recognizing me when I was in such need of a friend.

Thus far only the more well-to-do people have built the new houses, but their creator predicts they will become popular with newlyweds and farmers.

For Newlyweds

"Newly married couples will find a solution of a financial problem in these houses," Maybeck says.

"So many couples are afraid to put their money into a house adequate for their present needs, but which may become too small as the years progress.

"One of the principles of the 'one-room' houses is that they shall be built with an eye to the addition of more rooms as necessity demands. And this without sacrificing anything of beauty or utility, and without that 'added-on' appearance so often seen in old-style houses.

"The farmers will find the 'one-room' house economical to build. The farmer's wife, whose duties are usually more numerous than those of her city sister, will find in it a boon toward finishing her work within a reasonable time.

"But I most deeply trust the fact will never be forgotten that these houses are dedicated to the spiritual uplift and broadening of women, and that beauty of architecture, furnishings and surroundings should be predominant."

"NERVES SHOT"

You know the story of the nervous sleeper who, hearing a neighbor drop a shoe, waited for its companion to fall, so he could go back to sleep.

The second shoe was put down quietly, however, because the neighbor remembered the nervous wreck in the next room. Nevertheless the N. W. waited for the second thud, and when it didn't come for a long while, he called out:

"For the love of Mike, when are you going to drop that other shoe?"

The man whose nerves are diseased—"on edge" becomes chronically apprehensive, watchful for a turn for the worse, expecting disaster.

The nervous victim fears and expects additional troubles and complications. With this expectant attitude, he invites what he expects. We create wha we fear. A neurasthenic, suffering from a complication like Beard's disease, becomes convinced that he has organic heart trouble as soon as he gets a touch of intercostal (between-the-ribs) neuralgic pains from indigestion.

An imaginary ailment is worse than the real thing.

All of which is as true of nations as of individuals. Right now America is recovering from a neurasthenic or nervous condition, pandemic, in which we are apprehensive—constantly imagining that we are on the verge of disaster. Hence, crisis after crisis threatens, though it never materializes.

The war aroused us to emotional fury. It over-stimulated our endocrine glands to supply us with energy for fighting the war. It left us with an unbalanced glandular system, nationally. That's what happens to the average neurasthenic. It is what happened to our nation.

Our adrenal glands, stimulated by the war, are slowing down, the nation's nervousness will lapse into calm.

Every politician wants to make the world safe for something, for anything except people.

HOME ENVIRONMENT CAUSE REBELLION.

Woman, Isolated in the Kitchen, Should Be Rescued From Thralldom

By A. H. FREDERICK

How shall we rescue our women from the thralldom of kitchen confinement?

By bringing the kitchen into the living room in a "one-room house," says Bernard Maybeck, internationally famous architect of this city, and creator of the Palace of Fine Arts at the 1915 San Francisco Exposition.

'It is not the work so much as the surroundings that causes rebellions in many homes today," declares the architect.

"Usually the kitchen is placed on that side of the house with the most uninviting outlook.

"The woman is cut off from the companionship of the rest of the family.

"The drabness of the place is augmented by lack of conveniences which makes a stacking of dirty dishes and pans a necessity.

"All in all her surroundings are dreary.

"If they were made inviting, there would be a changed woman. And changed family, too, for the happiness of the family depends upon the woman."

This was the problem that Maybeck set himself to solve. His 40 years as an architect had made him well versed in the psychology of women. He felt confident he had found the causes; now he feels equally certain he has the answer.

Description

The one-room house, which is offered as the new emancipator of womankind, is a variable quantity. Its cost depends upon the style house desired. Its plans depend upon the needs of the individual amily.

But its fundamental principle is the same always, one large room built in the most attractive style possible, a number of small alcoves (scarce large enough to be dignified by the title "room"), a kitchen which places mother in the center of the family and home, and everything designed for the utmost beauty.

Needless to say, the housework outside the kitchen will be minimized by the absence of dirt-attracting corners.

Maybeck admits the impossibility of freeing the house from all unpleasant work, such as doing dishes and washing clothes. But he sets aside one room, the scullery, for such work. This scullery can be closed off from the kitchen before the work is started and after it is finished. Thus is substituted a short concentrated period for the "dirty work" instead of the present long, lingering process.

The kitchen is separate from the living room by a sliding panel. When opened it becomes practically a part of the larger room and gives the house a vista of her beautiful home in its entirety.

Pleasant Surroundings

From the kitchen windows she can see her garden or, depending upon the surroundings, some other beautiful view. For an important part of the design is that these windows shall look only upon pleasant things.

The dining table is in the living room. Near it and within easy reach of the housewife's hand as she dines are three electric burners. Thus she does her light cooking as she eats. When the meal is over the table is converted into a parlor table.

Grouped around this main room and always subserviant to it, are sleeping accommodations, closets, baths and any special nooks that the individual family desires.

The first one-room houses, all in this district, Berkeley, California, are built with much glass. These windows slide up into receiving niches and allow for the house being converted into an almost outdoors structure.

A Great Economy Achieved When McClary's Discovered "Stored Heat"

BUT, you may ask, did McClary's discover it?

And "fireless cookery" has been developed to some extent in this age.

But for all practical purposes of cookery, in perfecting and applying the "stored heat" principle to the electric range—McClary's are the discoverers of the fact that great cooking heat can be retained and "stored"—from electrical current—long after the current has been turned "off".

And so we have embodied in McClary's Electric Range the "stored heat" principle.

(1) McClary's wonderful Electric Oven that bakes or roasts for hours after the current is turned off, retaining heat at such even temperature that one may safely leave a roast or cake in the oven and spend an hour or two away from the kitchen. Or, after cooking a roast, the oven has "stored" enough heat to bake cakes, pies or bread.

(2) McClary's "Tor-Red" Protected Elements, which become so intensely hot that practically all cooking on top of the range may be done on "low" and water heated with current "off".

These exclusive McClary's features effect such economies as to place electric cookery within the reach of all.

Save current and you save the cost of your range.

Consult McClary's dealer as to styles and terms. The large range illustrated is our latest model, designed by a leading Canadian artist.

MUSICAL FESTIVALS AS COMMUNITY BUILDERS

Mr. Granville Bantock, one of the judges at the recent musical festival held in Toronto, made some judicious remarks regarding the choosing of numbers for competitions, and the effect a musical festival has on a community. "I want to speak a word about the choosing of solos," said he. "Both Mr. Greene and I felt the music selected for the songs may have represented a rather more modern spirit. May I suggest, that music should always be of a bright and happy character. We have had to listen to one or two rather mournful songs, and these we have found to have a rather depressing effect upon the competitors as well as on the audience.

"Now, that leads me to the singing of the school choirs. It has been exceptionally interesting and good, and in fact may be received as an object lesson for their elders from a point of view of singing. It has been particularly happy, and the children have enjoyed themselves. You would agree, I am perfectly sure, if you had seen the way they were hopping about yesterday and enjoying themselves while they were singing. We feel very happy with regard to the future of the music in this direction, and with men like Mr. Duncan MacKenzie, the future of the school music is assured.

"These are the first seeds that have been sown, and they will grow up and you will reap a very rich harvest from the seed these children represent. They will be your future competitors, future singers, artists if you like, and future audience, and you have it in your hands as to the future of the festival.

"As to the festival itself, I do not think any words I may say would help you to see the value of the festival. The actual value is at the present time explained in that it brings all classes together—high, low, worker, employer and employee—in friendly rivalry on the same platform. There is no question of reward; no money. Anyone who comes on the platform comes for the love of music, with friendly rivalry and with a marked effect very often on future relationship.

"This is Ontario's first festival. If you had not started this year you would have had to consider starting next year, because you are all aware that there is a festival being held in all the large Western provinces of this country during this month. This present one is the first of a series of five festivals. There is one next week in Winnipeg; then one in Alberta, next one in Saskatchewan, ending with British Columbia's first musical festival in Vancouver. That is an excellent record, following the way we have been working for the last twenty-five years in England.

"Let me just say this, that we feel in England we really cannot go very much further with the festivals. This large organization has absorbed all our energies, and we cannot do more, so we come over here. Here we find such splendid musicians, organizers, and people interested in music as we have not found before, and would say to you that we hand over to you the work which we have seen grow and originate and develop, and ask you to grow with it and build it up into a lasting fabric which will become one of the great glories of the English race, and you are the young people who are going to do this work. I am perfectly sure you will all see the value of it from a national point of view, because it is going to bring the Old Country and the young folks much closer together. We are going to have festivals by your musicians, and ask you to come over and help us at our festival, and to advise us as to what we shall do in the festival. The old people are going to ask the young ones to help us in the future.

"One last word. There is a lot of responsibility and hard work to be done here before the festival is put on a sound financial footing. I would ask you to give this movement your support. We should not be here in Canada now if it were not for the labors of the wonderful Jesuit fathers and missionaries who first ventured into this unknown land. We are reaping the harvest of their labors without doing the hard work. Let us help those who are building up in the Dominion this musical festival idea."

SEVEN MISTAKES OF LIFE

1. The delusion that individual advancement is made by crushing others down.
2. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected.
3. Insisting that a thing is impossible because we ourselves cannot accomplish it.
4. Attempting to compel other persons to believe and live as we do.
5. Neglecting development and refinement of the mind by not acquiring the habit of reading fine literature.
6. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences, in order that important things may be accomplished.
7. The failure to establish the habit of saving money.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Even stewed tomatoes seem to taste better when made with the fresh vegetable than the canned, and the delectable stuffed tomatoes of the tomato season are of course out of the question at any other time.

If the tomatoes are prepared for stuffing an hour before wanted the flesh will remain firmer during the baking and the vegetable will be more attractive.

Ramikins are very convenient to use for stuffed tomatoes, as they make handling for serving unnecessary.

To prepare tomatoes for stuffing: Wash and cut a slice from the stem end. Scoop out the seeds and sprinkle the inside with salt. Turn upside down on a plate and let stand on ice for an hour. The skins will slip off after baking.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Four medium-sized tomatoes, ½ cup cooked macaroni, ½ teaspoon minced onion, 4 teaspoons grated cheese, buttered crumbs.

Prepare tomatoes for stuffing. Reserve pulp and mix with macaroni and onion. Fill cavities with mixture, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and arrange in a buttered baking dish. Add ½ cup water and 1 tablespoon butter and bake half an hour. For the last five minutes of baking sprinkle tops with grated cheese. When cheese is melted remove from oven and serve.

Baked Tomatoes.

Four medium-sized tomatoes, ¼ cup finely chopped cold meat, ¼ cup dried bread crumbs, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 dessertspoon minced parsley, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon minced onion.

Prepare tomatoes as in preceding rule. Mix ingredients and fill tomatoes. Bake in baking dish or ramikins.

Scalloped Tomatoes.

Pare tomatoes and cut in half-inch slices. Put a layer of cracker crumbs in a well-buttered baking dish. Add a layer of tomatoes, sprinkle with minced onion and parsley and shredded green pepper. Add a layer of cracker crumbs, dot with butter and season with salt and pepper. Add another layer of tomatoes and seasoning. Cover with cracker crumbs. Dot with butter. Beat 1 egg with 1 cup milk and pour over the whole. Bake half an hour in a moderate oven.

Stuffed With Fish.

Four medium-sized tomatoes, 1 cup cold cooked fish, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, ½ cup milk, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon minced parsley, few gratings nutmeg, buttered crumbs.

Prepare tomatoes for stuffing, reserving the pulp. Strain to remove seeds. Melt butter, stir in flour, slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Heat tomato juice and stir into sauce. Add fish and seasoning. Fill cavities with mixture and bake half an hour in a moderate oven.

Tomatoes are delicious stuffed with a mixture of ham and shredded pineapple. Bind mixture with cracker crumbs and tomato pulp free from seeds. One teaspoon of brown sugar should be added for each tomato.

THE NEW PLAYER PIANO

Made By Ye Olde Firme Heintzman & Co. Ltd.

The magnificent display of Grand and Upright Pianos shown by Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co. Ltd., includes a new 1924 model Player-Piano that is winning many praises. The case is of mahogany, satin finish, a handsome piece of architecture. Most important of all else in this instrument is the all aluminum player action which eliminates all possibility of air leakage, something liable to occur with a wooden type action. It also means that in years to come the Heintzman & Co. player by means of its aluminum action is still air tight and responsive—the operator does not have to work to obtain results. Daily demonstrations of this new Player-Piano at the Heintzman & Co. Piano Salon. Peterboro Branch, George and Hunter Streets.

THEY DIDN'T WAIT

Every now and then we encounter the proprietor of a small business who, when advertising is suggested as a means of explaining, answers:

Usually, we believe, he is sincere in thinking it, though sometimes the excuse is given merely to avoid the job of thinking the subject clear through to the end.

It often happens that, to the inexperienced, the idea of expending money, even a small amount, for anything except rent and goods, is a sort of financial scarecrow.

Yet the answer is plain and obvious.

Most of the big advertisers of to-day were small advertisers when they began. They knew that a penny saved is too often a dollar lost.

They had something to offer the public. They had faith in themselves. So they confidently told the public what they had to offer.

One of the biggest baking powder manufacturers on the continent, and a big advertiser, began in the back room of a small drug store in an Indiana town. This concern, now an enormous one, started advertising in the local paper to spread the demand.

Gradually the territory expanded as sales resulted. In time the whole State was being covered. Then other States. And finally, almost the world.

This is one of the instances cited by a writer in Printers' Ink Monthly, who has been able to tabulate the initial advertising appropriations of some of the concerns whose publicity is to-day known throughout the country.

A nationally known toilet product was begun as a druggests' sideline, much like the baking powder. Someone advised the druggist to advertise in the local papers. He did. Results came. He extended his advertising and his selling grew in proportion. And never did he see the day when he wanted to stop his advertising.

This is the experience of advertising. Today's leaders began small because they had confidence in what they could furnish the public.

And in case after case it is found that these concerns have earned their advertisint appropriations out of the increased business that followed.

Some people think as if they had the toothache.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

MISTER GROUSE RETURNS

There, on a fallen log, stood the most gorgeous bird that ever happened outside a fairy tale.

Mister Gallop motioned to Nancy and Nick to come nearer to the place where Missez Grouse was talking to Chatterbox Magpie.

So they all slid off their ponies and crept up ever so softly on their hands and knees. They were so close now they could see the wicked gleam in Chatterbox's eyes as he went on teasing poor Missez Grouse about her brown feathers and her plain family.

"Why doesn't your husband stay with you" teased Chatterbox. "Is it because he's ugly, too, and ashamed of being seen? I hear that he goes far back into the mountains and keeps bacrelor's hall."

"Did you ever see my husband?" asked Misses Grouse in queer voice.

"Ha, ha, ha! Ho, ho, ho!" laughed Chatterbox. "That's a good one! Did I ever see him? Why, no indeed! He never stays at home long enough for anybody to see him. 'I'll bet you he's as ugly as a mud fence."

Missez Grouse didn't say anything. Indeed, she didn't appear to be listening to Chatterbox at all, but to something far away.

Then the twins and Mister Gallop heard a faint call that came nearer and nearer, and pretty soon a loud drumming that nearly deafened them.

There, on a fallen log, stood the most gorgeous bird that ever happened outside a fairy tale. He was orange and black and white and brown with bits of red here and there and a double ruffle around his neck. His tail feathers might well have adorned a prince's Sunday hat.

"My goodness, Mister!" gasped Chatterbox, "where did you come from? You're a stranger around these parts, aren't you?"

"No, not a stranger," answered the bird. "I really live here. But I don't stay around much because my colors are so gay I attract too much attention to my family. They have perils tha, you know not of, because you can fly far and fast and can take of yourself. But grouse not only have air creatures to fear, but earth creatures as well, so we must be careful."

"Grouse!" screamed Chatterbox, almost fainting with surprise. "Are you Mister Gadabout Grouse?"

"That's my name," nodded the gorgeous bird. "I've come home to see my family."

"Please excuse me, Missez Grouse," begged Chatterbox weakly. And he looked thoroughly ashamed as he flew away.

HOW TO BECOME GOOD THEATRE ORGANIST

To be a successful theatre organist of the highest type (not the sensational, chord scooping jazz artist), requires good piano technique, supplemented by a course in the technique of organ-playing under a teacher of the legitimate organ-playing school—including the use of both feet in playing the pedals, gaining independence of hands and feet, use of stops, swell pedals, in fact, a complete mastery of the physical or technical resources of the instrument. When the student has acquired the technique of organ-playing his work can be adapted to theatre use, either through his own ability to so adjust it, or by coaching with a theatre organist of the highest type.

Of course, the highest type theatre organist usually has the ability to give the technical training necessary, as well as the adaptation of the organ-playing principles to theatre work. Added to this equipment, the student should acquire the theoretical knowledge necessary to modulate, and if possible, to improvise. The latter requires lengthy and close study and practice for reaching success; and, if the student does not have some natural ability or the time for sufficient study of the subject, it will be far better to limit the work to set compositions, using such excerpts as will fit the situation.

Don't throw away your straw hat. Be honest. Take it back to the cafe where you got it.

They Say—

Interesting Thoughts of Interesting People

CHESTER H. ROWELL in World's Work: "Any economic depression tends to cumulate disproportionately on the farmer. When demand slacks the manufacturer curtails production thus bringing supply and demand nearer together. The farmer's full crop is already produced. General unemployment lowers the purchasing power of his consumers which in turn lowers his own and produces still more industrial unemployment. So the vicious circle repeats itself with the farmer the cumulative victim the only one unable to check the collapse of prices by decreased production. Governmental policies did not produce this law of prices and can not prevent its operation."

AGNES REPPLIER in the Atlantic Monthly: "There is a species of discontent which is more fervently optimistic than all the cheerfulness the world can boast. It is the discontent of the passionate and unpractical reformer who believes as Shelley believed in the perfectibility of the human species and who thinks as Shelley thought that there is a remedy for every disease of civilization."

* * *

CHARLES D. WALCOTT director of the Smithsonian Institution, in an interview: "Art is a distinct financial asset to the nation. We don't yet realize it enough to establish a national gallery of arts which is what we need."

* * *

KATHERINE FULLERTON GEROULD in Harper's Magazine: "If the 'younger generation' has cast away all standards it is because the preservation or the creation of standards is hard work. We do not. I fancy write free verse originally because we believe in free verse—we write it because it is easier than metrical forms. Then because we are determined to be not only clever but good not only good but clever we invent poetic theories to fit our productions. The younger generation finds it easier to ignore everything produced before 1900 than to learn something about art and letters as they were developed before that shining date therefore it says that no art worth the name existed before the Twentieth Century. The ignorance would not so much matter if it called it self ignorance; when it masquerades as knowledge it becomes a menace."

TO PRESERVE CHILDREN

Take one large grassy field, one-half dozen children, two or three small dogs, a pinch of brook, and some pebbles. Mix the children and dogs well together and put them in the field, stirring constantly. Pour the brook over the pebbles, sprinkle the field with flowers. Spread over all a deep-blue sky, and bake in the hot sun. When brown, remove and place in a bath tub to cool.—Michigan Health Bulletin.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Mrs. J. Wilks Receives Sad News--Personal.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 22. — The late W. S. Given, whose death occurred on Thursday, September 13th after a very brief illness, was born in Blenheim Township Oxford County, sixty-four years ago. He resided on the home farm with his parents, both of whom predeceased him, until his young manhood when he attended Woodstock Baptist College, then known as the Canadian Literary Institute, and afterwards was a student at Brantford College. The late Mr. Given came to Millbrook from Paisley Ont., in 1893, purchasing the "Reporter" from Mr. R. R. Elliott, and successfully conducting this paper for the following thirty years until the time of his death. Deceased was always an ardent advocate for the best interests of the community, and his obituary writings were excelled by none being a source of comfort and inspiration to Reporter readers both far and near. Besides being a member of the Municipal Council, Mr. Given served the village as reeve for seven years from 1902 to 1909. He succeeded the late W. W. Gillott as town clerk holding this position until his decease, and he was also clerk of the Fourth Division Court, a Past President of the Millbrook Central Exhibition, and for many years an active worker in the Presbyterian Sunday School in association with the late William Archer.

In fraternal circles deceased was one of the oldest Past Grands of Millbrook Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 308 and until recent years always took an active interest in this Society. He was financial secretary of the local Canadian Order of Forresters' Lodge and a prominent member of the Conservative Association, holding the office of president of the Millbrook Branch, and of secretary in the East Durham organization.

The funeral, which was very largely attended took place on Tuesday, September 18th from his late residence Tupper street, and was under the direction of Millbrook lodge I.O.O.F., the local band heading the cortege to the Presbyterian cemetery, where deceased was laid in his last resting-place. His pastor, Rev. G. S. Gervan had charge of the services at the house and grave side, Brother V. R. Hunter P.G., officiating during the Oddfellows' ritual, and the bearers being: Messrs. A. A. Smith D. Hampton, T. H. Bradley, J. H. McGill, A. Kelly and A. J. Henderson.

Many beautiful floral tributes were laid upon his casket testifying to the affection and esteem in which deceased was held. The immediate surviving relatives, to whom the sincere sympathy of the entire community is extended in their hour of severe bereavement, ar his widow, one daughter, Edna, (Mrs. F. J. Ellis), of Shreveport, La., and two sons, R. F. Given of Toronto, and Harvey L. of Stettler, Alberta; three grandchildren Dorothy Glynn, Margery and W. Ellis, of Shreveport, La., also two brothers, John O., of Drumbo and Robert of Hamilton.

Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were: Senator Mulholland, P. L. Brown of the "imes," S. O. Taylor, Alex. Noble, and George S. Thorne of Port Hope Mr. and Mrs. R. Given, of Drumbo, Mrs. G. Carter of Paisley Misses Maude and Phoebe Rusk, of Hamilton M. and Mrs. R. F. Given of Toronto, Mrs. (Dr.) Ellis, of Shreveport, La., and Mr. H. L. Given of Stettler, Alta.

Mrs. (Rev.)J. Wilks has received the sad news that her only sister, Jessie wife of Mr. Frank Raines, of Vancouver, B. C., passed away very suddenly on Thursday, September 13th at her home in the West. Mrs. Raines had been in poor health for some time but her decease, which occurred while eating lunch, came as a great shock to her family and friends. Deceased had a large circle of friends in Peterboro, Millbrook, and Uxbridge.

Rev. S. T. and Mrs. Tucker, Miss A. Hampton Mrs. Rea and Miss Stella Hetherington motored to Peterboro on Wednesday and attended the Bible study meeting conducted by Dr. Campbell Morgan.

NEW RECRUIT TO ORBS OF HEAVEN

Located South of Big Dipper by Professor Jordan

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept 22.—The densest star in the known universe has been discovered by Prof. F. C. Jordan, of the Allegheny Observatory here. It is as solid as the surface rocks of the earth and as compact as the planet so brightly that Prof. Jordan was able to determine that it is what astronomers call an eclipsing variable, made up of two elliptical or egg-shaped stars which whirl round and round, one of them blotting out the light of the other at regular intervals.

The newly discovered variable sta, as yet designated simply as "New Variable," is not visible to naked eye since its magnitude is about eleven, but it is in the constellation of Coma Berenices, which is located a little south of the Big Dipper.

How a star can shine so brightly and yet have a density of the most enduring earthly granite is a mystery to astronomers. "New Variable" is from 3.1 to 4.8 times as solid as water and from 2.2 to 3.4 times as dense as our sun, which is a very compactly built star itself. The average density of all stars is only one-tenth that of water. If an ordinary star were cool enough, a person might enter one, if transported there a la Jules Verne, and not realize it.

But Prof. Jordan's star is nearly as solid as the earth which, taken as a whole, is 5.5 times as dense as water. It may be more compact than the moon, which is 3.3 times water's density or Mars, which rates 3.6. It exceeds in solidity Jupiter with density of 1.6 and red Saturn which is only six-tenths as compact as water.

Is Burning Out

The life of the densest star of the known universe is nearly over, astronomically speaking. It is a dwarf that [illegible] Prof. Jordan's observations show. Stars that are in the class of eclipsing variables are as a rule more dense than either the red giants such as Antares and Betelgeuse. The variable stars average in density one-eighth that of the sun, the great red giants are about one-thousandth the density of air at the surface of the earth. Most of the stars are mere vapor, even our very dense sun is only 1.4 times as solid as water, and it is understandable that their material could give off light that can be seen from the earth. But the luminescence of such a solid body as "New Variable" is puzzling to account for, astronomers declare.

The distance of the densest star from the earth has not yet been determined.

The density of "New Variable" was determined by computation based on the data for its period and the total duration of its eclipse.

The previously known star closest in character to the new star is W Ursæ Majoris in the same part of the heavens, which is 2.5 times as dense as water.

"New Variable" is also the star with the shortest period yet known, amounting to about six hours. W. Ursæ Marjoris ranks third in short periods while SW Lacertæ is second.

OBSERVATIONS

Very many of these small vehicles, with go-carts, Buster wagons and even a wheelbarrow were in evidence. Manifestedly such may not be taken among the seats of the stand. With the weather promising rain, these small belongings were parked in any old place. The far end of the passage in front of the seats held a huddle of carts while the owners went higher up. There is ample space given over to the approach to the grand stand and where some sort of a canvas shelter could be put up, against the fence. Sort of House of Refuge, and relieve the anxiety of many young mothers. Mothers of advanced years do not lug children of tender years to the stand. These mothers have had experience. And when spells of rain came on the Man at the Gate collected the carriages and got the assortment under cover, of a kind, lest the small belongings get wet and damp. The suggestion as to the cover is respectfully handed to Webber Turner, who has both the goods and the will, to immortalize himself and earn the grateful thanks of many a young mother. Webber will do all that's needed, for he was young himself, once.

It is worth while referring to Children's Day. It was some day, believe me. When in the early afternoon it was made known that the grand stand was free to children, a flight began, every blessed kid making for the West. In some mysterious way the news was circulated. Hundreds hastened along the approach, urged by the encouraging remarks from Fred Bullied, who dearly likes a free-for-all. Despite his entreaties, none paused to secure a hot-dog. Even the consoling assurance from Bullied that he fried his dogs in butter, whereas his neighbour used margarine, fell on deaf ears. Appetite waited on pleasure, for once.

Droves of children skidded along the track, indifferent to the pleading of the traffic cop that no one get hurt. Children collided with one another, tripped and fell, and hastened on. Boys climbed the fences. Girls, decorously, waited to pass the gate, and the side gates opened far too slowly. Hundreds raced up the plateau of seats and hurled themselves into place. Several incipient fights started amidst excitement, encouragement and cheers. It seemed to be a part of the game. One breathless boy, on being assured that the stand was free ejaculated, in the language of Al. Plunkett, "Oh, Gee, Oh, Gosh, Oh, Golly, ain't that fine," and skipped up the line to find his chum. As he raced along the open seats to the covered part, stumbled and fell and flung an overflowing ice cream cone into the lap of a very young and daintily frocked lady. Her indignant remonstrance was lost on the offender who sorrowed only for his confection, ruined beyond redemption.

Nothing appeals to the boyish imagination and heart like a free show. Ask old men, who as boys have spent waiting hours to make their sneak under the flap of the canvas at the early circus. That sentiment and feeling is what makes the whole generation of adults kin with the boys. Girls were a trifle more subdued, as becomes the sex, but not less excited and expectant.

My land, with what anxiety all waited for the ponies and dogs, and when the turn came on half the contents of the stand rose as one man to get a better view. The smallest pony and the littliest dog were the esteemed favorites. Children's Day extended into the night, we were assured, and hundreds came back in the evening, and braved the wet and cold to view as best they might, the glories of the vaudeville again. The Directors are to be thanked for the gracious intention that made the first day, "The Day" and happy memories will accrue to all who participated. Kids did not count on the turnstiles, else the attendance record would have been shattered.

Who can measure the love of work in woman. And she best excels when working for those she loves or for some object that engages her womanly assistance. The truth of this is seen in the efforts of a couple of score of women, who gave up the whole week and worked for the several churches in which interested. Such work! Done under difficulties. The Ladies' Aids of the several bodies represented will please accept hard-earned money. Gained too, without any time-and-a-half for overtime. Men keep away from such voluntary ventures, lacking patience and application of the kind needed.

To ease the situation of the daily grind, especially in the smaller tents and booths, a board floor is an absolute necessity and if in use, adds wonderfully to the convenience, with a lessening of the strain of the hustle and work. The larger tents could not be so supplied. The ground is uneven, so much so that one woman gained a sprained knee from stepping into a hole.

The sizes of tents are now standardized and floors could be devised in sections to match. Several churches are represented in this form of Christian Endeavor as seen at the Fair, year after year. A part of the proceeds, if any, should be invested in such floors. There is ample storage for over winter. At the American Canoe Association Meets at Sugar Island, near Gananoque, such floors have been in use for many years, rented to canoeists, season after season, bringing in a nice revenue on the investment.

CHAMPION HUNTER BAGS ALMOST TEN THOUSAND WOLVES

ADAM LESMEISTER, "WORLD'S CHAMPION WOLF HUNTER," WITH THREE AND A HALF DAYS' CATCH. THERE ARE 65 COYOTE PELTS. LESMEISTER'S FOURTEEN-YEAR-OLD SON, WENDLEND, IS IN THE WAGON. DOGS, LEFT TO RIGHT: GRUMBO, TIFFY, TEDDY, TAG.

BISMARCK N. Da., Sept' 21—Adam Lesmeister, rotund and good-natured, believes himself to be the champion wolf hunter of the world—with 9343 to his credit. No one rises in the northwest to dispute his claim, either.

Lesmeister started what to him is both a sport and business back in 1898. He has collected nearly $27,000 in bounty, money paid hunters for killing the natural enemies of ranchers.

The champion came to his calling naturally. His father, a native of Russia, hunted wolves near Odessa.

Twenty-five years ago the family moved to North Dakota.

Here Lesmeiter gained fame. He boasts he never shot a wolf in his life. His dogs do the work, after he picks the place for them to hunt.

Many "close calls" have been the lot of the hunter. Once he went into a wolf den after a litter. There he encountered a mother wolf. With his club he pinned her against the back of the cave and then clamped his hands over her jaws until others dug him out.

Coyotes, or prairie wolves, have been his main victims. He had no respect for them.

Lesmeister usually hunts alone. He takes a buckboard and two fast horses, and his dogs. Grumbo, a cross between a Russian stag and a German boar hound; Tiffy and Teddy, crosses between English grey hounds and German staghounds, and Tag, a cross between a Russian stag and English grey hound, make up his hunting party.

And Lesmeister brings in the wolves.

AFTER-HARVEST WORK AGAINST WEEDS.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The time to start fighting weeds is in the spring, and among the prerequisites to success is the early sowing of clean plump seed, of suitable varieties, in a seed-bed that is well-prepared as regards drainage, fertility and tilth. By starting the crop vigorously it is enabled to hold its own to the end with the minimum growth and seeding of weeds. However in spite of the best of care there will always be weeds demanding some extra attention. In cultivated crops this can be given the season through, and especially before harvest; in grain and hay there is little opportunity until the crop is off. If not delayed then too long, many of the weeds of these crops can still be taken in hand, and some of them with the greatest of timeliness.

Some weeds like ragweed and Russian thistle push up rapidly about this time. Where grain has been seeded weed growth may have to be kept down by the use of the morwer, but other stubble should be worked over by means of a disc harrow or cultivator, or plowed very lightly. Besides preventing the seeding of weeds, this also makes conditions favorable for the germination of seeds already in the surface soil, which can be destroyed in the later fall plowing. Some seeds—wild oats for example—do not germinate readily, if at all, the first season, but any farmer who has practised after-harvest cultivation knows that considerable germination of many weeds can be induced in favorable years.

After-harvest plowing of weedy hay it is also desirable at the first opportunity that occurs. Such persistent perennials as counch grass, Canada and sow thistles, the hawkweeds, ox-eye daisy, etc., are probably at their weakest after using up their reserves in the attempt to mature seed, which timely cutting of the hay should prevent. Plowing at this season is not always the easiest done, but the dryness of the ground, if it does not prevent thorough work, is all to the good in weed destruction; couch grass, indeed, might well be left alone unless the ground is somewhat dry. The plowing at this time need not be deep; for couch grass particularly it should be only deep enough to get beneath the matted surface rootstocks. After plowing the object will be to drag the rootstocks into the drying sun by means of a spring tooth or other implement. Thistles and sow thistles will not be so readily dragged out, and can best be dealt with by the use of a duck-foot cultivator to keep all growth cut off as often as it appears. The amount of fallowing thus possible after the removal of a crop should go a long way toward cleaning a field, or at the least preparing for a cleaning hoed crop the following year. A rotation which allows of this procedure every three to five years will hold weeds reasonably well under control.

Many of the worst weeds of crops are also commonly weeds of waysides, pastures and waste places and should be cut by means of mower, scythe or spud, or hand-pulled after a rain, if only to prevent their seeding. Places which can be broken up and cleaned may be later reseeded if so desired, using strong-growing grasses and clovers which will fully occupy the ground. Besides removing a menace to crops—and often to good-will among neighbors—a little puttering about in odd corners of the farm works wonders in making the old place more likeable. After midsummer such weeds rapidly become conspicuous, and may well claim some of the hours or half-days when wet weather has upset other plans.

THANK GOD FOR FOOLS

Thank God for fools—for men who dare to dream
Beyond the lean horizon of their days.
Men not too timid to pursue the gleam
To unguessed lands of wonder and amaze.

Thank God for fools. 'The trails that ring the world
Are dark with blood and sweat where they have passed.
Theirs are the flags on every crag unfurled:
Theirs—ashes and oblivion at last.

Blundering, fumbling up the frowning years:
Stumbling through deeps too foul for moon or star:
Hearing—and heeding not—the scoffs, the jeers:
Falling at last while yet the goal was far.

Poor ragamuffin heroes, doomed to fail,
And leave their bones beneath ironic skies,
They never knew their wandering blazed the trail,
Their blunders taught their wisdom to the wise

Thank God for fools—absurd and blind and great,
We rear our temples on the stones they laid.
Ours is the prize their tired souls might not wait:
Theirs—the high requiem of the unafraid.

A PLEDGE

By Dr. Charles S. Medbury, Des Moines, Iowa.

To this day that is mine, my country's and my God's, I dedicate my all. My talents, every one, shall be held subject to the sight draft of the emergencies of others. I will enlarge my soul by cultivating love for those against whom I feel myself recoiling. No man shall ever feel his caste in my presence, for within my heart of hearts there shall be no consciousness of it. The man who has fallen will find in me a friend, the woman down—a helper. And more than this: Those falling shall have my trust that they may still stand. The cry of every child shall find my heart, whether it be cry of need or aspiration. Cherishing every life of whatever land or race and mindful of hidtlen struggles, in all things I will strive to help. No word shall ever cross my lips that hurts another in face, form, station or estate. My own weaknesses, foibles, sins, shall chasten speech and spirit and deny me pride. My life shall be a dedicated thing; I shall count it desecration so pervert it. The vandal hands of lust and hate and greed shall not be permitted to despoil. And thus I do resolve—not because I am good, but that I want to be; not because I am strong, but that I fear weakness; not that I feel my self above others, but that with all my heart and soul and strength I long to be of humankind both helped and helper. So do I dedicate my days; so do I set apart my culture; so do I receive but to give again to others; so do I press humbly into the presence of the Sacrificial Son of Man, crying out in eager consecration: "Master, let me follow thee. Wherever the world needs ministry, wherever life is still to be given for the many, help me, thou whose manger cradle brought democracy to life, to meet in my own worth democracy's final test and to my own great day be true."

NON-STOP RAILWAY

LONDON, Sept. 22 (Canadian Press)—A possible solution of the traffic problem in big cities is the "never-stop" railway, a test of which new method of transit is to be made in the near future at Southend-on-Sea. It is believed to have remarkable possibilities in the way of relieving the passenger traffic congestion of large cities, certainly an acute and serious problem in London and Paris.

At Southend-on-Sea a never-stop railway system is in course of completion. This system is the invention of W. Yorath Lewis, a well-known engineer and his associates, and consists essentially in the use of travelling carriages of a simple type, close together, which never stop, passing through stations at such a slow speed that anyone can step on or off, but shooting up instantly to a high speed between the stations. In this way the great loss of time in starting and stopping ordinary trains whether electric or steam is avoided—not only the time of the actual stoppage, but also the loss of acceleration immediately before and after.

The method was first described at the British Association meeting of 1911, but although a small experimental railway on these lines was erected at Ipswich there has hitherto been no means of testing the idea on a practical scale.

The equipment now under completion at Southend consists of two parallel tracks six feet apart from centre to centre and 300 yards long, joined together at each end in the form of a curve of no more than three feet radius. Between the rails is a large "skeleton" screw-thread or spiral arrangement constructed of a heavy central steel tube with spokes carrying a flat steel bar forming the spiral, the whole rotating at a constant speed and driven by an electric motor with suitable gearings at each end of the track. The driving screw comes to an end at the curves, but the carriages are conveyed round and engage in the other spiral again by an arm arrangement driven by a worm wheel geared to the driving shafts.

The carriages are roofed in but open at one side, each carrying eight people seated and four standing, running with rubber shod wheels on the broad rails, and under the frame they engage with the rotating screw or spiral by means of a special projecting arm carrying two rollers. That is to say, as the long driving screw-thread revolves, in conjunction with the end driving mechanism, it conveys the carriages along the track and continuously around the whole circuit. The system is so designed that though the screw-thread revolves at a constant speed, the pitch of the thread—that is, the distances between each of the spirals or teeth—is different. When therefore, the carriage enters a portion of the screw-thread where the teeth or spirals are close together it travels very slowly, but when the screw widens out again—that is, when the teeth get further away from each other—the carriage speeds up.

The arrangement is such that the carriage never stops travelling, since the screw is continuously revolving at one speed, but by a suitable alteration in the pitch of the thread at intervals it slows down to 1-3 miles per hour when passing through stations, and when clear of these shoots up at once to about 24 miles an hour. The passengers step in and out of the trains without difficulty, because of the slow speed, just as they do in the case of a moving stair case.

Many criticisms naturally suggest themselves to engineers, particularly the wear and tear on the driving spirals and the methods of stopping the entire series of carriages, but whether the system will justify the hopes of the inventors or not, it is an ingenious and well-thought out method which will occupy the earnest attention of traffic engineers throughout the world.

WHERE DO WHALES GO WHEN THEY DISAPPEAR?

LONDON (By mail to United Press).—Where do whales go? Ever since the days when the Dutch established blubber headquarters at Smeerenburg, in Spitzbergen, and began the chase with their more than three hundred vessels, driving the whales out of southern into northern waters, and finally, aided by the flourishing ability of British harpoon-throwers, into regions unknown, this has been a moot question.

In recent years, with the gradual disappearance of the monsters from their haunts of the last century or so, experiments have been carried out in an effort to throw some light on the question.

Now the colonial office of the British government, planning to work through a crew of daring South Sea fishermen, is preparing to make another attempt. "The Discovery," the wooden schooner on which Captain Scott made his successful journey to the South Polar regions prior to his last expedition to the Terra Nova, lies at Portsmouth. She is being overhauled for the job. Acquired by the Falkland Islands government, she is to conduct the research in the whaling districts around South Georgia.

The "Discovery" is to carry a motor launch in which harpooners will get as close as possible to whales that are observed. With harpoons they will scratch marks on the whales' bodies. The harpoons will be distinguishable by a peculiar design, and probably numbered, so that should they be left in the whale and found later they will be recognized. Whalefishermen everywhere wil be made to trace the whales marked.

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

How Diseases Are Decreasing

THE past year was the most healthful one in the history of the United States and Canada of any save one, the exception being 1921, and the margin between the two years is insignificantly small. One of the great life insurance companies issues a statistical bulletin, in which is carefully recorded the mortality figures of policy holders and has found that the death rate of these millions of insured persons was 8.8 per thousand lives in 1922, and 8.7 per thousand lives in 1921. These figures differ from those issued by the Government, but the general proportion is maintained. The reason that this year fell back slightly was because of the influenza outbreak in the early months of 1922, which made the record higher than that in 1921, although the latter half of the year showed the best health record ever made during the past fifteen or twenty years, according to Science and Invention.

There was a sharp decline in death from tuberculosis, which eleven years ago was way in the lead as a cause of mortality. From this ranking position it has been displaced, so that now it is second in importance to organic heart diseases. The decline in deaths from tuberculosis was not so marked among white individuals as among colored persons. Typhoid fever was lower among insured wage-earners in 1922, and the communicable diseases of children, such as diphtheria, scarlet fever and whooping cough, show a lower death-rate during the year, although the measles death-rate rose slightly. The diphtheria death-rate was the lowest recorded in the past eleven years among insured wage-earners, and the same is true of the whooping cough.

The scarlet fever rate was lower than in 1919, 1920, or 1921. Diarrhoeal conditions likewise took a slump, and there were fewer deaths than in former years from accidents not specified in the following sentence, drowning, burns, suicides and homicides. Deaths from drowning and burning have shown a downward trend ever since 1911. Influenza, pneumonia, organic diseases of the heart, diabetes, automobile accidents and machinery accidents increased, the mortality statistics showing that 1922 was not as favorable as 1921 for these diseases and accidents. The upward movement of heart disease mortality occurred beyond the forty-fifth year, while in children and also in adolescents the rating was normal. Cerebral hemorrhages were slightly higher this year than last year.

The diabetes rate increased 10 per cent during the year 1922, the highest recorded in twelve years, and alcoholism due to ordinary liquors, not to wood alcohol poisoning, rose as indicated by the statistical bulletin above referred to, from .9 per one hundred thousand to 2.1, or an increase of 133 per cent. This is the highest death rate recorded for alcoholism since 1917, but it is still much lower than the rates in the years prior to 1918. These figures would indicate, therefore, that prohibition was of value in causing a marked decrease in the number of deaths due to alcoholism, because from 1917 to 1920 there was a downward trend in such mortality. Seventy-one individuals died from wood alcohol poisoning in 1921, but the record of victims of this drug have not been tabulated for 1922 up to the present time. Cirrhosis of the liver also declined. Machinery accidents recorded a sixty per cent. increase.

And now a challenge has been issued to the instinct of self-preservation of the American and Canadian populations. During 1922 the number of deaths caused by automobile accidents increased 10.7 per cent over the 1921 figure. The 1922 record caused the loss of lives at nearly six times the rate of 1911, and (you may write this on your cuff) 48 per cent of the deaths were of children under fifteen years of age.

In the general population for the registration area, exclusive of Hawaii, it is found that the death-rate for 1920 was lower than for any year since the publication of annual reports in three of the items listed. These three are typhoid fever, enteritis and tuberculosis. On the other hand, the rate from diphtheria, croup and cancer is higher.

Very interesting information is given by the John Wiley publication, "Vital Statistics," by George Chandler Whipple, standard text work on the science of demography. It would be well for anyone interested in living long to read this most excellent work. According to the author in question, it is found that the ideal family would consist of a father, a mother, three children and an occasional grandfather, grandmother, aunt or uncle. As the average number of persons per family in the United States is only 4.3, it is evident that the nation's families are much smaller than the ideal. It is surprising to note the number of persons, about .14 per cent, who really do not know their own age, and also that the population of the United States is increasing in spite of the rather difficult times. For instance, in 1918 there were seventy-three deaths for each one hundred births, but this was a high rate of mortality, effected by the influenza epidemic, which reigned at that time. In 1919 there were only fifty-eight deaths per one hundred births in the United States. In England the figures were ninety-two and seventy-three for the two years, respectively, whereas in Vienna and France the death-rate was appallingly high. In the non-invaded portions of France there were one hundred and ninety-eight deaths per one hundred births for the year 1918, which means that the population of France is decreasing rapidly, and in Vienna two hundred and twenty-nine and one hundred and sixty-two were the figures, respectively, for the two years mentioned per one hundred births.

WHERE YOUR IDEAS COME FROM

BY DONALD A. LAIRD

JOHN LOCKE became one of the most eminent philosophers of the eighteenth century when he emphatically disclosed the origin of man's ideas. Before him it had been thought that many ideas such as of virtue, morality and almost countless other ideas were inborn. It had been previously thought that one was born with these ideas latent in his mentality and that as years unfolded these ideas ripened.

John Locke was skeptical about this and after long study showed how such was not the case. Those who preceded him had almost of a verity inherited their ideas. They found them printed in the books of the day and were content to accept them as final. But not so with Locke. He wanted to work out things for himself, and by so doing he became a great man. His ideas were not inherited; they did not belong to his ancestors. He worked them out himself and by so doing emblazoned his name among the leaders of thought of all time.

He compared the human mind to a tablet of wax. Nothing is writtr upon this tablet at birth so far as ideas are concerned. With each day's experience there is written upon this wax tablet of the mind the happenings of that day. Thus a storehouse of experience is built and filled with information. With the growth of this storehouse ideas also begin to be built up. The experiences and information are indispensable, for without them there would be no ideas in the mind. Each experience furnishes the germ, as it were, of an idea. Each added experience aids in supplying material for more and better and more serviceable ideas.

That is one of the main purposes of an education. It does not supply ideas, it does not bring out ideas within the mind that have been passed down by ancestors. An education serves to build up a vast storehouse of experience. The experiences of the ages are condensed and may be absorbed from books and teachers. It may be impossible for one to leave the country of his birth, but by reading and attending schools he is given a world experience, not a skimpy country experience. Herein lies one of the reasons for the great differences which are so readily apparent between men. The one has gained experience after experience through travel or through reading.

This is also one of the reasons for the great differences between those who have travelled extensively. The one in his visits to the remotest parts of the earth has always sought out that which is familiar. The other has acquired a richer experience by going to the places that will furnish him with a new series of experiences.

The person with many ideas does not necessarily have an inherited mental advantage over those with lesser and poorer ideas. Experience alone may be able to bring about the difference. This has a hopeful outlook. One cannot control his ancestral lineage, but his experiences are a personal matter.

Are FLOWERS Losing Their SCENT?

IS science destroying the scent of sweet-smelling flowers? Enthusiastic horticulturists have lately been stating that scientific interference with the process of nature is robbing the old simple products of their exquisite perfumes. The instance is quoted of the old-fashioned musk, and it is declared that cross-fertilization has entirely deprived it of its fragrance.

In discussing the question, Mr. J. L. North, of the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, said that since 1890 the perfume of the musk had vanished. He did not believe that cross-fertilization had anything to do with it, but he could not explain the mystery.

"The fragrance of the plant is not for our pleasure," he went on. "It is a means of attracting insects to fertilize it, and, therefore, it is a necessity of nature to keep it up. If it lost its scent it would have no attraction for insects and would eventually die out.

"The object of the florist is to improve the flower in its coloring, size and substance—in fact, to paint the lily. He cares nothing for the perfume.

"Our common roses are very sweet-smelling; but if you go to a flower show you will find that very few of the roses, most beautiful to look at, have any perfume. By increasing the color and size, florists do away with the perfume of the flowers, and all the energy of the blooms is used in making up this extra substance. The cultivated plant finds it does not need to perpetuate itself by attracting insects, as man does the fertilization for it. Therefore it does not waste its time or labor on producing a scent that is not required.

"That scent is nature's means of fertilization is proved by the fact that flowers that are wind-fertilized or attract insects by their brilliant coloring do not possess any perfume. Some flowers that attract night-flying insects have a much stronger perfume at night, or only emit it when it is needed. They cannot afford to waste it in a promiscuous fashion.

"A species of big water-lily only gives forth perfume during the period of fertilization. Carrion flowers, such as arums, give off a smell which is attractive to flies and bluebottles, and when they have captured sufficient of these insects the scent ceases.

"In some of the tropical arums the smell is so intense that it is almost impossible to stay in a room while they are attracting insects for fertilization purposes.

"If man continues to fertilize flowers they will lose the necessity of producing perfume. Leave them in their natural state and their fragrance will continue."

Who Wears the Heaviest Clothing—Men or Women?

THERE has lately been a deal of discussion as to men's dress being too heavy for really warm weather. During a recent spell of hot weather over in London there was started a warm discussion as to whether men or women wore the heavier clothing. While the majority held that the advantage is all with women, who are able to dress so much more lightly, one London man was not so sure about it and proceeded to make an investigation, the results of which he sets forth in London Tit-Bits.

"Using a pair of fairly accurate scales," he says, "I have been weighing a number of articles of attire of both sexes, and I have come to the conclusion that woman's main advantage lies in the fact that her garments are more open about the neck and arms. So far as actual weight goes, and taking into consideration that the average man weighs at least twenty pounds more than the average woman, the garb of the fair sex has no great advantage.

"Take hats, to begin with. A man's straw hat weighs just under four ounces, a felt weighs five ounces to six ounces, a bowler, which looks so hard and heavy, weighs just five ounces; even a silk hat of modern make weighs barely six ounces. Yet a number of women's hats which I have weighed averaged out at just over seven ounces apiece. One weighed over nine ounces.

"A pair of woman's walking shoes (average size) weigh just under one pound, as compared with one pound eleven ounces for a pair of men's shoes (size 7).

"Socks and stockings come out about the same. A pair of thin mercerized cotton socks weigh under two ounces; a pair of light stockings of similar material weigh one and three-quarter ounces.

"A man's underwear (Indian gauze) pulls the scale, at seven ounces only; a silk or thin mercerized shirt is just the same weight.

"A woman's silk underwear and lingerie are decidedly in excess of this weight, amounting in all to nearly eighteen ounces. But then you must add four ounces for the man's braces, collar and tie, so really the two work out about evenly.

"When you come to a suit of men's clothes as computed with a woman's dress, then I must admit that the woman scores.

"Weighing an ordinary flannel suit (coat and trousers) I find it pulls the scales at two pounds fourteen ounces. But this is a suit belonging to a tall man and the coat is lined.

"It would be perfectly easy to get a somewhat lighter suit, and it would, I think, be fair to put the average weight of such a suit at two and one-half pounds.

"As compared with this, a woman's Summer dress is fully one and a quarter pounds lighter. But the difference is made up by the fact that a man does not wear corsets. An average pair of corsets weight one pound two ounces, though, of course, the broad belt which so many women wear is a good deal lighter than this.

"In the way of steatras, woman is decidedly handicapped. She carries a sunshade weighing eight to twelve ounces, a pair of gloves weighing one and one-half ounces, and a handbag weighing nearly one pound.

"The man has only gloves of two ounces, a stick of five to six ounces, and no bag.

"So it works out like this, which, I think, proves that man can, after all, attire himself just as lightly as the other sex:

Hat		4	.....	7
Shoes	1	11	.....	15
Socks		2	Stockings	1¾
Underwear .	1	2	 2	4
Suit	2	8	 1	4
	5	11	4	15¾

"This table undoubtedly proves that woman carries a lighter weight—but you must remember that man has all his additional strength to help him with the twelve or so extra ounces of clothes that he carries."

PAPER Now MADE from RUBBER

PAPER of a tough, crackless nature can now be made out of rubber as the result of a process recently discovered by Frederick Kaye, an English chemist. Since then, both in this country and in England, paper manufacturers have been experimenting with a view to making the process of commercial value.

To date the use of rubber in paper is not on a commercial basis. There will have to be a long period of experimentation before deductions can be made and conclusions reached.

What makes the use of rubber in paper particularly interesting is the fact that the latex, or virgin rubber, is for the first time being proposed for commercial use. The latex as shipped to this country from the rubber plantations of Brazil or the Far East differs from the sap that comes from the rubber trees only in the addition of a small quantity of ammonia to keep the rubber from coagulating and of a small amount of water.

What reaches this country is a white viscous emulsion, resembling heavy cream in appearance and containing from 20 to 25 per cent of rubber in solution. Chemists have seen commercial possibilities in this latex for several years, but it is only recently that these possibilities have seemed likely of realization.

When Kaye discovered that latex could be mixed with pulp in the beating machine, and that this mixture of rubber with wood fibers produced a paper that was as good to the eye, as smooth as and somewhat stronger than ordinary paper, he indicated a use for virgin rubber that has taken up the interest of paper manufacturers ever since.

The use of from 1 to 5 per cent of rubber in paper produces a paper that has a greater tensile strength, a greater bursting strength and a greater folding resistance. This means a paper that tears less easily, resists more perpendicular pressure and folds without cracking.

SELENIUM, the Metal of MYSTERY

SCIENTISTS, in experimenting and perfecting the apparatus for photographic transmission by wire or radio, base their operations on a substance little known to the layman that is called selenium. Its exact nature is not known—some say and some deny that it is a metal. It occupies a place in the scale of elements between sulphur and tellurium. But whatever it may be, it possesses a property of electrical resistance varying with the intensity of light to which it is exposed.

Selenium, says Kenneth M. Swezey, in the Radio Globe, is produced in two different forms: in rods and in powder. They are of different colors—reddish-brown and black. When melted it has the consistency of sealing wax, and is of shiny black. When it is in this condition it is practically a non-conductor, but by passing through a chemical process it will change in color and become partially conductive, and will be very sensitive to changes in light. That is, its resistance will change in a degree depending upon the amount of light reflected on it. At first or in the dark, the resistance of the selenium is very high, and it gradually decreases to a small fraction of this resistance as the intensity of the light increases.

This light and resistance property makes it useful for many purposes, both purely scientific and otherwise. Cells of selenium are already in use for switching on and off life buoylights; for starting and stopping machinery; for measuring the light of the heavenly bodies; for registering railroad signal lights; for measuring intensity of any light; for reproduction of sound waves; for assorting cigars, coffee beans or any article where a difference of shade from white to black is to be distinguished; for protection against burglary, and so on.

The selenium cell makes it possible to control the ringing of a small electric bell or the starting and stopping of the largest power plant in the world by simply waving the hand, the movement of the hand over the sensitive cell, even though but a fraction of an inch, causing the relay to operate, and further, this relay can be arranged to control any amount of power desirable.

How Dogs Talk with Their Tails

PROFESSOR GIUSEPPE RENATO some time ago published an exhaustive study on the various functions of animals' tails, and the learned dissertation of the Italian scientist has aroused wide interest all over the world. Dogs' tails occupy an important chapter in Professor Renato's book. Passing lightly over the fact that in the Arctic regions the tail performs the functions of respiratory organs while the dog is asleep, Professor Renato considers it important that this appendage, rather than a dog's vocal apparatus, is the seat of his conversational faculty.

"Above all," says the professor, "the tail of a dog is an index to his psychological state. The animal raises and wags it under the impression of joy, lowers it when afflicted, and trails it between his legs when frightened.

"One may actually believe that dogs have a caudal language, and the wagging of the tail is the method of communication between them."

Among cattle and beasts of burdens the professor points out that the tail is a weapon of defence against flies and other insects, which, in the natural state of those animals, meant often the saving of their lives.

He states that in the early struggle for existence in cattledom and horsedom the question of the survival of the fittest was purely a question of which had the strongest tail. This resulted in the development of the tail muscles of the cow and horse to a remarkable degree.

How Your HEAD SHOWS the LINE of YOUR SUCCESS

THERE are elements of success in every individual who is in any degree endowed with intelligence; but man is capable of success only according as he is intelligent, and in proportion to the use he makes of his intelligence or other natural capacities; for there are physical as well as mental endowments, writes J. Millot Severn in Science Siftings.

The shape of the head is an indication of the kind of success of which an individual is capable; the head of a successful literary man, poet or artist is very different in shape from that of a successful merchant or business man. Lavater, the great physiognomist, has said that "a well-formed nose is worth a kingdom;" but a well-formed head is of considerably more value.

To be eminently successful, a large head, other things being equal, is an advantage, though persons with average or even small heads will sometimes attain much success, if their heads, to use a common expression, are "screwed on rightly;" there is, however, more in the shape of the head than in the size. You may often see a man with a large head doing nothing of importance, the reason being that he may be too indifferent, or there may be too great a density, and not sufficient impetus or activity in any one group of organs to cause him to strike out in any particular direction; while others with only average or even small heads, but well-developed in some particular part, will manifest uncommon ability, and with diligence and perseverance rise to eminence, from the fact that they concentrate the whole force of their nature upon the particular thing or object for which they are especially gifted. How essential, then, to know in what direction one's gifts lie.

Heads that succeed in business and in manufacture and mechanism are usually large, wide about the ears and forward, with large perceptives, a broad though not always a high forehead, and rather strong domestic and social qualities. Persons with heads of this kind may become good builders, contractors, mechanical engineers, merchants, farmers, stock-raisers, business managers, or do well in other occupations requiring energy, force of character, constructive ability, planning capacity and practical judgment.

Heads that succeed in educational, literary, scientific, analytical and artistic pursuits are more generally long, proportionately narrow and high, with a good development forward of the ears; and the middle line from the root of the nose upward and extending over the top-head should be well defined. The reflective and reasoning organs should be well developed, likewise the perceptives; also the upper part of the side-head in regions of Identity, Imitation and Sublimity. The extent of success even then will depend on the amount of energy, force of character and perseverance the individual is disposed to put forth.

Physical strength and health are great factors in enabling individuals to succeed, and fortunate are they who have good heads combined with physical strength and good health.

MOLDING to BEAUTIFY the FACE

MANY beauty specialists now advocate "molding" of the face instead of massaging, as the latter, they say, tends to loosen the skin and break down the tissues. After you have used a cleansing cream and bathed the face with a skin-freshener (using absorbent cotton,) the woman with a very dry skin should mold in a delicate nourishing cream for the first few treatments. Later on she can use a heavier cream. Women with oily skins should do the molding with an astringent cream that has been mixed with a stimulant to the tissues.

Molding, as described in the Pathfinder, is done with very gentle but firm pressure of the fingers. See illustration. Begin on section 1 (neck) and mold upward five times, using four fingers. Repeat motion with two fingers in each section in order numbered, except on 12 (forehead) use four fingers. In molding around eyes, begin at inner corner of 9 and mold out to temple; then start above eye at 10 at same point and mold above and along eyebrow, upward and out. In molding circular muscles of mouth, begin just above 2 and encircle muscle, lifting gently at corners to prevent the unbecoming droop. After molding the entire face use an astringent to tighten the muscles before finally applying powder.

Why You Cry When You Peel Onions

THE gas given off by a freshly-peeled onion makes itself evident in two ways—by a strong aroma which is at once apparent to the sense of smell, and by a smarting of the eyeballs, which, being very sensitive, are hurt by this substance to which they are not accustomed, says Science and Invention.

The nerves of the eye immediately signal the brain to turn on the tears or liquid which is secreted by the body as a natural eye-wash. This, flowing over the eyeball, forms a curtain which prevents the onion gas from coming in direct contact with the nerves and injuring them.

GIANTS TIGHTEN HOLD ON ANOTHER PENNANT

REDS WIN IN 11TH.

NEW YORK, September 21. — The New York Giants to-day advanced a stride nearer the 1923 National League pennant and their third successive championship, by trouncing Pittsburgh, one of their two principal rivals, in two games, while the Cincinnati Reds were winning but one from Brooklyn.

The world's champions now have a lead of four and a half games over the Reds, who are in second place, and eight games over the Pirates.

The Giants need to win but four of their remaining nine games to make the winning of the pennant a mathematical certainty, even should the Reds capture all of their remaining eight contests.

Pittsburgh, though virtually eliminated from the race to-day still has a mathematical chance. However the Giants need win but three of their remaining games to finish ahead of the Pirates, even if the latter win all of their remaining 11 games.

Two Big Innings.

PITTSBURGH, September 21. — The New York Giants strengthened their hold on first place by taking both games of a double header from the Pirates to-day, 8 to 4 and 8 to 1.

The Giants knocked both Meadows and Stone from the box in the first game and coasted their heavy hitting in the second, sending Cooper to the showers. Carey drove a homer over the left field wall in the ninth inning of the first game, scoring Maranville ahead of him. The score:

1st game—
New York .. ..010007000—8 14 2
Pittsburgh .. ..000002002—4 7 2
Scott, Nehr and Snyder; Meadows, Stone, Steineder and Schmidt.

2nd game—
New York .. ..00600002—8 9 1
Pittsburgh .. ..000010000—1 9 4
Watson and Gowdy; Cooper, Adams, Steineder and Schmidt, and Gooch.

Eleven Innings Game.

CINCINNATI, O., September 21. —With two men out in the last half of the 11th inning to-day, Smith walked Hargrave, who scored a moment later on Pinelli's long triple to left centre, giving Cincinnati the first game of the Brokolyn series, 4 to 3. Decatur pitched well after the third inning, but was taken out for a pinch hitter in the 11th, and Smith is charged with the loss of the game. The batting of Olso, who got four hits and a sacrifice hit out of five times at bat and the sensational fielding of Caveney, were the leading feautres. The score:
Brooklyn .. ..0000120000—3 11 1
Cincinnati .. ..20100000001—4 9 1
Decatur, Smith and Hargraves; Rixey and Hargrave.

Fails to Hit in Ten Games

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—While Ray Schalk, star catcher of the Chicago White Sox, is far from a hard hitter, he has always been rated a dangerous man at the bat in a pinch. Recently Schalk was the victim of the worst batting slump that he ever experienced in his major league career.

For 10 games, from Aug. 20 to Sept. 1, Schalk went hitless. During that period he himself admits that he didn't hit a single ball hard. Every effort at the bat resulted in a lazy fly or a weak grounder to the infield.

When Schalk finally did break lose he collected three hits in a game against Cleveland, which was stopped in seven innings because of rain.

BOSTON SPLIT WITH DETROIT

Only Teams in Action in American League Yesterday.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Boston defeated Detroit, 4 to 3 in the first game to-day and the visitors won the second game of the double bill, 15 to 6. Boon's triple in the third inning of the first game scored two runs and he later scored. In the seventh inning of the same game with the bases full and two out he collided with Reichle but caught and held Blue's drive to right center. He had to be carried off the field and was taken to a hospital for examination, a broken leg being feared. Later it was reported that an X-ray photograph showed no fracture. Cobb's all around work was the feature of the second game. The scores:

1st game
Detroit .. .... 000 000 120—3 6 0
Boston..... ..013 000 00x—4 10 4

Plenty of Material and Would-Be Preparing For Future.

Peterboro may have an entry in the Junior O.R.F.U. instead of a team in the Intermediate division as was the case last year. Many of the rugby fans and some of the players believe that a junior team would be preferable to one in the more advanced group. Arguments stated in favor of a younger team are many and varied.

Then number of players eligible for playing in junior company is said to be large. The following are eligible for junior: E. Sheehy, J. Turner, Mulholland, Cowan, Ashmore, the two Griffins, Brown, Fleming, MacPherson, J. McClelland, J. Ward, Manning, Holland, and many others including the best of the Collegiate players if it should happen that the P.C.I. are eliminated early in their race for Interscholastic honors. It is pointed out that all these players are experineced and include some fine back field players and line men, making a team that would make the best of the Toronto Junior teams step. The junior team of this year could step up into Intermediate next year adding some of the heavier and older players of the city to their lineup.

If a junior team does come about it is not intended that those not eligible should fall out of the grid-iron game. It is promised that a fast city league team will be worked up to get the veterans busy.

However, this is a matter that ought to be discussed thoroughly before any decision is made. Peterboro will certaifly have a team in one of the two leagues.

ENGLAND VERSUS UNITED STATES IN CANADIAN FINAL

Mrs. Gavin and Glenna Collett Give International Color to Championship.

Mrs. Gibson Defeated.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21. — (Canadian Press).—The final of the Canadian Women's Golf Championship which will be fought out to-morrow at the course of the Mount Bruno Club, will be an inter-national affair. The struggle will be between Miss Glenna Collett, Providence, R. I., United States Champion, and Mrs. Gavin, Huntercombe, England., Canadian champion. Both these ladies won their matches in the semi-final to-day, the former from Miss Alexa Stirling, Atlanta, Ga., by 3 and 2, and the latter from Mrs. Hope Gibson, Hamilton, by 2 up and 1 to play.

In the Collett-Stirling game, the United States champion played the finer and more consistent golf. She was invariably straighter and longer on her drives, got into less trouble and sank her putts for the most part. Miss Collett got into trouble occasionally, of course, but her recoveries were splendidly done. Miss Stirling had a bad slice in many of her brassie second shots, while her putts would not go down because she was a fraction of an inch off the line. Miss Stirling was never up during the whole match.

In the Gavin-Gibson match, the Hamilton player always seemed to be attempting to redeem a forlorn hope. Mrs. Gavin, however, met the most stubborn opposition she has experienced so far in the tournament. The Ontario player was at her best, giving her most perfect performance of the two weeks that she has been a contestant in golf tourneys in the district and battled with the titleholder for every hole. She was always in position to take every advantage of any lapse on the part of the champion and as a result forced Mrs. Gavin from the first tee to the seventeenth green before conceding defeat.

PUZZLING PLAYS

THE PLAY

There is a runner on third base and none out. The batsman, who is a good bunter, elects to try and 'squeeze" the runner on third home.

The sign for the "squeeze" play" is given. The runner on third gets away with the pitcher's motion and is well on his way to the plate before the ball is delivered.

The catcher, realizing that the play is almost certain to be successfully executed, gets excited and seeks to retire the runner at the plate. He brushes aside the batsman standing in his box, then receives the ball in front of the plate and touches out the runner sliding into that base.

It is apparent that the catcher had erred but there is a question as to the penalty.

The contention is raised that the runner should be permitted to score on a balk created by the catcher in leaving the lines of his position. The other contention is that the runner should not only be allowed to score from third but the batsman is also entitled to go to first.

THE INTERPRETATION

The contention that the runner from third be permitted to score and the batsman be sent to first is the correct one.

In event a base-runner is trying to score from third on the 'squeeze," a "balk" and also an "interference" should be called if the catcher runs out in front of the plate to catch the ball. This of course entitles the runner from third to score on the balk and gives the batsman the right to first because of the interference.

PLAY AT PICTON.

J. J. Solomon anounces that Brockville plays its return O.B.A.A. game at Picton on Monday.

Umpires Differ With Scorer Over Howard Ehmke's Near No-Hit Game

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Official scorers often take umpires to task as to their decisions. Seldom, however, do umpires have an opportunity to put the scorer on the pan.

Recently in a game at New York, Howard Ehmke of the Boston Red Sox shut out the Yankees 3 to 0, allowing only one hit. It is on this hit that the umpires disagree with the official scorer.

Witt, the first New York batter to face Ehmke, sent a bounder to Third Baseman Howard Shanks. The ball struck Shank's glove, bounded against his chest, then dropped to the ground. Witt is a very fast man. After Shanks had booted the ball several times, Witt was finally declared safe on a very close play at first.

The grounder was scored a hit by the official scorer. During the rest of the game not another New Yorker made anything that looked like a base hit.

"If ever a pitcher worked a no-hit game, Ehmke did against New York. If ever an infielder made an error, Shanks did on Witt's grounder. It was a great pitching exhibition that would fail to gets its proper place in the hall of fame, because the scorer erred.'

Bill Lineen former star pitcher, now American League umpire, who officiated in the game with Connolly, said:

"I have made lots of bad decisions but never one that compared with scoring Witt's grounder to Shanks a base hit. It was a bad error on an easy chance."

Johnny Evers and Joe Tinker, former Cub stars who viewed the game, expressed the same opinion as the umpires.

Siki, Child-Like, Acts Before His Countrymen

BY AL WEEKS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Harlem has a new idol today. At the Lafayette Theatre, on Seventh Avenue at One Hundred and Thirty-second stret in the heart of the Sable section of the city, Siki, of Senegal, is playing a week's vaudeville engagement and every night the auditorium was crowded from the back rail to the roof.

It was nearly 11 o'clock before the pride of the Parisian boulevards made his appearance. His costume was hot stuff in Harlem. He wore baby blue tights and green satin trunks about which was tied in a saucy and debonair bow a sash of inch-wide red, white and blue ribbon.

Not A Man Eater.

Described as a mad man of the jungle who trains by emptying quart bottles of wine and then permitting even soliciting his friends to tap him on the skull with them, Siki suggests not at all the world creature of the noisome thickets of Africa. Instead, he is ingenuous positively child-like.

Cinnamon is perhaps the word that best denotes his hue. He is not so big, and he is not at all ferocious. His face is round and chubby, almost cherubic. He might serva as a model for a dusky della Robbia.

His hair is thick and woolly, for he has not been in Harlem long enough to have it unkinked, and it is parted neatly on the side. One imagines that Siki is a bit proud of his bale of bushy hair which is fashionably bobbed and appears well, even lovingly, brushed.

To begin his portion of the entertainment, Siki goes through the customary gymnasium routine. He does his twice daily dozen (the Lafayette plays seven matinees and a midnight show every week besides the regular evening performances). He skips the rope, he swings the Indian clubs and he punches the bag. Directed by a serious mentor with a manner almost profound, he moves from task to task, deliberate and unimpassioned. He is a most tractable savage.

A Graceful Terpischorean.

Only the rope-skipping did he bring any hint of pleasure, and as he danced, lightly and rather gracefuly, while the white cord whistled above his upholstered head and beneath his tripping feet, his face melted like hot frosting on a chocolate cake into a happy grin. He was frankly enjoying the rope-skipping.

He punched the bag, swinging slowly and inaccurately, but there were sharp reports, and the crowd whooped in glee, picturing Mr. Dempsey, it may well have been, in the place of the bag. The difficulty is that the bag doesn't hit back and Mr. Dempsey can't be relied on to be as considerate. The Argentine wil tell you that.

Understanding no English and speaking less, Siki communicated his message to his admirers by pounding the bag until the platform, ingeniously hinged, broke into two pieces disintegrating apparently under the tremendous force of his blows. Siki smiled proudly. He was showing off before his own people, and enjoying every minute of it.

An 'Exhibition."

Then the announcer introduced a blond young man in brilliant crimson tights, a Mr. Becker, he said, who would box two rounds with Siki. It was a droll exhibition. Of course, Siki wasn't hitting hard. The surprising thing was that Siki wasn't hitting at all. Mr. Becker slapped the buttom just as frequently.

Siki, bland and friendly, was just playing. Whether under more significant circumstances he could assume a threating front, working up enough ire to put assault into his heart and battery into his gloves remains, as the fellow said, to be seen.

Right now Siki appears to be only a jolly kid who took up prize fighting because he outgrew pillow fighting and had to have some boisterous recreation. Before he can overcome Dempsey he must conquer his own naivete.

BLAME U.S. FOR BRITISH BOXING DECLINE

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—British sport writers are blaming American promoters and fighters for the rather low estate into which English and European boxing has descended.

It is frankly admitted that England has very little to boast of since the demise of Jimmy Wilde as the world's flyweight champion.

Comment printed in London on the outcome of the Dundee-Criqui featherweight championship fight was rather surprising to fight fans on this side.

Inasmuch as Criqui was virtually black-jacked into the Dundee match before he had been able to make any capital out of his victory over Johnny Kilbane and before he had an opportunity to show France what the first world's champion looked like, it was thought that some objection would be voiced.

The result of the fight, however, was accepted with complacance.

"Dundee's victory over Criqui," Sporting Life (London) said, "merely emphasizes the poor quality of our own featherweights. True, Joe Fox, the British champion, was far superior in the science of boxing than the Frenchman when they met fourteen months ago, but the fact remains that he fell a victim to Criqui's deadly right and was beaten in the twelfth round. There is no one here to beat Criqui and yet Dundee was able to dispose of the Frenchman in the same manner that our champion would outclass a second-rater."

Tex Rickard is held responsible for the decline in British boxing, in the opinion of several writers. They point out that in offering such huge purses he increased the avarice of European boxers as well as American fighters and he brought about conditions whereby all the European boxers refuse to work for nominal purses on the other side, and dash for America for big money.

It is news to Americans to learn from these same writers that Rickard has ruined boxing also in the United States. The London papers told their readers that American fight fans had rebelled against Rickard and the other big promotors and were refusing to pay big prices for tickets.

Some precedent may have been established by legal action, taken by an owner against a jockey for damages resulting from a fall in which the horse was killed.

Charging the negligent riding of Michael Beary caused the death of a racing mare, Ironore, at the Kempton race meeting in May, H. J. Boam, the owner, brought suit for damages and he was given a judgment of 315 pounds.

Perhaps the fear that Papyrus, the English winner, might fall under him and he would be liable for damages prompted Steve Donoghue, the king of the British jockeys, to ask a fee of $75,000 to ride Papyrus at Belmont in the international race next month.

England hasn't much room to howl about the destruction of sports caused by American commercialism. Competent critics have expressed the opinion that at least five American jockeys would be willing to ride the American candidate in the international race for nothing and that they would be satisfied with the prestige and glory of the winner and the bonus that the owner of the winner might give them.

Having no baseball on a national scale, baseball critics can't yell about the prices paid for professional ball players but high prices for stars prevail in football, which the British national sport. Valuable players in England now command from $5,000 up when they are placed on the market.

There is no doubt that the boxing law requires a decision when contests go the limit in New York is is a large part responsible for the high purses demanded by champions and near champions for appearing in New York. They have no such things as no-decision fights in England and of course they don't realize over there the difference that it makes to American fighters.

Under a no-decision law in Philadelphia, the best of boxing cards are arranged in many of which two and three champions appear on the same card and the maximum charge is five dollars.

Decision fights to prevent a lot of stalling, but with competent referees fighters can be forced to do their best even in no-decision fights.

Many of the old timers believe that championships in important classes should never be transferred on a decision.

SWEETSER AND MARSTON MEET

Defeated Gardner and Ouimet in Golf Semi-Finals.

FLOSSMOOR, Sept. 21. — Jess Sweetser of New York, got a step nearer the goal today in his defense of the amateur golf championship by defeating Bob Gardiner, of Chicago, twice holder of the title, 8 and 7, in the semi-finals. The champion played one stroke better than perfect golf in the morning round and was even with par for the eleven holes played in the second round, while Gardner, slipping at times with various clubs, took 81 for the first round and was two over par when he lost at the 29th hole.

Seldom was the champion poorer from the tee than Gardner and he was much more deadly with his irons and his putter. The former champion flubbed two drives, shanked two massies and missed one three foot putt, while he failed a number of times to get down from five to eight feet. At one hole Sweetser pitched to within four inches of the cup and on the 27th, where Gardner laid him a stymie, the champion jumped it with a mashie niblick and holed out a par four.

Max Marston of Philadelphia will be Sweetser's opponent in the final round as the result of his victory, 3 and 2, over Francis Ouimet of Boston While Marston did not shoot remarkable golf, taking 81 for the first round and being only a trifle better on the second, Ouimet could not get his game in working order and finally slipped on the last few holes letting Marston get an advantage that his game of to-day could not overcome. After Ouimet had played a worried game for thirty holes and had finally squared his match with Marston with birdie fours on the 28th and 30th, the only two holes he played under par all day he dropped the match on the shortest hole of the course by missing a two-foot putt for a birdie two after Marston had sunk a fifty-foot one for his two. The play on this short hole surrounded by trees and pits was the most dramatic witnessed during the day.

MARMORA LOOKS AHEAD TO HOCKEY

Need Younger Players For Trent Valley League Team

MARMORA, Sept. 21. — From present indications, Marmora will soon have to break in some of the younger players if it wishes to remain in the Trent Valley Hockey League. It is very uncertain whether some of the old timers, such as "Phoney" Shannon, Fred Wells and Clifford Jones will wish to play again this year. However "Phoney" has always said that he would not play at the beginning of the season, but can never resist the lure of the ice. Last year the team took on two of the Junior players, McWilliams and Neal, and both were very fast players although a little young for Senior hockey. However both ought to be nearly at their best now. Frank Leal will likely play again and there is usually some very fast players to be secured at Deloro. So, on the whole the prospects are as good as usual for the Marmora hockey team.

SPORT GOSSIP

Walter French, who is now playing in Connie Mack's outfield, is the fastest player in the American League. We doubt if Cobb, at the top of his speed 10 years ago, was as fast as French. He seems to be as fast, if not faster, than Maurice Archdeacon, holder of the base ball record for going from plate to first and around the bases and recently sold by the Rochester Internationals to the Chicago Americans.

French is new to major league base ball but not new to major sports. He was, a few years ago, one of the greatest backs in foot ball. He played wtih the West, Point eleven and is probably the best man that ever played full back for the Army team, surely the fastest. Walter Camp picked him for his All-America.

French has a good eye and he batted .350 in the New York Pennsylvania League where he spent this season. He can bunt and that is where he is valuable. In the Detroit-Philadelphia series we saw French get a single on a fast bunt to Bobby Jones. It happened that Jones was expecting a bunt, played well in, made a perfect play on the ball, an unusually fast and accurate throw, and missed French by half a step. In the same game he got a single on a fast grounder that Fred Haney handled perfectly at second base.

He has aggressiveness to make the speed qualities count. He is intelligent. French is not a good fielder but a man of his base ball intellect and ambitions can be taught fielding. With his natural speed and aggressiveness Mack should be able to develop French into a major league sensation.

Pitcher Shines at Bat; May Get Infield Berth

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Most big league twirlers are poor batsmen. But this does not hold good for Pitcher Thurston of the Chicago White Sox.

He's such a dangerous man at the bat that the White Sox are seriously thinking of converting him into an outfielder or trying him out at first base.

Manager Kid Gleason of the Chicago White Sox considers Thurston one of the best relief pitchers in the big show. Had he a beter fast ball he would be a regular starter for the White Sox. He has a most deceptive fadeaway, a good curve and a fine change of pace, but his fast ball lacks a bit of the old "zip,"

Thurston is the pitcher who recently retired the Philadelphia team on nine successive strikes in one inning, all of the pitches being called or strug at and missed.

Thurston is a good hitter and good hitters are scarce. The White Sox lack a punch, and it wouldn't be at all surprising if the team tried to use Thurston at some position where it would take advantage of his hitting.

R. D. Sears in the year 1887 won his seventh consecutive tennis championship. This record has never been equalled in this country. William T. Tilden recently won his fourth consecutive title, and Tilden alone of all the tennis players in the world today has a chance of equaling the record that has stood for 36 years.

We were recenty discussing Tilden with a man who has seen his triumphs in four national tournaments and who is well acquainted with the titleholder. This man is also a student of base ball, boxing, foot ball and track. "Tilden is the finest conditioned athlete in the world today," said our informant. "He is the best conditioned athlete I have ever seen in any sport, and there is no reason why he should not remain undefeated for 10 years more."

Certainly, with the collapse of William Johnston, there is no man who approaches the Tilden of today.

Alexander Woolcott, a New York critic, recently named cribbage, parchesi and poker as the best three indoor sports. Heywood Broun immediately denounced the choice and a dozen others are doing the same thing.

Broun says bridge, stud poker and hearts top all other indoor games.

Now comes a rumble from the devotees of Mah Jong. The chess fiends are having their fling at Woolcott. The checker players want to know where he has lived all this time.

To close the argument, why not nominate the best 10 games for indoor consumption. But, to close the argument would mean the termination of one of the leading indoor sports.

FORD WEEKLY PURCHASE PLAN

A Plan For Financing Any One For the Purchase of a Ford Car.

It is no longer necessary for anybody to do without a motor car. If a person cannot afford to buy one outright a plan has already been adopted by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, in conjunction with the Traders Finance Corporation, Limted, by which the payment down of the sum of $100. (plus freight and Government taxes) entitles a person to delivery of a Ford Car—Non Starter Touring model. Other models have their own respective down payments.

A still further convenience has been added on behalf of those who have not the ability to pay down the lump sum above mentioned.

This plan goes into effect immediately. This plan, as is stated has been formulated as the final link in the original Ford plan to "Build a car for the multitude" and make it possible for almost anybody to own a Ford car, truck or tractor, and is called the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

This is the essence of the announcement given out by the head office of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited.

Under the terms of the newly anounced plan, the average wage-earner can purchase a Ford car, truck or tractor by making an initial payment of whatever sum he deems convenient, the balance being paid off in regular weekly payments of a definite amount which is also fixed by the purchaser himself.

The operation of the plan is said to be as simple as anything of its kind that has ever been devised.

The purchaser makes his initial payment to his local Ford Dealr, who receives it on behalf of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, and a purchase contract is entered upon for whatever model the purchaser desires. Interest on this and all succeeding payments is computed at the standard chartered bank rate and may be applied as the final payment on the car. The purchaser may increase the payments at any time.

The purchaser may make weekly payments until the ful purchase price of the car is paid for.

Or, when the purchaser has paid an amount of 100. (plus freight and Government Taxes)—in case the purchaser desires a Non Starter Touring model—the purchaser becomes entitled to delivery of the car and balance may be paid on the defered payment plan in 12 equal monthly instalments, or these instalments may be paid weekly.

The Ford Weekly Purchase Plan is for those who need a car and do not find it convenient to make the down payment. A small systematic saving makes it possible to make the down payment and obtain delivery of the car. A great number of thes purchasers with the car once in their possession will be enabled to pay for it from their increased earning capacity which the possession of the car gives them.

While this plan has been inaugurated primarily to help those who in the past have believed that they could not afford a car, it is hoped that it will accomplish far more than that in that by showing these people and others what they can do simply by the systematic budgeting of their salary, it wil also bring them to a fuller realization of the value of systematic saving, and will induce them to continue the habit permanently.

A simlar plan was inaugurated in the United States early in April and during the first few months of its operation has already attracted nearly 200,000 enrollments.

The initial success that greeted its introduction and the simplicity of its operation have caused it to be regarded by many as the most mementous and important step ever taken in the merchandising of motor cars.

TERRIFIC POWER IN LIGHTNING FLASH

One of the mysteries of such thunderstorms as have occurred in Great Britain during the last few days is the relative smallness of the damage done in proportion to the terrific character of the forces operating. The impression produced, for instance, by some of the discharges was that of the firing of a very heavy gun—12 in. or 15 in. There was the same concussion in the atmosphere; the same cracking, rushing noise; and the same kind of report.

Yet actually the power exerted by a single flash is enormously greater than that of any human gun yet made. Measurements recently carried out by Mr. C. E. Wilson at Cambridge, not without considerable risk to himself, show that the power exerted in a flash is usually about 2,000,000 ft. tons, which would suffice to raise a weigh is 82,300 ft. tons, or less than one-twentieth of that developed by the lightning discharge, writes a meteorological expert, in the London Daily Mail.

The modern view of the thundercloud is that it is an electrical generator, by which electrical currents are maintained between the earth (itself a powerful electric machine generating or carrying stupendous charges) and the conducting layer of the upper atmosphere. The upper atmosphere appears to be markedly affected when a thunderstorm is in progress below it. Cathode rays, positive rays and X-rays seem to be freely generated. The curious continual flickering of steely blue to green and lilac light, which accompanies very bad thunderstorms, may be due to these rays in the upper atmosphere, which is also the region where auroras show their marvellous colors.

Safest Place

The safest place in a thunderstorm is inside a house or building. In London, lightning conductors are not usually fitted except to very high structures, because of the large degree of protection given by high chimneys, spires, and the mass of wires, all of which contribute to intercept the electrical force and send it harmlessly to the ground. But it is always wise in a heavy thunderstorm to get under shelter; the statistics proving that in a year only one person in a million is struck in this country do not apply to those out of doors. Trees—if they are not isolated trees—are safer than the open, but an isolated tree is the most dangerous shelter of all.

The distance of a storm or of the centre of discharge can be calculated quickly by counting the seconds that pass between the flash and the report of thunder. If five seconds elapse, the distance of the discharge is a mile; if the report is almost instantaneously heard, with only a second's interval or less, the disturbance is overhead.

On the whole, London is tolerably free from thunderstorms. On the records of 130 years it has an average of 11 storms a year, as against 6 for Edinburgh, 27 for Paris, and 120 for Batavia, in the Dutch East Indies. There is a well marked curve showing the times when thunderstorms are most prevalent, and in London this curve reaches its peak between noon and four in the afternoon.

THEATRES

BEHIND THE SCENES

Photoplay patrons everywhere are going to be greatly interested in "Hollywood," a new James Cruze production for Paramount which has as its background—the motion pictures themselves.

Imagine getting an intimate glimpse of behind the scenes at the big sutdios, seeing all the noted stars and directors at work, viewing the familiar scenes of the western film capital—the hotels, boulevards, studios, bungalows, bowl, etc.

That's what 'Hollywood," which comes to the Capitol theatre next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday brings to the screen and with it a very enjoyable tale of middl, western family which goes to Hollywood and gets entangled with the great industry that has made the community as famous as Paris itself.

This is no expose, no propaganda, but just a straightway tale of the sort that will appeal to all who love pictures and wish to know all about how folk get in them, how they are made and so on. There's a fine romantic strain, love interest in plenty and an abundance of comedy of the best quality.

Several faces unfamiliar to the screen public will appear in leading roles which adds zest to the whole thing, but the "support" includes many sceen notables of international prominence.

The feature Thursday, Friday and Saturday wil be a picturization of Nick Carter's great thriller "The Eleventh Hour" featuring Buck Jones and Shirley Mason.

AT THE ROYAL.

TWO PERFORMANCES OF "ME AND MY GAL" TO-NIGHT AT 7 AND 9.

Owing to many requests from patrons who have been unable to secure seats for the English comedy, "Me and My Gal," the Royal management are running this attraction to-night at 7 and 9 o'clock. Two complete performances. Doors open at 6.30.

"DICK TURPIN" TO HAVE SPECIAL SHOWING FOR THE KIDDIES.

"Dick Turpin's Ride to York," the thrilling romance of Old England when the second George was king is of historical significance to warrant the interest of teachers and scholars. The story, like "Robin Hood," is an old England legend and a special children's performance will be given next Wednesday afternoon at 4.15 p.m., after school. All children will be admitted for 11c.

"DICK TURPIN" COMES TO THE ROYAL MONDAY.

Famous Highwayman For 20 Years Thrilled English-Speaking Nation.

Dick Turpin, the famous highwayman, who for 200 years has thrilled Englishmen and others all over the world, now lives in a super-film. Stoll's tremendous melodrama brings to life all the romance of the days of Old England. Dick Turpin, Tom King, and all the fair mistresses of the good old days, will now shed joy all over the world.

The part of Dick Turpin is taken by Matheson Lang, eminent English actor, who has heretofore given sterling performances in motion pictures, but who, according to his own words, is now for the first time in a super-film.

The cast which supports Matheson Lang, is a very strong one, including Isobel Elsom, who takes the part of Dick Turpin's beloved. Isobel Elsom will be remembered from her remarkable work in that great English picture, "The Game of Life." Miss Elsom took the principal in the latter picture, and was mentioned by all the critics in England for her wonderful acting.

Stoll took 18 months to produce this tremendous film, and it was staged in the very inns and highways of York, which were made famous by Turpin 200 years ago, and when "Dick Turpin" was released recently in England, its success was tremendous. In London and Liverpool the picture was originally booked for four weeks and sold out to capacity for the entire four weeks, and in each case was brought back for indefinite runs. The press and the public praise the film as one of the greatest ever seen on the other side.

A BIG SEASON FOR THE BOWLERS

With the coming of cooler weather, bowling enthusiasts are beginning to discuss the season's prospects, and the early dope looks as if there would be an unusually busy schedule for the alley fans. There will be a flock of leaguers both in five pins and ten pins, and with plenty of material in sight there should be keen competition all along the line. Jake Solomon, after a strenuous summer piloting the Peterboro Central League team, and arranging details for the O.B.A.A. play-offs, has his alleys open for the season, and the crash of the pins has succeeded the crash of the bat against the ball. It will be a big year for the bowlers.

GOLF

SELECTING COURSES FOR NATIONAL GOLF TOURNAMENTS A BIG PROBLEM

There is a well known saying that one is never too old to learn. It applies in golf as well as in more serious things and as time advances apace one wonders if the United States Golf Association could not profit by the experiences of governing bodies in other branches of sport. In Great Britain championships are held over a few courses—a regular cycle. The United States Lawn Tennis Association has its Germantown C. C. and its Forest Hills whereas the U. S. G. A. holds its championships here there and everywhere.

A common criticism one heard almost every year has to do with this or that selection. Sometimes it will be the open sometimes the amateur and then again it may be the course selected for the women's national that comes in for a panning.

A quarter of a century ago when the game was young in America the responsibility of selecting courses for title events may not have caused any loss of sleep on the part of those guiding the destinies of the Royal Sport on this side of the Atlantic but conditions change with advancing years. For the last few seasons championship selections have been left in the hands of a special committee whose duty it has been to pick the courses a year or so in advance the object of such early choice being to afford the favored clubs ample opportunity to prepare and if necessary make such alterations as might be found desirable.

But since national golf gatherings have become such sought after affairs the efforts to secure these attractions have naturally increased.

It is no secret that certain clubs once having set their hearts so to speak on securing a national event have endeavored to bring all sorts of influence to bear. Wires are pulled and more than once officials of this or that club in their enthusiasm have been heard to say "Well we've got the championship; it's all fixed. So and so worked it fine."

Pulling the Strings

Once the scramble for titular plums has started and evil is not liable to lessen so long as the same opportunities for favoritism remain unchanged. In fact wire pulling will become more and more noticeable. Right now there are clubs angling for national championships. Some of these realizing that the task is a trying one are allowing themselves what they regard as ample time. One club official was heard to declare that 1925 or even 1926 would be all right so long as his club got what it wanted and added "You bet your sweet life we're going to get what we want when we go after it U. S. G. A. or no U. S. G. A."

When a person hears that kind of talk even though it is supposed to be of a confidential nature he cannot but ask the question what are we heading for? Where is it going to end? It is simply another problem for the golf rulers to solve; another needed reform like the sanctioning of steel-shafted clubs that will have to be squarely faced.

As regards championship venue a well known professional after playing Lido for the first time was so impressed as to declare it would be a fine thing if the U. S. G. A. would purchase the courses and conduct all its championships there. He added that a majority of the other courses and he had seen the best from coast to coast were little better than open fields by comparison.

Several Courses

In order to keep the "peace in family" any governing body would probably have to have more than one championship layout. Annual gatherings on Long Island would hardly appeal as the years rolled on to devotees of the game in California or the middle west. Such a method would afford less satisfaction than the present system of passing around the national attractions. A medium policy more on the order of the British cycle could however be given a trial.

To be sure conditions are not quite the same here as in Great Britain where the area is more constricted but that could be taken care of through course selection. Because of the greater number of players in the east and middle west both these districts might be favored with two championship links. The south ought to have a course and also the Pacific Coast. That would make six in all and the events could be decided at these places in regular sequence as might be provided.

The association could cooperate with the championship clubs and see that their courses were kept up to standard requirements. Funds for running expenses should be forthcoming from the gate which now seems to have become a necessary evil even in this game until a few years ago as free as the air itself.

With Steel-Shafted Clubs

Two golfers who have been firm advocates of the steel-shafted clubs almost since they were first put on the market will now have more reason than ever to remain "faithful." The players in question are Arthur W. Yates of Rochester an amateur and Herbert Lagerblade of Bristol Conn. who tied with John Cowan in the recent New England Professional Golfers' Association championship over the Charles River course Cowan winning on the play-off.

Yates who won the Rochester tournament earlier in the summer broke all previous records for low scores in the north at least when he returned a 63 over the Oak Hill Country Clubs course. Playing over the Bellcair course in Florida last winter Walter Hagen scored the unprecedented total of 62 strokes for the eighteen holes and it is admitted that the Oak Hill links is a least a stroke harder than Bellcair. The former Oak Hill record was held by Walter Bemish professional who had a 66 last October. Yates' card read 32 out and 31 back as follows:

Out: 3 5 3 2 3 5 4 4 3—32
In: 3 3 2 4 4 4 3 4 4—31—63

Lagerblade who won a New England open event just a short time ago never got going in the play-off with Cowan at Charles River. The pair had finished in a deadlock at 301 over the Belmont Spring and Charles River courses and for the extra eighteen holes Lagerblade needed an 83 to 74 for the Oakley professional. Even though he did need nine strokes more than his opponent Lagerblade was "there" several times as in the best ball for the pair he had low score on four holes.

Mr. and Mrs. Vncent E. Keeley left to-day for Long Beach, California, where they will spend the winter. They have been visiting Mrs. Keeley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Carson.

An enjoyable time was spent Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Simmons, Orpington Road North Monaghan, fhere a party of friends of Miss Maisie Millard assembled to pay her a tribute on her forthcoming marriage in the form of a miscellaneous shower. After the presentation of a large and splendid variety of useful presents had been given the evening was continued in music and dancing until midnight when the happy party dispersed for their homes.

The Peterboro Examiner, City,

Auburn Plant $138,600.00

Thanking you, I am,
Yours very truly,

A GREAT WEEK.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Many of us laymen want to thank the Examiner for the very full and correct reports of Dr. Campbell Morgan's sermons. We have had a grand week. What will most of us carry away as the gospel message given to us by Dr. Morgan? It will be no doubt such as the following which I quote from Friday's issue: "The speaker said three tests might be applied to books—how is the book accepted—how long does it live, and how far is it of sufficient human interest to demand translation into other languages?" How different these tests are from those I was brought up to think over. I was brought up not to dare to think of applying any test to the Bible but to remember that it was beyond all possibility of test or comparison being the Word of God! Now we compare it with our other best sellers. Then again he says: "The fundamental of a study of the Bible is that you come with an open mind without prejudice for or against." And what if with all that you decide against? Wouldn't that be terrible—for the Bible? You would be better advised if you satisfied yourself first that this Book is God's Book, written to men and not to be approached with an open mind or an open mouth, but with an open and a contrite heart. If no one can comprehend the ways of the Infinite—how can he think of sitting down to decide whether they are worth believing or not? He also said:

"The Bible is not a book. It is a library containing about 66 books, written by 30 or 40 authors over a period of 1,500 years. They contain little pieces of history; condensed reports of preaching; a little collection of poems."

This Book is the work as well as the Word of God, or else it is a swindle. It is not the works of 40 authors, condensed reports, and a little collection. It is reverence we need, not criticism—or advice.

GETS PRESENTATION ON EVE OF HER MARRIAGE.

Miss Maisie Millard, a popular employe of the C.G.E., was the happy recipient of three very useful and acceptable gifts from the foreman and hands in the punch press department, on the eve of her marriage.

The presentation was accompanied by the following address:

"To Miss Maisie Millard.

"On behalf of the foreman and employees of the C.G.E. punch press department, I am asked to tender to you, our most sincere and hearty congratulations on your forthcoming marriage. Our earnest wish is, that the future lives of your husband and yourself will be long, and one continual round of good health, happiness and prosperity. We hope that any troubles you may encounter may be little ones, and that they may come singly.

"We all regret very much you having to sever your connections with us, in this department, for you were always held in great respect by all with whom you came in contact, owing to your exemplary work as an employee, and your popularity with all, in friendship and sport.

"So I therefore ask you to accept from us these presents—an electric heater and electric toaster, and an electric iron, not for their value but as a token from us of the deep appreciation in which you are held by all in this department.

BARE JOINTS THE FAD

Joints are coming into their own. Not the joint that graces the Sunday dinner table, but that portion of the human frame that has hitherto languished in obscurity.

A young lady with brilliant gold hair stood on the corner the other day. She appeared to be attracting a good deal of attention from the street corner gentry. At a glance, there didn't seem to be any particular reason for the disturbance she was creating. True, her hair was bright and it was bobbed, but that isn't remarkable. She wore cap sleeves to her blouse, but that isn't such a novelty either. A nearer approach disclosed the reason. Every time the wind blew, one regarded, if one happened to be glancing that way, a pair of bare knees. They weren't pretty, in fact, knees rarely specialize in beauty of shape or color, but they were bare. The tightly-rolled stockings allowed a fine view of about six inches of bony joint.

The little girl wore a pink dress of a dark color. White socks encased thin legs. Bright yellow garters held them in place just below the knee-cap, which protruded, red with sun-burn, under the frock. They weren't pretty, they weren't attractive, but they were bare.

The bride adjusted her shimmery veil. Turning from the radiant reflection in the mirror, she drew on her long white kid gloves. Tiny caps of lace fell over her shoulders. Between them and the vanishing point of the gloves jutted an elbow, not poetically dimpled, but painfully sharp, a prominent and obtrusive note in a white symphony.

JAPAN PLANS NAVAL REORGANIZATION

TOKIO, Sept. 22.— (Canadian Press).—Admiral Takarabe, new minister of the navy, has announced new plans for the Japanese naval organization which are regarded as of special interest.

These plans are in part a continuance of the policy originally initiated by Takarabe's predecessor, Admiral Baron Kato, who is now premier. The policy includes readjustment of auxiliary warships, expansion of the naval air force, improvement of equipment of naval stations and depots, elimination of supernumeraries and organization of a more competent staff.

The Japanese naval authorities declare that the United States auxiliary warship programme will directly affect Japan's naval strength, if the bill is passed at the next session of Congress, and a change will have to be introduced in Japan's auxiliary warcraft programme on the realization of the American scheme, it is reported.

The expansion of the air force and improvement of equipment will be undertaken at once under plans outlined by Premier Kato. The reduction in personnel, which has been going on for several months, will be completed at the end of the present year.

The vernacular press states that the new naval minister will exert his best efforts toward educational training which has become lax in recent years and inculcation of the idea of the necessity of national defense, which has waned among the Japanese people.

High Blood Pressure

Fatalities Now Rank Third From This Source. French Scientists Make Important Discovery.

During recent years Arterio Sclerosis has been claiming an ever increasing number of victims. Latest figures place it third among diseases that prove fatal to human life. Recent investigations conducted in the French Academy of Medicine have resulted in a discovery of a remedy for this disease. A special tincture prepared from the cloves of Garlic proved so effective in all of the numdrous cases where it was tried that these eminent physicians confidently announce in a recent report that the use of the preparation is followed by almost immediate improvement, and that if faithfully followed, it is a sure remedy for the malady.

The high character of its sponsors leaves no doubt as to the effectiveness of this new discovery which is now sold in Canada as "GAR LIKIR" H.B.P. treatment and is obtainable at J. P. Bonds Drug Store. Price $2.00 per bottle with booklet giving full instructions as to how people with High Blood Pressure should conduct their living.

CAPITULATION BY GERMANY IS ANNOUNCED

Chancellor Stresemann Tells Rhineland Defence Organization of the Government's Decision to Surrender.

NO CONDITIONS

BERLIN, Sept 24—(United Press) Chancellor Stressemann to-day informed the Ruhr and Rhineland defence organization of the Government's decision to capitulate to France.

Resistance must be given up without condition, the Chancellor to the first delegates who visited him. The fate of German citizens expelled from the occupied areas, or imprisoned for obeying the government's orders for resistance, cannot be taken into consideration, Stresemann said.

Return to Homes

However, the Chancellor added there is reason to believe that most of these Germans will be restored to their homes when official and public announcement of the decision to quit resistance is made.

Stresemann's statements to the delegates of the defence organizatons completely confirmed the developments in the Government's attitude toward the resistance programme as outlined exclusively in the Daily United Press dispatches since last Wednesday.

Official Announcement

The Chancellor will make known the government's decision for unconditional surrender to delegates of the Ruhr and Rhineland organizations later this afternoon.

The State Premiers will be informed to-morrow when they meet here with the government and when the Reichstag hears it officially on Wednesday.

STRONG ADVANCE FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Announcement of Germany's Surrender Affects New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(United Press).—Chacellor Stresemann's announcement of Germany's unconditional surrender in the reparations dispute brought about substantial advances in the principal foreign exchanges and gave a generally strong tone to the stock market in the early dealings.

Good gains were scored by Bethlehem, Corn products, Dupont, American Sugar and other industrial leaders on the initial transactions, while Rails were firm.

Further consideration of the importance of the news of Germany's surrender in the Ruhr brought additional buying into the market as the first hour progressed and the general list displayed a strong tone toward 11 o'clock.

Sugars were buoyant under the leadership of Punta Alegri and Cuba Cane preferred, reflected the splendid technical position of the commodity market, which points to higher prices for both raw and refined Corn products which is a favorite medium of the bears when the market turns irregular because of its proximity to the years high, came back easily, selling at 125 1-8 against last week's low of 121.

Baltimore and Ohio reattained the leadership of the railroad group reaching a new high on the movement at 52.

Copper stocks are selling around their record 1923 low. Heavy South American output has been largely responsible for declining prices for the metal, recently some improvement has occurred in the demand for copper and many producers look for higher prices. More settled European conditions would result in a brisk demand for export.

Reconstruction at work in Japan is expected to be followed by an increase in shipments to the Orient. Buildings destroy by the earthquake and fire will no doubt be replaced with more modern structures which means that a large tonnage of Copper will be required. If plans are carried out, there will be at least one copper merger completed within the next month.

Break in Ranks of N.Y. Pressmen Seems Imminent

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Paper Handlers' Union Local No. 1, by a vote of 119 to 70, has refused to support the striking pressmen of the former New York City Local. Paper handlers and sheet straighteners struck Tuesday morning in sympathy with the pressmen, but last night, after the refusal of the pressmen's local to follow the orders of George L. Berry, International Union head, to return to work, they voted to go back.

This action was regarded by the publishers as the first defection among the pressmen's supporters, and a sign that a break in their ranks was imminent.

NEW CLUE TO BANK ROBBERS

Stolen Bills Find Way Back to Two Toronto Banks Through Exchange Channels.

TORONTO, Sept. 24.—(Canadian Press).—The police have a new and important clue to the perpetrators of the daring and dramatic daylight robbery of bank messengers on Melinda Street on the morning of Tuesday, July 24.—The clue has its basis in the recovery of part of the money stolen from the bank messengers by bandits.

Five thousand dollars of stolen Bank of Nova Scotia bills and five thousand dollars of stolen Sterling Bank bills have come again into the hands of the two banks. The bills came from Chicago. The Bank of Nova Scotia bills came through its own branch in Chicago, and the Sterling Bank bills were returned to the head office in Toronto in the ordinary business of exchange with Chicago.

MAY FORFEIT THEIR SEATS ON THE DAIL

Republican Members Have Failed to Qualify And Take Oath.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Rumor has been current here during the past few days that the Irish Free State Government plans to pass an act declaring vacant seats of Republican members of the Dail on the ground that they failed in their constitutional duties by refusing to take their seats in house.

This is emphatically denied by the Dublin Correspondent of Morning Post, who points out the probability that the constituencies would prompt ly re-elect same members.

Moreover a penalty has been provider by electoral act which prescribes forfeiture of the deposit of one hundred pounds, made at time of nomination, by members who fail to take the oath and their seats before dissolution of the Dail to which they were elected.

HUNDREDS VIEWED BLACK FOX RANCH

Buildings Constructed With Care and are Well Painted—Open For Inspection.

Yesterday's beautiful weather drew hundreds of people to view the new black fox ranch a few hundred yards this side of Chemong, and all day the aisles between the pens were crowded. The manager, Mr. J. Pattie estimated the number at 1,200. Many who went there expecting to see rough lumber pens were surprised to find the building constructed with care and well painted. Every building is double sheeted to ensure warmth, and set down in the midst of trees and rocks to give the foxes as much natural environment as possible.

Many who visited the spot yesterday would like to see the foxes, but owing to their habits and their great value, no strangers can be admitted to the enclosure when the animals arrive. The ranch, which is now a picturesque place to spend an hour, will be open to the public until October 2.

DECLARES THAT DRY LAW NOT A HEALTH FACTOR

Detroit's Health Commissioner Says It Does Not Reduce Deaths as Prohibitionists Claim.

CONDITIONS BETTER

DETROIT, September 24. — Exception to the statement of the Rev. M. C. Pearson, secretary of the Detroit Council of Churches, that the decreasing death-rate in Detroit is due to the Prohibition amendment, is taken by Dr. Henry F. Vaughan, Health Commissioner.

"I can find no evidence that this decrease is due to Prohibition," Dr. Vaughan said on Friday. Dr. Vaughan attributes the falling rate to these three factors:

1—Economic conditions.
2—Health education.
3—The influenza epidemic.

"Economic conditions are better now than they were before the dry law was passed," Dr. Vaughan said.

"That means there is more work and higher wages. With higher wages, better food can be bought. Deaths due to lack of nutrition fall off on this account. With higher wages comes better living conditions. People are not forced to live in unsanitary, dark quarters. There is less crowding. All these things tend to decrease sickness and lower the death-rate.

Decrease for Two Decades.

"Health education has been an important factor. The city Health Department, hospitals, schools, doctors, and nurses every day are spreading the gospel of sanitation and disease prevention. Especially telling work is being done in the field of infant mortality.

"There has been a steady decrease in the rate of deaths for the past two decades. That decrease existed before the Prohibition law was enforefore the Prohibition law was enacted, and it has survived since.

"If we had the same death-rate to-day that existed in 1900, we would have had 5,000 more deaths in 1922 than we had. Of these 5,000 saved, fully 4,000 were children, and 3,000 of these were under two years of age.

Another marked influence on the death rate, particularly in the period between 1920 and 1923, was the influenza epidemic of the war years. Influenza carried off large numbers of persons who in the normal course of events would have died anyway within a year or two.

"Their removal allowed the death rate for the two or three years following to decline. The effect of the influenza epidemic has passed now, however. There will be more deaths in 1923 than there were in 1922. This is because there is a new group of persons susceptible to disease growing up."

Alcohol Deaths Grow.

Dr. Vaughan declared that the visiting nurses of his department who go out into the homes of the sick are constantly bringing back evidence of the harmful results of moonshine whisky and home brew.

Money is being spent on these expensive beverages, he said, which could better be utilized in the purchase of health biulding foods. As a result, some families are being deprived of these necessary foods.

In addition, there is the direct harm accomplished by the workings of poisonous liquors on the system.

"The men who are making bootleg whisky in Detroit don't even take the ordinary precautions of a Kentucky moonshiner," Dr. Vaughan said.

"A moonshiner in the hills knows that the first part of the distillate contains a poison. He doesn't know what it is, but he throws it away. He knows, too, that the last part, the tailings, contains fusel oil, and he throws that away. But not the city bootlegger. He bottles the whole business, and the drinker must take his chances."

Dr. Vaughan asserted that while the deaths from alcoholism decreased for the first year or two after Michigan went dry, they have steadily increased since, and are now as frequent as they were before prohibition.

FIVE AIRMEN LOST LIVES WHEN BALLOONS DESTROYED

Disaster Attends Gordon-Bennett Cup Race When Terrific Electric Storm Broke Out Shortly After Last Aircraft Took Off.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Five airmen, including two United States Army lieutenants, lost their lives, another was seriously injured and five balloons were smashed on the ground or destroyed by lightning in the James Gordon Bennett Cup race started yesterday under the most adverse weather conditions experienced in the history of the competition.

The dead are:

Lieut. Olmstead and Lieut. Choptaw, of the United States army balloon S-6.

Lieut. Von Gruningen and Lieut. Wehren, of the Swiss balloon Geneva, and Penaranda Barca, of the Spanish balloon Polar.

Gomez Guillamon, assistant to Barca, may die of injuries.

Two balloons, the United States Navy A-6699, and Fernande III., a French entry, were the only ones reported up to noon to-day as having landed safely.

In view of the terrific storm which broke out shortly after the last balloon took off, and which raged over Northern Holland and Belgium and the neighboring North Sea waters until late last night, fears are entertained for the safety of ten balloonists not yet heard from.

The S-6 was caught in a terrific storm, and when it crashed at Nistlerode, both lieutenants were dead. Olmstead had been killed by lightning.

CONFESSES HE'S POISON PENMAN

Shiawassee Farm Hand Also Admits Burning Employer's Home To Conceal Letter Writing.

OWOSSO, Mich., September 24.—Louis Binger, 23 years old, a farm hand employed by Oscar Moshimer, confessed to Sheriff A. J. Hanchett and Prosecutor L. F. Miner that he was the author of a series of poison pen letters sent to Mrs. Moshimer and Mrs. Otis Mesler, wife of another hired man, over a period of two months, and that he also set fire to a big barn on Moshimer's farm ten days ago, burning it to the ground.

Binger said that he started writing the letters as a joke, and then, when he feared detection, burned the barn in an effort to cover up, saying he believed this would strengthen the suspicion of Moshimer that it was one of his neighbours who was writing the letters.—

Binger first set fire to a small granary near the barn, and ten minutes later, after Mrs. Moshimer and Mrs. Mesler had extinguished this, he set fire to the barn, and later appeared and helped them try to put it out. This was done while Moshimer and Mesler were at the sheriff's office conferring with the officers about the notes.

Binger admitted that on several occasions, while officers were hiding on the Moshimer premises in the hope of catching the letter writer, he was in the barn or in his own room writing more letters, and that as soon as the officers left he would leave the notes where Mrs. Moshimer and Mrs. Mesler would find them. He wrote two of the notes after the fire.

Binger is married. He came here from Adrian last summer. He waived examination in Justice Court to-day, and was bound over to the Circuit Court.

He says he will plead guilty.

MYSTERY CHILD COSTS DAD JOB

Ticket Seller's Claim to Flying Honors Denied by Company—Airplane Christening Abandoned

DETROIT, Sept. 24. — The announcement that Edward Henrion's recently born "son" would be christened in the air above Packard Field Sunday, followed by revelations that Mrs. Henrion had taken another woman's baby and presented it to her husband as her own, has cost Henrion his job with the Stinson Fliers, it became known on Saturday.

The child first attracted attention when newspapers were informed that Henrion, an "aviator," had raced the stork in a desperate airplane fight from Cincinnati, arriving at Detroit 45 minutes after a son had been born to Mrs. Henrion.

Then came the announcement that with Edward Stinson, Detroit aviator, and head of the Stinson Fliers, acting as pilot, and Mr. and Mrs. Stinson acting as godparents, the baby would be christened in the air Sunday. Then a "baby farm" investigation in Detroit revealed the baby's real parentage, and the air christening was indefinitely postponed.

Stinson, who was Henrion's employer, made the following statement:

"I wish to state that Edward Henrion, alleged father of the mystery baby, is not an aviator. He was employed by me as a ticket sellers at Packard Field and has never flown an airplane, neither does he own one. He also made the trip from Cincinnati by train and not by air, as stated a few days ago.

"I have one of my planes stationed at Cincinnati with Jerry Machie as flier, and Henrion was there as a ticket seller. Neither Mrs. Stinson nor myself agreed to be the godparents of this baby, and I have been forced to dispense with Mr. Henrion's services on account of this unfavorable publicity."

Wife Guilty as Runaway, Pleads to Be Taken Back

DETROIT, September 24. — Mrs. Alvina Wanderei, who left her husband, Albert Wanderei, a week ago, and eloped with Nathaniel Petee, has suffered a change of heart. She wants to go back to her husband and the two daughters. She wants an opportunity to forget Petee and begin life again as she knew it before she became a character in a triangle.

She and Petee were arraigned before Judge Edward J. Jeffries on a charge of misconduct, both pleaded guilty, and were taken to the county jail to await sentence. The day before while confined in the women's cell block at the police headquarters, Mrs. Wanderei would yield to none of her husband's pleas for her return. For hours he talked to her, telling her as eloquently and as tenderly as he could that he wanted her to come back to him, but she, shaking her head answered nothing save, "I love him better; I love him better; I love Mr Petee better!"

Pleads to see Him.

Wanderei went home, telling her he would return in the morning and let her know his decision about the dismissal of the warrants. He came back well enough, accompanied by Mrs. Wanderei's brother, Tober, who urged him to carry the case through to a court decision. Wanderei's hangdog manner was gone. "Let her go to court and to jail, too," he told the police matrons.

Consequently both Mr. Wanderei and Petee went to court. There Mrs. Wanderei saw a new glint in her husband's eyes. He seemed a changed man. He was resolute and determined. He no longer stroked her hands and pleaded with her. He stood by and heard her utter the plea of guilty that might well send her to prison—and there was not a tear in his eyes.

"I want to see him," Mrs. Wanderei said. "I want him to come here to the jail and see me: I want to tell him that I made a terrible mistake, that I love him and our little girls better than anything on earth. I want him to know that I have already forgotten Mr. Petee."

Children go to Home.

"Why, Mr. Petee himself told me to go back to my husband. He whispered it to me while we were in court this morning. It isn't the jail that I fear; it's the loss of my husband and children. I know now that my husband was good to me; he wanted me to stay at home in the evenings and I wanted to go to dances, but I will stay at home with him gladly now. Do tell someone to find and have him come to me."

The two Wanderei children: Helen, aged 8, and Florence, aged 6, are at the Juvenile Detention Home. Quartered there with them are Nathaniel Petee's two small sons. Petee, Mrs. Wanderi says, is being sued for divorce by his wife, who is now in Bay City, with her two children.

THE RHINELAND MAY CUT LOOSE FROM PRUSSIA

Separatist Movement Gains Ground While Announcement of Germany's Capitulation Circulates.

APPEALS TO WORLD

MAYENCE, September 22 (Special to The Examiner). — While rumours of the impending public announcement of Germany's capitulation to France circulated throughout the Rhineland to-day, the Rhenish movement appeared to be gaining ground.

More than 5,000 Upper Rhine Separatists attended a great meeting here yesterday, and heard speeches by three leaders, Dr. Dorten and Herr Matthes, Frauenstein

The watchword of all the speeches was "Cut loose from Prussia."

Wage War Anew.

Germany intends to wage war anew as soon as the Rhineland and the Ruhr are returned to her, Herr Matthes said.

The meeting, after hearing other speakers denounce Prussia, adopted a resolution calling "attention to the world" to the misery caused in the Rhine by the Berlin authorities, and appealing to France and Belgium to support the Separatist movement.

PARK STREET SUNDAY SCHOOL HELD, RALLY

This was in charge of Miss Nellie Fallis, senior teacher of the Primary, each little girl passing through the white gates and were presented with a diploma by the supt., Mr. J. I. Maybee, and were then received by the pastor, Rev. W. E. Morrow, and their new teacher Mrs. H. Sellens.

This was followed by greetings from (Rev.) Dr. C. W. Rose, of the Murray street Baptist church.

GAVE TIMELY TALK ON SUBJECT OF AUTHORITY

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, speaking at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday with regard to the opening of the schools for the winter term, gave a very timely talk on the subject of authority, and the efforts which should be made by parents to instil in their offspring a realization of the dignity surrounding authority of any sort. "Authority is God-given," said the Bishop. "Let an individual begin to question authority of any type, and the time will shortly come when they will try to throw it off altogether. Whether vested in the church or the officers of the state or in the individual teacher of any creed, children should be taught to respect authority."

His Lordship announced the creation of a new parish at Huntsville, where Rev. Michael O'Brien will have charge. This section was formerly served by Rev. Father Fleming from Kearney.

PRINCE HAS BIG YIELD OF OATS

Lord Renfrew's Ranch Bears a Crop Which Cannot Be Excelled in Alberta

WINNIPEG, September 24 (Canadian Press). — So far as the yield per acre is concerned, the Prince of Wales will be one of the most successful growers of oats in Alberta, according to Col. George A. Carruthers, of James Carruthers grain firm of Winnipeg, Montreal, New York, who spent three days on the Prince's E.P. Ranch just prior to the arrival recently of Lord Renfrew.

Col. Carruthers, who reached the city last night, said he had been in this country for twenty-five years, and had never seen a finer showing of oats than on the E.P. Ranch.

For its size, the section of ranch planted in oats could scarcely be surpassed, in his opinion.

The grain, Col. Carruthers explained, is being grown for feed purposes.

HERO SHIP OF QUAKE HORROR REACHES HOME

Empress of Australia Arrives at Vancouver, B.C. In Anything But Heroic Fashion Today.

A PLUCKY CREW

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 24.—(Special). — The Empress of Australia hero ship of the Japanese earthquake, returned home today in anything but heroic fashion. She stole through the Narrows in the dead of a pitch black night of pelting rain and at one a.m. to-day, quietly dropped her mud hooks on the north shore of Vancouver harbor. There she lay until morning, with a bare half dozen night lights showing At six o'clock, while the dawn was still struggling to show itself, she was towed across and warped in the rain to her berth at the Orient wharf

Arrival Belated

Not thus had Vancouver and its people meant to welcome the gallant ship and her gallant commander Captan Samuel Robinson, R. N. R., back from their terrible experiences in Yokohama Harbor and Tokio Bay when they braved the earthquake and typhoon death and devastation. If she had come as expected on Sunday evening thousands of people were to have crowded the shore of Stanley Park and cheered her, as she crept slowly through the narrows. Motor headlights were to have played on her.

Came in Quietly

But time, tide and elements interferred and the big Australia came home as quietly as a tiny fishing smack.

One would not think to look at her as she drew alongside the pier that she had been tied to the wharf at Yokohama, when after a shudder the great pier sank before the eyes of the horror-stricken crew and the city itself crumbled into shapeless heaps of stone and dust which shortly became an inferno of fire and shrieking death; or that the good ship had stayed right in the harbor rendering aid to the sorely stricken people while sulphurous smoke rolled over them from the burning shore and floating bulks aflame drifted past in the choking murk.

There was little about the passengers either to show that they came from a stricken land. Only a very few were really refugees. The remainder of the 469 passengers had booked their passages before the earthquake came. Some of them were on the point of sailing when the first faint shudders foretold the coming evil.

Relieved Homeless

Many of these had given away their clothes to the homeless people of Yokohama who flocked terror-stricken, shocked, hurt and homeless to the Australia. The Virginia ladies, Mrs. J. Gilbert and Miss H. Cameron, organized the relief work on board and gave away practically all their own clothes. Two nurses on board, the Misses Steward and Thayer, and the four stewardesses, Miss Marion Kerr Miss Murcheson Mrs. Turnbull and Miss Tingley, worked in heroic fashion rendering aid to the injured for nearly a week. The whole ship's crew behaved with a courage that beggars description. All stayed at their posts from the captain to the humblest Chinese of them all. Staff Captain A. J. Holland organized the fire fighters. Dr. Rose, the ship's surgeon, organized an emergncy hospital. Hundreds of injured were aided. Countless scores of operations were performed. Passengers served under the command of the ships officers. The women formed a sewing circle and for days stitched ceaselessly to turn out garments for the people.

Worthy of Traditions

The Chinese sailors aboard behaved in a way worthy of the best traditions of the best merchant marine. Not one of them ran amuck. They stood by their posts, one old man, it is said, even continuing with the fatality of his race, while the earth was crumbling and the sea rising mountains to do his chores aobut the deck, marking out the squares for games.

Heroism of Crew

The heroism of the good Ship, Empress of Australia and her great crew is to be commemorated in a tablet for which the passengers contributed some hundreds of dollars. Like the tablet on the victory that marked the spot where Great Nelson fell, this will be set up in a prominent place on deck and will bear the following record:

"Presented to the R.M.S. Empress of Australia by the passengers to commemorate the heroic work performed by Commander S. Robinson, R. N. R. and all the officers and crew in saving the lives of all on board and rescuing the survivors of the earthquake and fire which devastated the district of Yokohama on September 1, 1923. This ship for nine days a veritable haven of refuge sheltered and succored thousands of homles, and wounded. For the committee, A. G. LOFTS, Secretary."

MRS. FRANK J. RUNYON FOUNDED WOMEN'S BANK

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 24.— Mrs. Frank J. Runyon, president and founder of the First Woman's Bank, this city, stands alone as a woman in the world of business.

Wife of a prominent and successful physician, she does not have "to work."

During the war, as a Red Cross official, she showed amazing administrative skill. A bank official, friend of the family, suggested, after the war, she employ this ability to make money for herself.

"But how?" she asked.

"Start a bank," he replied.

She selected nine women directors and a cashier, pledged them to secrecy, and then journeyed to a small town nearby to learn the banking business.

Finally the day came to open the bank. Fifteen thousand dollars worth of stock had been sold. Deposits for the first day amounted to $20,000.

Since then—this all happened in October, 1919—dividends have been declared semi-annually with clock-like regularity. Daily statements now range about $110,000 with between 600 and 700 depositors.

Well, cows got drunk in Louisville, Ky. Did they give buttermilk? We are writing to find out.

A PRETTY GOOD TEST

It is a valuable experience for a singer to appear occasionally before groups of children for, in order to attract and hold their attention she must live the song as well as sing it. She must bring her imaginative faculty into play and vivify the words with due accent pause and inflection. Above all things she must be genuine in her desire and effort to please and entertain.

It will not do to come before these alert and discerning young souls with a song only half learned. They know. Another thing if a conventional style of tone is adopted the singer will make very little headway into the hearts of her youthful listeners. Children are quick to detect and resent insincerity or affectation. The singer who has a notion that she will be able to deceive a child into believing that she is something which she is not will find that she has slipped a cog in her calculations.

All things considered it is a pretty good test of a singer's all round ability to please the general public if she is a success with children. Singing for children is the most natural field in which a singer can work and so it affords invaluable schooling and preparation for the art of singing for men and women who after all is said are in reality grown up children in sophisticated and conventional guise.

BAIT

Armed with $125 worth of fancy fishing tackle, an Akron lawyer recently went to the wilds of Canada. He got no fish. His 9-year-old son dug some worms, cut himself a sapling for a pole—and landed the bass and dore, pronto.

Old-fashioned methods are platitutinous, and progressives kid them a lot, but they seem to get results year in and year out.

GERMAN CAMPAIGN OF PASSIVE RESISTANCE HAS SPENT ITS FORCE

The Financial Burden of Weaponless Warfare Cannot Be Longer Borne, Admits "Vorwaerts," the Socialist Organ.

CRISIS APPROACHING.

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Germany's moral, or weaponless, warfare upon the French and Belgian encroachment of her territory and sovereignty may be said to have come to an end. Officially its termination has not yet been decreed, but, aside from a noisy minority of super-nationalists, competent opinion inside official circles and the sober judgment of political, industrial, financial and labor leaders are no longer under the delusion that the drooping spirits of the people of the Ruhr and the Rhineland can be sufficiently re-animated to make passive resistance an effective weapon for another single day.

Human psychology, however, is not the sole determining factor in the hopelessly forlorn situation confronting the Stresemann Cabinet, for the cumulative effects of eight months of economic devastation resulting from the nation's defence of its sovereignty has brought the nation's leaders to realization that further indulgence in passivity would end in disaster.

Matter of Necessity.

Coming events are plainly forecast in to-day's references to impending official decisions. "Vorwaerts" bluntly states that the termination of the Ruhr conflict has become a matter of necessity and that it were folly to attempt to conceal the fact that passive resistance is visibly losing force in the face of the heavy odds imposed by foreign coercion, and the further fact that the national exchequer is no longer able to carry the monstrous financial burden caused by such resistance.

The paper adds that the Ruhr conflict now demands a diplomatic solution, in which situation "France will occupy the position of the stronger factor." All now depends, says the Socialists' organ, on whether the German Government would be able to negotiate skillfully and whether moderated opinion in France and the influence of her allies on her are sufficiently strong to accomplish some change in the situation which would lead to all round economic recuperation.

The Germans are less outspoken than Vorwaerts, and while they do not attempt to break the news of coming events "gently," their half-hearted discussions plainly indicate that this is no time for optimism.

Nationalists Aloof.

The Nationalist party, through its Reichstag leader, Dr. Hergt, announces it will have no part in any scheme of capitulation, although its pronouncement gives no hint of the course to be adopted by the reactionaries in the event the Government formally scraps passive resistance. The Communists are sharply opposing surrender on the ground that it would be a concession to French and German capitalists.

Reichstag sentiment will not be definitely crystallized before Wednesday, although it may be taken for granted that Chancellor Stresemann will have the undivided support of

INTENDS TO SETTLE PRESSMEN'S STRIKE

Union Head Threatens to Conscript Men for Operating N. Y. Presses.

NEW YORK, September 24. Canadian Press. — The conscription of pressmen from other cities to operate the presses of the New York strike hampered dailies even at the cost of suspending publication of other papers, was threatened yesterday by George L. Barry, president of the Pressman's International Union.

Barry made this threat in an address after the striking pressmen had stampeded a meeting called to permit him to explain the new agreement signed on Friday with the publishers.

"We intend to end this strike," he said. "There will be no more temporizing or compromising. We will furnish a man for every vacancy in the newspaper offices of New York. From now on we will bring all the pressmen needed from the United States and Canada."

At a later meeting the strikers voted to continue the strike.

WEST BROMWICH, England, Sept. 24. —(Canadian Press). — A severe earthquake was recorded on the seismograph here at 9 o'clock Saturday night. The disturbance appeared to be about 3,400 miles due east, which, if correct, would place the origin of the tremor somewhere in Persia.

RAILS TWISTED LIKE SNAKES BY JAPAN'S QUAKE

Toronto Insurance Man Lost Wife and Child in Their Crumpled Apartment.

BODIES NOT FOUND.

VICTORIA, B.C., Sept. 24. — Among the prominent refugees returning from Japan on the Empress of Asia which docked here to-day was T. C. Maitland of Toronto, manager of the Japanese office of The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company.

Maitland lost his wife and eight year old son in the earthquake and tells the following story:

"I was on the train between Tokio and Yokohama and was within five miles of the latter place when the thing happened.

The train was moving slowly and the first crash was so severe that everyone thought another train had smashed into us at full speed. But it was instantly followed by violent bumping and swaying from side to side and up and down.

Twisted Like Snakes

The railway track at this point were very wide. In a flash I saw these twist and squirm like snakes and saw houses fall sideways or crash as if by some irresistible weight. We saw a great temple crash in a few seconds. Jumping from the train I ran few yards to the middle of the tracks but it was impossible to keep ones feet on the ground as it was undulating like the waves of the seas. Great cracks appeared in the earth and the air was thick with dust from the plaster of the crashing roofs and walls of the native houses and the cries of the terrified people rang in my ears.

"After the worst of the shocks had subsided I started out with some other foreigners with the intention of walking to Yokohama or getting some conveyance to take us there.

Roads Blocked

The Lokido Main road of Japan, however, was impossible, being blocked by the fallen houses, telegraph and telephone poles, and after about four hundred yards we were forced aside by fire which had broken out. Crossing a canal by jumping from boat to boat we reached some open ground and followed a freight railway line for a short distance but were again blocked up by a large factory on fire. We now found that it was impossible to proceed further in the direction of Yokohama owing to fire."

Hours later Mr. Maitland and his party reached the Seacoast near the prison at Yawatabashi which was on fire, and from which the prisoners had been liberated. Reaching the Bluff the party found that access here was impossible, so crossed on the new iron bridge leading to the settlement.

Shortly before midnight they were pocketed up by a life boat from the P. and O. Steamer Dongola.

Bodies Never Found

At dawn next morning, Sunday, Mr. Maitland said, "I succeeding in getting over to the Empress of Australia, where we found hundreds of survivors. But my search for my wife was unsuccessful so I tried to get ashore. This was impossible, owing to the fact that huge oil tanks were burning in the harbor."

Mr. Maitland's wife and son were in their apartment at the time of the disaster and the whole buildings crumped in and not a person was saved. The bodies were never found.

INVESTIGATE ALL CANADIAN BANKS

Directors Criticized For Interests in Private Concerns.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 23.— Western Ontario Home Bank depositors demand an investigation into the affairs of all Canadian banks.

At a meeting in London on Saturday night at which over two hundred persons were present, immediate action was urged on the part of the government. Two resolutions were passed, the first demanding a complete probe of the Home Bank affairs and that every institution in Canada be inspected by government auditors.

The second resolution urged that the clause giving the provincial and federal government's priority rights over the rest of the depositors be eliminated.

The fact that directors of banks were in many cases heads of private institutions was attacked by one depositor who charged that it encouraged collusion between the banks and certain private concerns.

GRAIN STORAGE SHOWS INCREASE

Receipts of Wheat Exceeded Shipments By Three Million Bushels.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Sept. 23. —Receipts of wheat at the head of the lakes during the week were three million bushels greater than shipments, and small increases in coarse grain stocks brought the totals stocks in storage here to a figure nearly three and a half million bushels over the figure last Saturday. The wheat movement to the head of the lakes is gaining in momentum, Friday's inspections having been 2,328 cars and the inspections of the day before 2,222. At the same time tonnage is at present coming in as fast as it is chartered and occasional boats have to wait for orders here before getting cargoes. It is expected that the movement will be well taken care of at least until the end of October, by which time the question of additional United States tonnage will be raised in order to clean out the stocks prior to the close of navigation.

Following are the figures of stocks, receipts and shipments for the week:

In store: Wheat, 5,060,725; oats, 679,787; barley, 1,075,995; flax, 178,865; rye, 833,016.

U. S. BALLOON FELL A MASS OF FLAMES

Two American Pilots Lost Lives in Aircraft Race Abroad.

BRUSSELS, September 24th. — United Press. — American Lieutenants Omstead and Choptaw, pilot and second pilot of the United States army balloon S-6, which started with 13 others in the Gordon Bennett cup race under extraordinarily bad weather conditions, on Sunday, were killed when their craft fell at Nilesteroode, Holland, during the night.

The S-6 was struck by lightning, and fell in flames.

Two Swiss balloonists were burned to death when their balloon, the Geneva, caught fire over Moll, and a Spanish pilot, Peneranda, was killed, when lightning struck his balloon, the Polar, at Heyst.

A torrential rain drove over the starting field as the entrants took the air. Conditions under which they competed provided for no postponement.

Captain H. E. Honeywell, American civilian entrant, was unable to start, a gust of wind hitting his balloon, the St. Louis, and causing it to burst.

The United States Navy A-6699, with Lieut. Lawrence in command, was forced down at Rutten, near the Zuider Zee.

All the American entries were thus eliminated early in the classic. Lieut. Olmstead and Chaptaw, who were killed, had a narrow escape at the start of the race. As their balloon was taking off the high wind drove it into the Belgina Ville de Brussells, ripping the netting from the latter's gas bag and damaging it so that it was necessary to empty it of gas. The army balloon got away however amid the angry yells of the Belgian spectators.

Thirteen balloons in all succeeded in getting into the air, besides the two American service craft, both of which are now down, two Belgian, three swiss, two British, two French and two Spanish started.

TORONTO NOTABLES ARE PLEASED WITH JOURNEY

TORONTO, Sept. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—A special despatch by aeroplane from Moose Factory says the Lieutenant Governor's party left for Toronto apparently well satisfied with their visit to the north. The return journey is being made along the River Mettagami by flying plane to Remi Lake and from there by launch and wagon to the railway. The party left last Thursday. The party consists of the Lieutenant-Governor, Premier Ferguson of Ontario, Rev. Canon Cody, E. J. Zavitz, Chief Provincial Forester, T. Bliss of Continental Woods Products, Montreal, and Dr. Campbell.

The inland journey by the Abitibi river was rather strenuous. Delays caused by rain, havy portaging over rocks and muskeg, swollen rapids, reloying baggage and provisions, had been anticipated and prepared for and on the whole a memorable jour-

CANADA IS NOT THREATENED BY ANOTHER BOOM

President Beatty of C.P.R. Says Conditions Should Become Much Better.

BACK FROM YUKON.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 23.— "Alarmists, despondents and unthinking optimists are equally out of place in Canada today," said E. W. Beatty president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, on his return here from Alaska and the Yukon Territory. Mr. Beatty was accompanied on his thousand-mile trip to the north by Vice-President D.D C. Coleman and the party of C. P. R. directors that had accompanied him from the east.

Asked by an interviewer as to his opinion of the financial condition in Canada, Mr. Beatty replied that he did not think there was any ground for apprehension on that score. That confidence in the future was general was, in his opinion rendered quite apparent by the good price received from the loan of $50,000,000 recently made. He added that most people felt that public expenditures had been curtailed as much as possible in order that the burdens of taxation should be lightened. With the marketing of the huge crop on the Prairies and the very satisfactory conditions in British Columbia it was inevitable that Canadian industry should receive considerable impetus.

No Boom Threat

"I do not think that the country is threatened with another boom," said Mr. Beatty, "and I hope it is not, but conditions should become very much better if we watch our step."

Asked as to the Dominion government's immigration policy, Mr. Beatty said it did not seem to do more than indicate a realization of the necessity for immigration and an intimation that the government proposed to be more vigorous in immigration work generally.

The restrictions and disabilities under which the work of securing immigrants was prosecuted had been largely removed and all that was left was the utilization of the machinery already in existence to a greater extent to induce a large number to come to Canada. Undoubtedly for this reason, the prospects were much improved over those which existed this time last year and there should be a much greater influx of people during 1924.

"Rails" Have Facilities

"The C.P.R. will carry all the grain that is offered to it either east or westbound," said Mr. Beatty, "and it is not the slightest degree hostile to the western movement.

CAUGHT IN FLOOD OF MOLTEN METAL

Two Meet Horrible Deaths And Third Man Fatally Injured.

HAMILTON, September 24. Canadian Press. — Caught in a flood of molten metal, and scalded and torn when the metal touched a pool of cold water and violently exploded, two men met horrible deaths, and a third man was fatally injured, when the bottom of the furnace suddenly collapsed at the plant of the Abrasive Company of Canada last Saturday night.

Nick Martovy had his left leg blown off and was terribly injured and burned about the body. Melville Moon was seriously burned and injured from flying jags of metal. Hector Furino was badly injured about the chest. They died in the hospital. Moon belonged to Kingston.

It's estimated there are 15,000,000 automobiles in the world, 12,000,000 of them in America.

We appreciate however, that this must be limited by elevator facilities and the availability of ocean tonnage. Both railways are capable of supplying all the facilities necessary for the inland movement and I think it will be found that grain moving through Vancouver will substantially increase during the present grain season."

"The Canadian Pacific has not been approached to acquire the Pacific Great Eastern," he added, "and I do not think it will be. Whether its acquisition will appeal to the national system is a question which that company will decide, and we would not be interested in their decision."

DRY LAWS NEED TIGHTENING UP SAYS B. SPENCE

Prohibitionist Denies That Sentiment of Ontario Toward Liquor Has Changed.

IN ALBERTA FIGHT.

REGINA, Sept. 23. — Additional federal legislation is needed before the liquor laws of the various provinces can operate with a maximum efficiency, Rev. Ben Spence, well-known prohibitionist said on his arrival here Saturday. Mr. Spence is en route to Alberta, where he will assist the "Drys" in their campaign preceding the provincial referendum on the liquor issue.

"I do think that the situation in all of the provinces shows increased need for supplementary federal legislation," Mr. Spence said. "The rum running is a disgrace to the provinces and there are some things that the provinces cannot do without the support of the Dominion."

Questioned on the Ontario situation, the temperance leader was positive in his statement that the dry act had retained general support. There is no likelihood of any referendum on the issue in that province in sight at present, he added.

"We have had our referendum in Ontario," he pointed out. "It was generally agreed that each province would vote on the act following the war. We had our vote in 1919 and the temperance act was sustained by a majority of 428,000. The sentiment has not changed since that time."

PRICE OF GASOLINE LESS IN CANADA

One of Few Commodities Selling Today Near Pre-War Levels.

TORONTO, September 24. Canadian Press. — Following a slight decline in the price of crude oil in the United States, gasoline consumers in this country will pay one cent a gallon less for their motor fuel, all of the companies announcing a reduction yesterday.

Previous reduction this year were in May and April last.

Gasoline is one of the few commodities in general use which is to day selling close to the pre-war level, and the cut brings the price eighteen cents a gallon below the highest price of the war period.

To-day gasoline retails in Toronto for 23 cents.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Readers of the Examiner may have noticed that at a school fair in the Marmora district the other day a feature was the public speaking contest in which a large number of pupils participated.

If there is anything more necessary in Canada than this and other methods of teaching our people to say a few words in public easily and without confusion it is difficult to bring it to mind.

As a whole, Canadians are inarticulate.

There is a surprising dearth of individuals able to get on their feet and address an audience without murdering the King's English or worrying themselves or their hearers half sick with embarrassment and confusion.

Public speaking contests in the schools, debating leagues such as have been successfully promoted by the Farmers' Clubs and any other training that is available may do much to correct that condition of affairs.

A decade from now the benefits of such training should be very noticeable.

Incidentally, teaching the school children how to talk is not quite enough—they should also be schooled in how to stop.

Many of the public speakers that we have today have learned only the first part of that lesson. They know how to talk, but too large a proportion of them are troubled with poor terminal facilities.

DIRECT ACTION.

Although the Betting Information Act has been declared ultra vires by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario, the case could be taken to higher courts if the Government wished.

The Attorney-General has announced that the judgment of the Supreme Court of Ontario will be regarded as disposing of the Act and that there will be no appeal.

In that decision Mr. Nickle will be endorsed inasmuch as the Act in the short time that it has been tested failed in its object of materially discouraging hand-book betting and merely left this Province open to charges of hypocrisy inasmuch as the view taken by the American newspapers was that Ontario desired to restrict betting to the race tracks and thus ensure a greater revenue from the Government's share of the money wagered at the machines.

Hand-book betting surely can be more effectively blocked by direct action than by any roundabout method such as the Betting Information Act which, even had it been held to be valid legislation, would easily have been made useless for the purpose for which it was passed.

The best way to prevent the illegal betting is to arrest the hand-book operators whose identity must be known to a large number of people.

They are operating everywhere—yet there are few arrests.

Here is Mr. Nickle's opportunity to score a direct hit.

THE FARMERS' PROBLEM.

The suggestion has been offered to the new Minister of Agriculture in Ontario that it would be good business for him to discuss with his predecessor the plans which the latter had inaugurated of organizing the producers with the object of disposing of their produce to better advantage.

There is no reason why, if Mr. Doherty's scheme is capable of being used to advantage, Hon. Mr. Martin should not talk it over with him, nor is there any reason either why the ex-Minister should not be willing to give Mr. Martin his views on the situation.

Such a conference might not be good politics, but it would be good patriotism and good business in view of the fact that the farmers of Ontario have been passing through some lean years and some of their problems, particularly in regards to farm labour, are pressing.

At present the farmers are unable to offer wages that will compete with those being paid in the cities, with the result that there is a scarcity of labour on the farms.

The question of help could be satisfactorily solved if it were feasible for farmers to give year-round employment at good wages to the men they need.

And to do that they will have to put their industry on a more profitable basis—a happy consummation for everyone.

Thus the advisability of investigating Mr. Doherty's scheme readily suggests itself.

MOTOR CAR DRIVING.

The Pennsylvania Railway has been carrying on a campaign for the reduction of grade crossing accidents. It is discouraged on finding that despite its efforts these accidents are increasing, says the Ottawa Journal. More people were killed at grade crossings in July of this year than in July of 1922. The endeavor of the railway company to educate automobile drivers to the dangers of grade crossings may not have been fruitless, however. The number of automobiles is rapidly increasing. Among new owners and drivers there will be a percentage who will risk their lives and the lives of those in their cars. Some people will never learn the lesson of caution and safety.

The Pennsylvania Company's report on the subject is eloquent of the extent of which recklessness and studpidity are responsible for accidents. In many accidents people have been killed, not by railway trains striking motor cars, but by motor cars running into trains standing at crossings. For the prevention of such accidents the motorist must learn not only to drive carefully and with his eyes open, but also to keep free from handicaps to safe driving. The company ascribes these accidents in part to the overcrowding of automobiles. With too many people in his car, the driver is denied unimpeded access to his brakes and gear shifts. Then too, the motor car driver in most cases thinks nothing of talking to his passengers. The locomotive engineer, the helmsman of a ship, the motorman on a street car are forbidden to talk to those about them. Yet nowhere is the danger of inattention greater than at the wheel of a motor car.

Until motorists realize the gravity of their responsibility and comprehend the risks incidental to riding in an automobile, accidents will continue. The number of thousands that have so far this year been killed in motor car accidents should make some impression on them.

THE NATIONAL RAILWAYS.

Strong reason for hope that the National Railways, that gigantic experiment in public ownership, will in a few years show themselves paying their way, has been furnished by the recent statement issued by Sir Henry Thornton, says the Ottawa Journal. Reducing that statement to the simplest and briefest dimensions, it gives something like the following:

Fact number one—In 1920, the receipts of the Canadian National Railways were $37,000,000 less than the working expenditure (that is, the expenditure on operation of the roads, not including the fixed charges, namely interest on capital and debt).

Fact number two—In 1921 the receipts were $16,000,000 less than the working expenditure.

Fact number three—In 1922 there was a deficit of several million dollars.

Fact number four—For the first seven months of the present year there has been a surplus of receipts of $3,000,000.

Probability—The total surplus for the present year is likely to be ten millions.

In short, as regards working expenditure, the position of the National Railways is now better by about fifty million dollars a year than it was four years ago.

On the other hand, it should be said, that as regards fixed charges—namely, interest on debt—there is a showing the other way. The fixed charges are now at the rate of $50,000,000 a year, as compared with $33,000,000 four years ago, an increase of seventeen millions annually. This represents money which has been spent on betterment of the property. The fact that it has been spent is one reason why a great improvment in operation receipts has taken place.

But taking both classes of fact together, namely both the operating figures and the fixed charges, the finances of the National Railways show a great improvement in four years. This has not been obtained by increases in freight rates, the main source of railway revenue. On the contrary, there have been decreases of rates in important respects.

UNDUE ALARM.

An element among the Home Bank creditors is betraying unreasonable alarm. Appeals to the Dominion Government for investigations and charges that officials of the finance department were conversant about the difficulties of the bank long before its suspension are premature. The best possible course before deciding on action is to await the report of the curator. This official and his assistants are the only persons in a position to know the real state of the bank's affairs and they cannot exactly reveal this until they conclude their task. Outside of these persons the only authoritative statement so far given has come from the manager of the Ottawa branch. This official declares that from the manner in which the branches are collecting their debts he has good reason to believe that the depositors will receive a high percentage on the dollar. Payment in full, he says, is not improbable.

Persons who are unduly alarmed fail to comprehend the difference between bankruptcy and suspension. From the fact that the directors of the Home Bank decided to suspend operations and await a report from the curator before reaching a definite conclusion as to their course, it is to be inferred that they had expectations of resuming business. Otherwise they would have decided to put the bank into immediate liquidation. The suspension which is for ninety days gives them time for attempting reorganization.

Meanwhile, outside the Bank of Hamilton-Commerce merger, the other financial institutions of the country are standing up remarkably well at the end of what has been a trying period. The arrangement of a merger such as the foregoing amalgamation, moreover, is more for the benefit of stockholders and for the sake of reducing expenses than anything else. From habits of thinking in the past period of low values the public have been suspicious of mergers, as eliminating competition. But sometimes in a business that has to proceed by nice adjustment competition, pushed far, may not be in the interest of the public. Where smaller banks are competitors in many places the expense of maintaining branch offices may induce their shareholders to fuse so as to reduce expenses, increase profits, and benefit their customers by maintaining low charges. Alarm over such arrangements has little to justify it, so far as the public is affected.

Vituperation against the Department of Finance because it permits mergers and suspensions is useless as a general rule. Certain consolidations, however, could conceivably be proposed that the department might not allow. For some time critics have charged, justly or unjustly, a design by Montreal financiers to absorb other outside institutions so as to consolidate the moneyed interest in Quebec. It is, however, for the benefit of the country that consolidations involving the too vast accumulation of capital in one or two cities should never receive sanction.

Meanwhile the assurance of large cash returns from the western and eastern crops and the noticeable expansion in other basic industries are having an important effect on finance. The fact that western farmers will go far this year in discharging their debts and that industrial enterprises will require more capital to deal with the increases in business, will materially strengthen the position of Canadian banks. The fundamental soundness of Canadian finance places it above the petty shocks of the difficulties encountered by one small bank and the absorption of another by a stronger institution. Indeed, an important era of prosperity is opening out for the financiers of this country. The increasing size of crops to market and the rapid development of foreign trade past all previous proportions will be bound to strengthen the position of the banks and other monetary institutions. These as a general rule will expand in proportion as the country develops. —Border Cities Star.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Something of a crop scare which developed in the corn market to-day hoisted September and May corn to a new high price record for the season and brought about an upturn in the wheat market. Wheat closed firm at 1-4c to 3-4c net advance, with December $1.03, $1.03 1-8, to $1.03 1-8 and May $1.08 5-8. Corn finished 1 3-8 to 2c up, oats at 3-8 to 1-2c gain and provisions unchanged to 5c lower.

Although at first the wheat market showed a downward tendency, with increased selling on the part of commission houses, corn was actively in demand from the beginning and soon gained sufficient momentum to turn wheat prices upgrade. Before the day was half over, a general rush to buy corn was in progress and reports at hand indicate that recent frost and the excessive rains of late had done much more serious damage to corn than had heretofore been generally believed. Big corn producing regions in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa as well as portions of Minnesota and Wisconsin were said to have been injured to an extent far beyond what was supposed.

Word of corn moulding in the fields notably at various Illinois points, added to bullish sentiment regarding both corn and wheat, and closing prices for each cereal were at virtually the day's top level. In the flurry about corn damage, the fact was almost ignored that between 4,000 and 5,000 cars of all grain were expected at Winnipeg for Monday's market.

The greatest advance in the price of corn was on December, a new crop delivery. Anxiety, however, about scarcity of immediate supplies was evidenced by the action of September. Oats were dull, but sympathetic with corn and wheat.

Steadiness of hog values kept provisions free from any decided change

THE HUNTING SEASON.

The vast territory known as Northern Ontario reaching from the Eastern boundary of the Province of Manitoba to the Western limits of Quebec, is probably the finest hunting region in America. Almost in every district of this vast area game animals of some kind may be found. From Georgian Bay east to Algonquin Park, and from the Kawartha Lake North is a veritable hunter's paradise for red deer, while farther north including the territory north of Georgian Bay and Lake Superior, up to and along the line of the Canadian National Railways for hundreds of miles, moose are plentiful and red deer are found in some sections. Caribou are found in the Lake Nipigon country and in the more northern districts between the line of the Canadian National and James Bay. Bear are plentiful in all this country.

Write for copy of "Where to Fish, Hunt and Paddle in the New North." Any agent of the Canadian National Railways will obtain full information for interested hunters.

TOURING OF NEAR FUTURE MAY FOLLOW AIR AS WELL AS HIGHWAYS

Field of Service of Small, Low-powered Plane Appears Very Bright From Results of Experiments—One Machine Attains Speed of 56 M.P.H.

Motorized transport of the not distant future may not have to depend entirely on good roads for its being. The developments which the past year has witnessed in cheaply constructed and economically operated aircraft may at a time not far distant result in the gradual popularizing of flying as a means of transport, and it is not unreasonable to admit the possibility of light aeroplanes becoming relatively as popular, if not as necessary, as the present-day automobile.

Georges Barbot's trip to this side of the Atlantic, his brief flying career in his small plane, and the tragic piecemeal demise of his machine at the hands of souvenir hunters, have passed into history. But the progress of the small-powered one-man or two-man plane has not been stopped, and it is probable that the art of flying will gradually develop until air touring becomes not much more uncommon than motor touring.

There remains much to be done, of course, before the small plane can come into any very general field of useful service. Roads had to be built before the automobile became very general, but it will be remembered that, so far as this country is concerned, it was the car which brought the road. Similarly, ground accommodation for aeroplanes is necessary before their use can become general, but here again the parallel of the automobile holds good.

A New Era

Already in England a new era in air flying—that of cheap, popular aeroplaning—is foreshadowed by recent successes attained in the experiments with small-motored gliders. One of these, a small monoplane fitted with a three horsepower engine, recently reached a speed of 53 miles an yhour during tests near London. In addition to that, it climbed to a height of 2,350 feet, and although it remained aloft for an hour and 20 minutes it consumed less than a gallon of gasoline. French aviation experts, following the lead of Barbot, are also perfecting similar "pocket planes," intended for immediate use by amateur aviators and sporting enthusiasts, but ultimately designed to fill a useful purpose in commercial life, while orders have actually been solicited by English builders for these planes from the general public.

Rising out of small fields and being wonderfully controllable in the air, these cheaply run winged cars are made to alight so slowly that the risk of a crash on landing, even under adverse circumstances, will be practically eliminated. Furthermore, such machines will be so handy on the ground, and their wings will fold so neatly, that it will be possible to house them in ordinary motor garages.

Economical Travelling

It is now quite possible for the owner of one of these machines to take a trip equivalent to travelling from London to Paris, sweeping high over the channel and escaping all the irritations and delays of earth transport, for about $5. To facilitate the form of travel efforts are being made in England to have regular automobile garages at different points over the country equipped with smooth-surfaced fields close to their establishments, marked in a standard way, so that they may readily be recognized by the chance traveller. In this way the drivers of the little "air cars" will have points all over the country where they can descend and replenish their gasoline tanks, or make any necessary repairs or adjustments.

Before there can be any very general acceptance of the cheap plane, however, it is admitted that those who in future will become customers of the industry must first be convinced of the practicability and surety of the machines. Efforts are now being made by established organizations to prove by statistics that the aeroplane is among the least dangerous of mechanical vehicles, and it has been proven that the ratio of fatalities to the number of machines in use compares very favorably with the railways. Secondly, their reliability must be demonstrated, and it must be shown that the method of transport is both cheap and convenient through the availability of landing fields in close proximity to business centres.

Engines Are Reliable

The development of the internal combustion engine through its use in automobiles has brought that unit to a very high state of efficiency, and it is not probable that any great difficulty will be found in perfecting the small motors of these planes. Similarly the remainder of the construction of the machines has undergone extensive tests and has been rendered fairly safe and fool proof. All that remains to be done then is to manufacture the machines at prices which are within reach of the means of the average purchaser.

Cost figures which have been compiled from the small machines which have already been flown show that small planes can be built as cheap as the cheapest car and can be operated at a cost per mile very materially lower. At the present time, however, it would be impractical for a business man to fly from one city to another solely for business reasons, because in each case he would have to reach the business district of a city by other means, leaving and rejoining his means of transport at available fields in most cases several miles from civic centres. The growth of the air transport, though, will probably find some way of overcoming this difficulty, especially in view of the fact that most of the planes can take off in a very ssort distance.

Tye fact that their angle of rise is comparatively low precludes the possibility of making use of small vacant areas surrounded by buildings, but it would be perfectly possible to use the grouped roofs of a number of buildings for city landing purposes.

Barbot's De Woitine

The De Woitine craft which Barbot flew around Long Island this summer was built in such a manner that its construction, it is estimated, could be duplicated under quantity-production methods at a cost of about $400. Because of this and its apparent safety, the forecast is confidently made in air circles that its type will be duplicated many times before long.

The difference between this machine and an ordinary aeroplane is described as being the same as the difference between a railway and a light touring car.

Regulation aeroplanes require high-power motors to sustain them in the air and huge aerodromes to take off and alight, owing to the tremendous speed they require in leaving the ground and the velocity at which they must land owing to their weight.

These machines must travel in regularly defined airways—the shortest distance between established aerodromes—just like a locomotive must follow rails. Forced landings by these machines usually result in a smash-up like when a train is derailed.

Has Wide Range

The De Woitine craft, owing to its perfected lines, and lightness of construction and weight, owing to its tiny motor and the small amount of fuel carried, can go anywhere. It has a wider range than a motor-cycle because any wheeled conveyance must stick to roads, whereas an aeroplane can manoeuvre in any direction.

Owing to its lines and lightness, the De Woitine machine takes off at low speed—a sprinter could run alongside M. Barbot until he is 10 feet off the ground—and it can land at 10 miles an hour.

A town square, a wide street or a vacant lot would be big enough to permit M. Barbot to take off and land. The extreme adaptibility of the craft permits slow flying and low flying, so that the pilot is able to look round carefully and examine the town he is flying over to decide whether he wishes to alight.

Larger machines built on the same principle as the channel flier permit the carrying of several passengers, but the present machine is limited to the pilot and a limited amount of fuel and baggage.

The safety factor is enormously increased in the De Woitine machine, owing to its slow take off and landing ability. Statistics prove that 90 per cent. of the accidents to airships occur from forced landings.

Fuel Consumption

The fuel consumption is between five and six litres (a litre is about a quart) of gasoline for 100 kilometres (a kilometre is five-eighths of a mile). Gasoline costs 13 cents a litre. The Calais-Paris flight of 310 kilometres cost about two sous (a half cent) a kilometre.

Safety and ease of operation are the features of the De Woitine fliver. Experiments show that, even if such a machine was deliberately wrecked in landing, the passengers probably would not be hurt, as, owing to the low speed and its lightness and frail construction, the plane would merely crumble up like a cardboard box, letting the pilot step out unharmed from the debris There are no heavy tanks behind the aviator to crash through and pin him down in case of a smash.

DAY AND NIGHT AIR MAIL SERVICE.

One of Most Important Factors Is the Radio Station.

DAYTON, O., Sept. 24. — One of the important factors in the successful tests of the day-and-night airmail service recently was the work done by the government radio station at Wilbur Wright field, here.

It was from this station that messages were broadcast every hour during the week of the air mail tests, dealing with weather conditions along the route. At the same time this station, itself practically new, was subjected to a severe test and wasn't found wanting in any particular.

This station has come to be known as the "heart of the weather service" for the air service. In the four months that experiments have been conducted here, meteorological information to and from all the stations on the mail routes, as well as along the model airways, was gathered daily and broadcasts to such stations that required it.

Local storms are "chased down" and details given to fliers, so they may dodge the storm areas.

Powerful Set

The station is the most powerful in the mid-west. Its commercial effectiveness is considered to be 1,000 miles. However, an emergency set with a range of 3,000 miles is in use. It is similar in every respect to the United States Shipping Board station, for communicating with vessels far at sea.

At each of the stations on the model airways the signal corps maintains a meteorological post where data for the weather reports is compiled at stated intervals and then relayed to the station at Wilbur Wright field, to be consolidated and then broadcasted to all the stations.

Velocity of air currents up to 15,000 feet, their direction and other information as to weather conditions is included in the reports. At different elevations currents of air are encountered moving in opposite directions. The value of information given to pilots before leaving one station for another is incalculable, as they are able thereby to map their course and avoid conditions which would interfere with flying.

Construction

Two steel antennae masts, each 165 feet high and 450 feet apart, support a five-wire aerial.

The ground station, or "radio hut," is the center of the ground system, which consists of copper bands one-eighth inch thick and eight inches wide, laid on edge in three concentric circles.

The outer circle has a radius of 250 feet, the middle a radius of 125 feet, while the center circle forms the central point and surrounds the hut. The concentric circles are joined radially at 19 points, the whole being bonded and buried 36 inches in the ground. From the center circle copper tubes extend up into the hut and are used as leads, making the ground connection for the system.

The Wright station is a component part of the regular army radio network, which covers not only the United States, but foreign possessions, and all naval vessels. It is possible to communicate with any point at which the American flag flies, and receive a reply either direct or by relay in a short time. The only loss in time being that consumed in translating messages.

the present powerful parliamentary coalition for any action taken in connection with terminating the Ruhr adventure.

Rumors of "putsches" and insurrections which invariably accompany grave governmental crises, are putting in an early appearance, and while they are viewed by calmer minds as an obvious reflection of the tenseness of the prevailing situation, the Government nevertheless is determined to anticipate any attempted outbreaks by the extreme Right or ultra-radical extremists.

Discount Communists.

Former literary leaders are inclined to discount the Communist bogey; they say that the ultra-Reds are no longer as strong as they were immediately after the revolution broke, and that they cannot count on the masses of German workers, who have definitely lost faith in Bolshevism. The Communists' weapons have become rusted since 1919, their ammunition has spoiled, one former army leader opined. He also had grave doubts with respect to the character and volume of the reinforcements placed at the disposal of the German Reds by Moscow, particularly with reference to financial subsidies.

An insurrection from Nationalist reactionary sources is also viewed as improbable, if only for the reason that these elements are not only decisively in the minority, but are believed to be without funds or material resources.

"The lack of organization talents, arms and ammunitions in both quarters speak against the possibilities of a successful coup from the Extreme Right or Left," one political leader declared. In any event, he said, an uprising would be short-lived by reason of its localization, as no insurrection in the present situation could gather nation-wide momentum. For one thing there was no common goal and no objective to be captured with the certainty that it could be held.

EUROPEAN HEAVIES IN BRIEF TWO-MINUTE BOUT

ROME, Sept. 23.— Mariano Barbaresi, the Italian heavyweight pugilist, this afternoon defeated the French heavyweight, Marcel Nilles, scoring a technical knockout in the first round of what was scheduled to be a fifteen round battle. The end came after two minutes of fighting. Barbaresi, at the sound of the gong, drove a number of rights into Nilles' body, twice forcing the Frenchman to his knees. Then he landed a left to the jaw which toppled over Nilles and the referee intervened and stopped the fight to save the Frenchman from further punishment.

BRITISH WOMEN LEAD.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—British women to-day in Pershing Stadium defeated women in a series of athletic events. The visitors scored 60 points against 37 points for the local athletes. A French girl, Violette Gouraud Morns, broke the world's record for throwing the weight, making 21.01 metres.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING

When the phonograph and player piano came into existence and began to make friends with the public, there were those music teachers who said there would be a falling-off of music students. Their dictum was wrong. There are a far greater number of successful music teachers in the world today than when the sound-reproducing instruments first came. In other words, the player-piano and phonograph have helped the cause of the music teacher.

Now a few doubting Thomases are concerned about the radio craze. This is totally unnecessary. Radio has torn down the walls of the concert hall and admitted the masses. The pianist can play to a hundred thousand now, instead of to five thousand. Every time he plays there are hundreds listening who would like to own an instrument like his, like to play as well, and eventually will employ teachers to teach them.

In fact, the player piano, phonograph and radio are important spokes in the wheel of our present great musical prosperity.

A friend, who has been enjoying a few months' stay in England, has forwarded the writer some interesting data on music in that interesting country of Tibet. This letter was suggested by the showing for the first time of a film in London depicting the work of the Mount Everest Expedition. This expedition reported many interesting observations, but of music they said, "the Tibetans had quite jolly little tunes, but made a deuce of a row with trumpets and things."

The information sent is based on an account of the music of Tibet contributed to the Musical Times by Mr. T. Howard Somervill, who visited that far off and little known land in 1922. Referring to the musical instruments used in Tibet, Mr. Somervell said: "These are not very many in number, but comprise wood-wind, brass, percussion, and strings.

"The principal item in the Tibetan orchestra is the percussion. There are drums of all sizes, from the small one made of the top of a human skull, to drums several feet in diameter. In addition there are cymbals and gongs of various sorts. The Tibetans employ two wind instruments—a long straight trumpet, some 10-ft. in length, and a kind of cor anglais, played with a double-reed and provided with seven holes, which are equidistant, and comprise an octave, therefore sounding in the scale of wholetones. The foregoing instruments are employed in the temples, and with them the lamas accompany the devil dances which are so important a feature in their worship.

"Mendicants and private individuals use two stringed instruments. The Tibetan violin, the more elaborate of the two, has four strings, tuned a fifth apart, Nos. 1 and 3 sounding A, Nos. 2 and 4 sounding the D below. The bow has two hanks of yak-hair, threaded between strings 1 and 2, and between 3 and 4 respectively. Thus, when pressed against No. 1 string, it sounds No. 3 also, and when pressed in the opposite direction it plays on Nos. 2 and 4.

"The fingering is done on all the strings at once, which necessitates their being close together at the nut, the pressing of the bow alone determining which pair of strings shall sound. In addition to this violin there is a one-stringed banjo-like instrument on which tunes are sometimes played, but which is more often twanged to one of the characteristic rhythms mentioned below."

Later on Mr. Somervell said of the tunes of these people: "The Tibetan music that we heard divides itself into three sections. First, the airs sung by the people and played by mendicant fiddlers (these are in the pantatonic scale); second, the chanting of the lamas; and, third, the more orchestral music of the temples. The folk-tunes are simple, usually repeated many times, and almost always in the pentatonic scale. They suggest the negro 'Spirituals.' The mendicant fiddlers play delightful little tunes suggestive of the Scotch Highlands, in the pentatonic scale, or, more rarely, in the scale of whole tunes."

Again Mr. Somervell said: "The Tibetan orchestra, which plays more organized music at the larger temples during religious festivals, was intensely interesting to listen to, although a trifle monotonous after a few hours.

"The music of the Tibetan orchestra consists generally of the following component parts: (1) Rhythm, kept up in the drums and cymbals, and never ceasing, even when the other parts are silent; (2) the drone-bass, played on two of the long trumpets, and consisting almost invariably of two notes, a minor seventh apart; (3) the air often monotonously repeated hundreds of times, played on the Tibetan equivalent of the cor anglais."

Few people realize that more than 8,000 electric trucks are operating in New York, Philadelphia and Chicago alone. Just another bit of evidence that for short-haul, frequent-stop delivery service the electric truck has no real competitor.

It may be hokey pokey or it may be bisque glace, but the fact remains that the quantity of ice cream consumed during the summer months staggers calculation. There is probably no desire, that is so universal and that is at the same time recommended by physicians or all, irrespective of age. With many maladies ice cream is permitted on the diet list. And the household that owns an electrical refrigerator finds this truly "national dish" easy of consummation.

Being sensible takes a lot of practice.

MANY OBTAIN BOGUS DEGRESS

LONDON, Sept. 24.— (Associated Press).—The Englishman's love of initials after his name has made this country a fertile field for bogus American colleges, which carry on a sort of correspondence curricula and supply degrees at five dollars each, according to Dr. George E. Maclean, former president of Iowa University, who has recently been warning gullible Britons against striving for sheepskins from unheard of institutions in the United States.

"I have had a steady stream of people coming into this office with the degree 'B.D.' (Bachelor of Divinity)," he said. "Until they interviewed me they had no idea that the money paid for their degrees had been obtained from them virtually by false pretenses.

"I know an English clergyman who in two years got the degree of B.D., and D. Litt., simply by correspondence. There is one of these 'colleges,' incorporated in Illinois, that has tricked hundreds of English students into parting with considerable sums of money for attractive looking diploma s which are entirely worthless from an educational point of view. The university exists only in name. I have never yet heard of anyone who took one of its correspondence courses and failed to get a degree. Clergymen who wake up late to the value of a University degree, are the most often gulled."

Throughout England college graduates flaunt their degrees in a manner unknown in America. Often a man's calling cards will contain the initials "B.A." or "M.A." after his name, and clergymen have these degrees, if they possess them, printed on the signboards outside their churches. College degrees are held by proportionately fewer people in England than in America, and more pride is therefore taken in Baccaulaureate honors.

Sometimes a man is to be judged by the company he is trying to get away from.

When Film
makes teeth cloudy the lips are kept closed

End Film
and the prettier teeth lead to open smiles

This Offer

May bring you a delightful surprise

Do you realize how many prettier teeth you see nowadays?

Millions of people now brush teeth in a new way. They combat the cloudy film. And those whiter, cleaner, safer teeth show what that method means.

You and yours will use it when you once learn what it does. And this free test will show you.

Those dingy coats

Your teeth are coated with a film—that viscous film you feel. Much of it resists the tooth brush, clings and stays.

Soon that film discolors, then forms dingy coats. That is how teeth lose their beauty.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Some of these troubles come to nearly all. You should fight the film.

Two easy ways

Now dental science has discovered two easy ways to fight film.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

One acts to disintegrate the film at all stages of formation. The other removes it without harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent. Leading dentists the world over now advise it. Careful people of some 50 nations use it every day.

Natural—gentle

Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, to better fight mouth acids. It multiplies the starch digestant in saliva, to better digest starch deposits. So every use gives manifold power to these great natural tooth-protecting agents.

Thus Pepsodent brings its amazing results in natural and gentle ways, without harsh grit.

Pepsodent results are quick and apparent. They will amaze and delight you.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the cloudy coats disappear.

This means much to you and yours. Cut out coupon now.

Deanery Meeting

A perfect September day greeted the many delegates who attended the deanery meeting of the Women's Auxiliary, of Victoria, Northumberland and Haliburton counties, which was held in Christ Church, on Wednesday, Sept. 19th.

At 11 a.m. communion service was held, between fifty and sixty receiving communion, administered by the rector, Rev. Mr. Weir.

The afternoon session was presided over by Miss Lough, representative for Victoria county. Following the devotional exercises Miss Summerhayes, of Toronto, secretary of the diocese, gave a most helpful talk on the work being accomplished by other auxiliary branches. Miss Summerhayes also spoke of the great anxiety experience for the safety of missionaries in Japan, during the recent disaster and the wonderful relief felt by all in the announcement that the missionaries were all safe and also the missionary property.

Miss Kingston, of Toronto, spoke at some length on social service; the work is not at all new, it having been carried on to great extent among the young girls of Japan for the last twenty years.

Following the afternoon session the ladies of the local W. A. served tea to about one hundred ladies, thus adding a social climax to a most successful deanery meeting.

Among the churches represented were Millbrook, Trinity and St. John's of Cavan, Bethany, Bobcaygeon, Lindsay, Dunsford, St. John's, Emily, and Omemee.

BE CAUTIOUS OF SUBSTITUTES

There are several medicines on the Canadian market to relieve Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, but there is one preparation that seldom fails to give quick relief and for that reason Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are in a class by themselves.

This statement is vouched for by well known residents of this city. For instance Mr. Arthur Pinch, well known in the city, states that he was unable to work and suffered severe pain from backache, but after using three boxes of Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills, he was able to go back to work and is as well as ever.

Mr. Thos. Oldham, another well known Simcoe street resident, has no hesitation in saying that for Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, there is no equal of Dr. Banta's Pills.

Never neglect Kidney Ailments as they are liable to lead to other complications, but always keep on hand a box of Banta's Pills. If they fail to do what we claim for them, return your box to your dealer and your money will be refunded.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are sold at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street. Mail orders attended to promptly. m.w.-84

CONNECTING CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES

GREAT FALLS, Mont., Sept. 24.—A. J. Breitenstein, Montana hotel man, was the American who gave the first impetus to construction of the "Sunshine Trail," connecting Canada and the United States at Sweet Grass-Coutts, where the road crosses the border.

Breitenstein was talking one day with Art Baalim, Canadian oil and auto man, closer together, and out of this conversation the "Sunshine Trail" developed.

Baalim was first president of the road, known officially as the Alberta-Montana Highway. Breitenstein is present president.

Originally the road was from Great Falls, Mont., to Lethbridge, Alberta. Later it was extended to Butte and Edmonton. Sweet Grass is in Montana; Coutts in Alberta. It really is one town. There's talk of an extension later to Alaska and Mexico. Already it intersects all east-and-west bound tourist traffic through Montana and Alberta.

It's been referred to sometimes as the "moonshine trail" as well as the sunshine one.

The self-made man is proud of his success, but the self-made woman is more apt to be stuck on her shape.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

UMPEETAH, THE MEDICINE MAN

Mister Gallop, the cowboy fairyman, said to Nancy and Nick one moonlight night: "It's too early for bed so let's go over and visit my Indian friend who lives by himself in a tepee near Snow Mountain."

"Oh, goody!" cried Nancy, clapping her hands, and Nick was so overjoyed he couldn't think of anything but, "Oh, gee! Won't that be grand!" He wasn't allowed to say "gee" at all! But he forgot.

As they were riding on their ponies up the narrow mountain trail, Mister Gallop said:

"The Indian's name is Umpeetah and he used to be a medicine man. If he's in a talkative mood he may tell us a story."

He was in a very good humor and said "Nice Squaw!" and "Nice brave," to the Twins and also said some thing in sign language to Mister Gallop which the Twins couldn't understand.

"Yes, I'll have a pipe, thanks," answered Mister Gallop. "But no kinnikinic, if you please. I'll smoke my own tobacco, Indian tobacco is too strong. There now! Everybody's all hunky dory, Umpeetah. Could we have a story? These kiddies are perfect story hounds. I guess it's up to you to play Sandman."

Umpeetah understood and smiled and nodded slowly.

"M! A story! I will stell you a story 'bout something you see on the moon. What is on the moon? What do you see?"

"A man's face!" said Nick.

"A lady's face!" said Nancy.

"Mountains!" suggested Mister Gallop.

"Yes, but more," nodded Umpeetah wisely. "Take this magic glass and look. Now what do you see?"

From his belt he took a small piece of dark glass shaped like a watch crystal, and handed it to Nancy.

Nancy reached for it eagerly and put it up to her eye'

"Why, I see a rabbit," she cried excitedly. "It looks as though it were jumping into a fire. Do look, Nick, and see if you don't notice it too!"

"Yes, it is a rabbit!" he declared.

"I tell you about him," nodded Umpeetah, putting the glass safely away. "And I will tell you why he imps into the fire. That's my story."

EXHIBITS RECORD BROKEN AT MANVERS SCHOOL FAIR

MILLBROOK, September 24. — In spite of the unfavorable weather fully five hundred people attended the North Manvers Rural School Fair held at Janetville. The number of exhibits in all classes was the largest shown at any of the rural fairs in the district so far this season, and the school parade, held under difficulties, owing to the fact that a heavy rain came on while it was in progress, won the highest praise from Inspector Major E. E. Snyder, of Port Hope, who acted as judge. A special prize of $2.00 was donated by the Women's Institute of Janetville, to the school winning first place in the parade, and the Institute also had a booth on the grounds where hot drinks, sandwiches, cones, etc., were dispensed during the afternoon. A new feature in the way of choral singing by the different schools was introduced this year, the steady downpour of rain necessitating the competition being held in the Foresters' Hall, which was filled to capacity with interested parents, teachers, pupils and friends.

Owing to bereavement in his family Representative F. C. Paterson of Port Hope, was unable to attend the fairs the latter part of the week, Mr. Russell Beatty taking charge in his absence. Particular mention should be made of the Indian uniforms with appropriate drills, yells, etc., of S. S. No. 1 (Yelverton), Miss V. Squire, teacher, as they created an appearance quite out of the ordinary and are deserving of special mention.

OLDEST RESIDENT HAS PASSED AWAY

William Hayes of Armour Road Died Today in His Ninety-ninth Year.

Peterborough's oldest resident passed into the Great Beyond about nine o'clock yesterday morning, when William Hayes of 533 Armour Road, breathed his last. The late Mr. Hayes was in his 99th year, having reached his 98th birthday on July 5th of this year.

William Hayes was born in Birmingham, England, of Irish ancestry, on July 5th 1825. Born in the reign of the fourth George, he lived through the long years of the life of Queen Victoria, and could remember well the coronation ceremonies which attended her ascent to the throne. Forty-one years ago, in the year 1882, just after the death of his wife, he came out to Canada, in one of the old Allan liners, the "Circassian,' chosen because Mr. Hayes had always loved to read about the ancient land of Circassia. He came directly to Peterborough, and lived and piled his trade of shoemaker, for some years in one of little plaster houses that used to face the Market Square. In 1890, he removed to Toronto, where he lived for twenty years, coming back to Peterboro about thirteen years ago, residing ever since with Mr. and Mrs. George Carpenter, at 533 Armour Road.

The late Mr. Hayes was a familiar and venerable figure in his neighborhood. He was up and around every day, eating his three meals regularly an upright old man with quantities of silvery hair and the fine manners of an older generation. His mild blue eyes were failing of late, but his hearing was almost as keen as ever, and he delighted to recite in his strong old voice, old-fashioned pieces learned at his mothers knee. When a reporter visited him a year ago at his home he went through the long stanzas of "Lord Ullin's Daughter" with dramatic effect. "Do you think I look good enough for that? he queried then when asked if he was going round out a century of life.

The late Mr. Hayes was a Methodist in religion, singing bass for many years in the choir of George street Methodist church, and a Conservative in politics. He is survived by three sons living in England, and two daughters in Toronto; Mrs. Wm. May and Mrs. Wm. Murray.

The funeral will take place from Belleghem's Mortuary Chapel to the Little Lake Cemetery, at one o'clock on Tuesday.

VISCOUNT MORLEY DIED SUDDENLY

Leaves No Heir and the Peerage Becomes Extinct.

LONDON, Sept. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Viscount Morley, of Blackburn, formerly Lord President of the Council and Secretary of State for India, died last night at his residence in Wimbledon from heart disease.

He was taken ill only yesterday morning, and his end was peaceful. He was 85 years old.

Lord Morley leaves no heir, and the peerage becomes extinct. The veteran writer and statesman had lived for a long time in almost complete retirement.

Like his famous colleague in the Asquith ministry, John Burns, he parted from the Government in 1914 because he could not acquiesce in the war policy, and since that time had taken no very active part in politics.

In 1919, however, he was appointed a member of a special committee to draft treaties for the protection of the Jews, and later made appeals for sanity in dealing with Ireland.

Lord Morley came out of his retirement in December, 1921, to speak in the House of Lords on the Irish agreement and he gave his support to the Irish Treaty.

WOMEN'S MISSION WAS IMPRESSIVE

Closed Yesterday at Sacred Heart Church With Large Attendance.

The Mission week for women at the Sacred Heart Church closed with an impressive afternoon service yesterday, when Rev. A. McCann exhorted the women to presevere in the good resolutions engendered during the week, when large numbers of the women of the parish faithfully attended the morning and evening services. Remarking that the happiness felt by a missionary at the conclusion of a successful week was always tinged with fear that the results of their preaching would not be lasting or permanent, the reverend speaker placed before his hearers an explanation of the methods whereby they might continue steadfast through three channels of grace; prayer, reception of the Sacraments and avoidance of the occasion of sin.

The Sacred Heart Church was filled on Saturday evening for the beautiful service in honor of the Blessed Virgin.. A lovely shrine, decked with flowers and candles, was erected within the sanctuary, and a procession of singing girl-children in white veils was led by Rev. Father McCann, who preached the sermon. Describing the earthly life of the Mother of God to his congregation, the priest held up as a model for their emulaton the virtues of Mary, an exemplar and guide to all young girls and women desirous of following in her footsteps and imitating the humility, the obedience and purity of her life. Mary, declared the preacher, was the spiritual mother of all the world, always ready and willing to aid her children.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and C. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), lovely and unbelievably innocent is impersonating her beautiful half-sister.

Juliet Divine, known as the Million Dollar Doll—whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's Dream Prince, furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child. His wife's infidelity is making him wretched and in order to facilitate her obtaining a divorce, Miles offers the Million Dollar Doll $20,000 to take a yacht trip with him. Juliet is unable to take the trip herself, but working on her little sister's gratitude to Miles, she persuades Terry, who is an exquisite counterpart of herself, to take her place. Miles does not recognize the little girl he befriended so long ago.

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian.

Eustace Naslo, a wealthy Greek who does not know of Terry's relationship to Juliet, is in love with the younger girl.

Mrs. Harkness, Miles' old servant, is Terry's maid on board the yacht. Her early disapproval of "The Million Dollar Doll" is swiftly disappearing under the influence of Terry's child-like charm. Miles has stipulated that he will have nothing to do with the girl, on the voyage, but under the impression that Terry is flirting with him, he breaks his bargain and kisses her.

After his dinner with Terry, Miles sits and smokes, reviewing his past.

Terry goes to her room wretchedly unhappy.

CHAPTER XLVII

A Scapegoat

Early in the morning that followed, "Silverwood" glided into the placid green water of Monaco harbor: but Terry had been awake since dawn, gazing out at the distant shores, gleaming rose and mauve and green like mother-o'-pearl, and mountains that floated in the background, ethereal as grey gauze, against a blue drop curtain.

Her visions of fairyland had never been more beautiful than this reality, and she was drifting into it with the Prince; so the dreams seemed to have come true. But it was only seeming. The Prince wasn't her Prince.

He was not even a Prince at all, but a hard, saddened man who despised her, and wanted her merely for the terrible service which was to begin here, at Monaco. Her life near him, on board the yacht, had been no more than a preface leading up to this day and days like it, to come.

She did not know yet what would be expected of her, and she felt a heavy sense of dread and foreboding which was the more poignant because of the scene's beauty. One ought to be happy in a place so exquisite! It was heartbreaking to be sad here.

Terry was dressed, except that she had slipped on her kimono instead of a frock, when Mrs. Harkness brought coffee and toast at eight o'clock.

"Why you've done your hair and everything, Miss!" exclaimed the old woman. "I'm half an hour sooner than usual, and I thought you'd hardly have time to be out o' yer bath!"

"I've been awake since six," said the girl. "Something made me jump up, and look out; and there was the most wonderful, rosy land, in the first light of sunrise—like miles or shining opal. And now, that castle on the red rock! It looks as old as the world!"

"Quite a poet you are, Miss!" chirped Harky, wondering if she could repeat the description to "Mr. Miles," and prove to him what a nice intelligence this once detested young woman had.

"Well, sit down and have your breakfast while it's hot. I've a message for ye from the master."

Terry's heart missed a beat. But she sat down, and bent her head over the task of pouring coffe, so that her face might be hidden in case she had to blush.

"It's only that Mr. Sheridan will be glad if ye'll kindly be ready to go ashore at ten-thirty o'clock. Ye will be lunchin' on land, at Monte Carlo, in a grand restaurant, and strollin' into the Casino and what they call the Sportin' Club, so ye'd best put on one of yer smart frocks.

"But ye'll be returnin' on board to dress for dinner, and ye'll have the time then fur a bit of a rest before landin the evenin' again, to dine at the Hotel de Paris."

'Then I—we—shan't be stopping on shore for the night?" Terry hesitated.

'Heaven forbid, no" cried Mrs. Harkness. 'The scandal's black enough without that, I hope."

The girl looked up, forgetting the need to conceal a blush; and now the blush came before she had time to hide it. Tears filled her eyes, and she bit her lip to keep it from trembling.

Once, the Irishwoman would have rejoiced in such a sight of spiritual mortification, but her heart had triumphed over her head long ago, where 'the creature" was concerned. Instead of being glad that she had made the girl flush with shame, she was sorry to hurt her feelings.

Oh, Miss, my dear " the impulse carried her away. 'I did not mean to give ye pain. It's a sad pity for a sweet-natured young thing to be in the position you are. But if it wasn't you, it 'ud sure be someone worse; so it's all to the good for Mr. Miles, as I shall be tellin' his aunt this day."

'His aunt?" echoed Terry, recovering slowly. 'Has Mr. Sheridan an aunt at Monte Carlo?"

'Not at Monte Carlo, but Mentone, which is close by," explained Mrs. Harkness. 'She's a maiden lady, or Mr. Miles might o' been left to her care when his parents died, instead of Mrs. Parmalee, who was no real relation at all, only by marriage. I can't see Mr. Miles growin' up with Miss Sheridan, however, though she s as good as gold; maybe a bit over religious, he d think; and she spends her winters in Montone.

'We were here the year before the war, and I went to see Miss Sheridan, then. She s sure to get the news about Mr. Miles, and this afternoon while he and you are Monte Carlo I shall just run over to Mentone and make things right for him with her, as best I can.

It seemed to Terry that it would be beyond mortal power to "make things right" for Mr. Sheridan with a religious aunt; and the thought of this lady's shocked horror of her set the girl's ears tingling. Mrs. Harkness had unconsciously helped her to realize, as she had not fully from Julia's words of Sheridan's conduct, how "dreadful" she must be in the eyes of Sheridan's friends and relations.

It was Sheridan himself who had shown her what she was in his eyes: a person impossible to respect. It was true, as Julia had warned her. Everyone else would feel the same.

She saw herself a scapegoat; but then, she had been brought to Europe for the express purpose of being a scapegoat. Even the picture her looking-glass presently gave her, of a beautiful girl in a perfectly cut white coat-frock and semi-transparent crinoline hat, did not chase away anguish.

Sheridan threw her a glance of approval as they met on deck, but she thought that he also seemed depressed, even nervous. They landed together at the neat little port, and Sheridan engaged a taxi to take them to the top of the hill.

"We'll get out here, and have a walk on the terrace where everybody strolls at this time of day," he said with an air of bravado.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

A Painful Ordeal

On that mid-November day the Place du Casino at Monte Carlo was at its gayest, for it was the Prince of Monaco's birthday, and the morning sun shone on fluttering flags and tall Venetian masts.

The palms in the gardens clapped their green "Fatma" hands; the air smelled of roses and orange blossoms; women in white dresses carried red parasols; nurses in quaint costumes knitted while children played "tag" round the paths; pigeons strutted in the Place, their breasts glittering like black opals; the Casino had not long been open for the day's play, and the early gamblers were hurrying in, eager with hope.

Everyone looked free from care; yet Terry's heart was leaden. She had become a scandalous figure. She had been hired to be scandalous She was on parade, to make people stare and whisper, if they knew Miles Sheridan or had seen Juliet Divine.

If Terry had realized as clearly as now, just what it would be like, she wondered if she could have consented to this public parade, even to save her Prince

Every nerve in her body was taut as she walked at Sheridan's side, tall and slender and almost startlingly beautiful in an embroidered white frock of Julia's.

As heads turned to stare at the handsome couple, the girl impulsively pulled her white sunshade down so far that it covered her face. Then she remembered that cowardice was the same as breaking the bargain. She was here to be seen. Oh, how she hated it; hated it

"Come along. This is the way to the terraco," said Miles rather crossly.

As a matter of fact, he was suffering almost as sharply as she was. His nerves, too, were taut; and he was surprised to realize that his sensitiveness was for the girl as well as for himself, if not more.

He writhed—fool that he was —at the need to expose this young creature who looked so fair, so sweet, even so pure, to vile suspicions. But the whole cruise was planned for this one purpose, and the programme had to be gone through.

He tried to keep before his mind the fact that Juliet Divine's purity and sweetness were only on the surface, part of her stock in trade, and that he must not judge her sensitiveness (which by this time in her life was surely non-xistent) by his own.

She was probably enjoying the sensation she created, after being shut up so long on board a yacht with a man whom she must think a bear with a sore paw.

Forcing himself against his instincts to this point of view in order to make the ordeal bearable, Miles glanced at the girl's profile, as she walked by his side. It was downcast, and the one cheek he could see was feverishly red.

"She looks like a school-girl who has laughed at a nasty joke, without knowing what it meant, and then had it brutally explained to her," was the queer thought that jumped into his head.

He pushed it out again, laughing at himself for an ass, and reflected as coolly as he could that this was the day of days for the "plan" to work, at Monte Carlo.

Hartley Phillips had originally counselled him to put off the Mediterranean trip till later in the year, when the "high season," at Monte Carlo and Algiers, or any other fashionable resort where he chose to land, would be crowded with his and Betty's acquaintances.

But, having made up his mind to sacrifice his reputation for his wife's Sheridan had not the sang froid to wait for a "convenient time." He had to plunge into the hateful adventure at once, and get it over, quite as much for his own sake as Betty's.

His argument to Phillips had been that "re were always people one knew at Monte Carlo, and that he could count upon several who would occupy the villas they had taken there, as early as November, in order to "get their money's worth." It was the same with Algiers.

But he had been cleverer than he knew; for he had forgotten about the Prince of Monaco's birthday and the double celebrations, on the 15th and 16th at Monte Carlo, and on Monaco Rock.

It was luck to have landed on the 15th, without calculating the date, and finding a crowd like this to spread the tale of Miles Sheridan's shameful conduct. He ought to be glad that things were going so well, instead of feeling a worm

Tea that can be sold at a low price is extravagant in use. A good tea — "SALADA" makes more cups to the pound, and is therefore really economical.

The United States has spent more on new highways in the last 25 years than the total capital invested in railroads.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Vegetable salads are quite appropriate for the fall. Raw vegetables are used in a jellied salad or merely shredded and used in combination with a simple French dressing.

This cabbage concoction takes the place of a regular salad and is delicious with fish.

Combination Salad

Two cups minced cabbage, ½ cup minced celery, ½ cup minced carrots, 2 sweet green peppers, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 cup hot vinegar, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons oil.

Put vegetables in a mixing bowl. Season with salt, pepper and sugar and pour over vinegar brought to the boiling point. Let stand until cool and stir in oil. Serve with or without lettuce.

The vegetables should be cut in very fine dice of uniform size.

Carrot Salad

One cup grated carrot, ½ lemon, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 cup whipping cream, paprika, lettuce.

Grate rind from lemon and squeeze out juice. Add salt, sugar, grated rind and juice to grated carrots. Whip cream until stiff and fold in carrot mixture. Serve on lettuce and sprinkle with paprika.

Molded Salad

Two tablespoons granulated gelatin, 1 cup shredded cabbage, 1 cup diced sour apples, ½ cup diced celery, ½ cup nut meats, 1 tablespoon sugar, 6 tablespoons lemon juice 1-3 cup cold water, 2 cups boiling water, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, paprika, lettuce, mayonnaise.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add boiling water and stir until dissolved. Let stand until beginning to jelly. Add lemon juice. Mix cabbage, apples and celery with sugar, salt and pepper. Add nuts and stir well. Fold into jelly and turn into a mold. Let stand on ice to chill and become firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise and a dash of paprika.

Golden Salad

One cup thinly sliced carrots, 1 cup grated apple, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 egg white, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup whipped cream, 2 tablespoons granulated gelatin, 1-3 cup cold water, 1 cup boiling water, lettuce mayonnaise.

Line a bowl or mold with slices of tender carrots. Pour in a little gelatin softened in the cold water and dissolved in boiling water. Put a smaller bowl inside the large one and let stand until the jelly is firm. Pour boiling water in the bowl and it will slip out of the jelly without disturbing the form. Beat the white of egg until stiff and dry with sugar and salt. Fold in grated apple. Add lemon juice to remaining gelatin. When gelatin begins to set fold in egg mixture and whipped cream. Turn into carrot mold and put on ice to chill and become firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

THE BEAUTY OF HEALTH

Newspapers and magazines are devoting columns to magic or overnight beautifiers. There is a beauty in health that is far more attractive to men than mere regularity of features or a made-up complexion. Health should be the first essential of women who want to win and hold admiration and respect and love. At the first indication of ill health as indicated by dark circles under the eyes, a sallow complexion, headaches, irritability and melancholia, women should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the standard remedy for woman's ills, which has been proven to help 98 out of every 100 women who try it.

COMPELS ALL EMPLOYES TO SAVE 10 PER CENT.

ABILENE, Kans., Sept. 17 (United Press).—Cleyson L. Brown, of Abilene, who, as president of the United Light and Power System and of the United Telephone Company, employs some twelve hundred people, discovered many of his employes were living from hand to mouth.

The mythical "rainy day" caused them no concern. Brown was doing their worrying, he discovered, and he immediately plunged into action.

So it happened that one morning, just a year ago, every employe upon reporting for work was told that unless he planned to save at least 10 per cent. of his income in the future he must seek another job.

"We are not concerned with the other 90 per cent. of your wages, but we do want to know what you do with 10 per cent. of them and intend to find out," Brown told his workers.

And he did. Employes have invested in every kind of investment stock, and have shunned risky oil and blue-sky paper. All were forced to submit a report of their investments and they were gone over by an expert accountant, who is paid for doing this work alone.

A stenographer, who was investing in pretty "underthings" for her "hope chest," learned, with surprise, that his was a poor investment, and was advised to change to something more tangible which would bring in dollars and cents.

Employes who were in debt were forced to submit the amount of their liabilities and were then granted permission to apply the 10 per cent. on their debts, but were cautioned not to go deeper in debt.

"It costs about $12,000 a year to keep up this system," Brown declares. "But when you think that it gives the workers a feeling of confidence in the future, it is well worth it."

THINGS MONEY WILL NOT BUY

One time when I went to the circus as a boy I heard a clown sing a song in which the refrain ran:

"If you want honey, you must have money,
For it's money, money, money, everywhere."

The people laughed and nodded their heads and said: "That's so."

But it is so?

A number of years ago Tit Bits offered a prize for the best definition of money. The following was given the award:

"Money is the universal purchaser of everything, except happiness; and the universal passport to every place, except heaven."

A very excellent definition; though I suppose the logician would say that it is not a definition at all, since it does not define. The excellent thing about it is, however, that it tells some, though not all, of the truth. There are limits to the purchasing power of money. In fact there are a good many things that money will not buy.

That is absolutely true; and you cannot buy love with money. A rich young man may win a pretty wife, but he must have something more than money to command her respect and attach her heart strongly to him.

The same writer says:

"You can never get much happiness from money you did not work for."

And he might add that what happiness you do get comes not from the mere possession of the money but from the benefit to your own character in earning it.

You cannot buy brains with money. You may sell your brains to get money; that is, you may use the high powers of mind God has bestowed on you in the pursuit of wealth; but if you lack brain power no amount of money will supply the lack.

Brockville's Hydro Rates Reduced After Peace Made With Commission

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 23. — The reason for the non-appearance of Brockville in the list of municipalities entitled to receive reduced Hydro rates from September 1 was revealed at a meeting of the Municipal Council on Saturday night, when there was read correspondence which has passed between the Public Utilities Commission and Sir Adam Beck with reference to street lighting rates in which the threat was made that unless the town conformed to the ruling of Hydro regarding the fixing of such rates, any contemplated reduction in rates for the town would be withheld.

It was claimed by members of the Council that when the question of street lighting rates had previously been discussed, Hydro had admitted that it had no power to set such rates, and Ald. R. W. Vout claimed that the action of Sir Adam Beck was simply a 'hold up" to protest against which the Council was helpless.

As the result of the passing of a by-law adjusting the difficulty in regard to street lighting indebtedness, Brockville, according to the statement of Dr. H. A. Clark, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, will be in receipt of reduced rates dating from September 1, amounting to 16 per cent. of domestic and commercial accounts, to 10 per cent. in the case of power users, and to 15 per cent. in the case of street lighting.

The sum in dispute was $8,4645.17.

C.N.R. BRAKESMAN KILLED.

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 24.—Clarke L. Griffin, aged 25, of Belleville, Canadian National Railway brakesman, was instantly killed at four o'clock yesterday morning at Mallorytown Station when struck by the Montreal flyer. Griffin was a member of the crew of an eastbound freight train which had been shunted to permit the limited to pass. There were no eye-witnesses of the accident. Griffin leaves a wife and two children. Dr. Harding, coroner, opened an inquest.

The City Manager Plan

The following paper has been submitted to the City Council by Ald. Joseph Crowe:

Your representatives, authorised to attend the convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, held at Shawinigan Falls, Quebec, report as follows:

We arrived at our destination on the morning of th 30th of August. The delegates assembled at 10 a.m. to hear the address of welcome by the Mayor, which was delivered in English and French. He gave us a real welcome, which was carried out to the fullest, and left a deep impression of French hospitality on all who were fortunate to attend.

The convention opened at 2 p.m., and was addressed by the Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Premier of Quebec, dealing with bonuses of industries, city management, assessments, fire protection, municipal indebtedness, and public health. He is a fluent speaker, and dealt with his subjects in an able and concise manner.

Papers were read by C. R. Lindsay, C.E., resident engineer of Shawinigan Falls, on its industries and civic co-operation, which proved very interesting to all.

"Canadian Highways," by Gordon Grant, of the Department of Railways and Canals, was postponed till later on, and we did not hear it.

Full of Interest.

"Council-Manager Government," by the city manager of the city of Grand Mere, Quebec, was full of interest, and showed the advantages and superiority of this form of Government. Also how a city is in no sense different from other large institutions and factories, who have to contend with competition, having the future in view. Manager-Government is a plan whereby someone would be responsible to the ratepayers. This paper will be published along with others given to this convention, in the Municipal Review, which this city is a subscriber to.

Other Papers.

We would recommend that the press publish those papers and that the public read, mark, and inwardly digest them.

A paper read on "Municipal Engineering Problems," by A. F. McCallum, B.A.Sc., C.E., M.C.I.C., Commissioner of Works of Ottawa, was fully dealt with, showing how hard it was for th city engineer to please everybody and do his duty at the same time. I took not of what he said with regard to sewer disposal, and put the question: What is the difference of cost of operation of the activated sludge and the Imhoff systems?

He answered, quoting Langdon Pierce, of Chicago, that it stood $48.00 per million gallons to about $14.00 for the Imhoff system. He doubted that the Provincial Board of Health engineer had the power to hold Peterborough to adopt any particular system. He also said that the Imhoff system was a well tried out system, and that the other was not, and in doing so agreed with our engineer that the activated sludge system was so far an experiment, and he had just come from Milwaukee, where a sum of $500,000 had been spent on the latter system, which was still unsatisfactory and in the experimental stage.

Narcotic Menace.

An address on "The Narcotic Menace," by Prof. A. B. J. Moore, of McGill University, impressed me very much indeed and the way he sent home the curse of the drug habit when formed, how, when and where the drug was procured, introduced, and trafficked in, the craving which followed for it, the precautions that the Public Health authorities and all citizens should take to stop it, and not let it get a foothold in this country, impressed me very much. He is an able and distinguished man, and knows what he is talking about.

Municipal Finance.

"Municipal Finance" was ably dealt with by the City Manager of Shawinigan Falls, Quebec. Provincial laws differ, so I could not give an opinion. He advocated the budget system as the best, and direct taxation. He quoted the Shawinigan tax rate as 11 mills on the dollar, which was the lowest in that Province, and the most for the money spent. This he claimed to be due to a City Manager rule.

This concluded the papers, and matters of interest of the Union itself were then taken up.

It was shown that the larger cities were falling off, and that only 52 municipalities were members at present, due to lack of interest and method of assessment of $3.00 per 1,000 population, which is too high.

The matter was left in the hands of a committee to draft a schedule of rates, taking into consideration the distance that delegates had to travel to attend.

The convention adjourned, to meet wherever the Advisory Committee would select for next year.

The delegates were given a motor trip to the Falls, power development, paper and pulp mills, and the St .Maurice District. This was enjoyed by all, and was full of interest. Six hundred thousand horsepower will soon be developed at a cost of $65,000,000. The power is all owned by private interests perpetually.

A Modern City.

The city is most modern. All the streets are paved with concrete. No trees are planted or allowed on the streets. The city has all ornamental poles with magnetite lamps set at uniform distances apart to light the streets. The city proper is on an island, which is all built on, no large vacant lots whatever. It has a population of 12,000. The growth of the city has to extend across on to the mainland.

The decorations were not confined to a few stores and one or two hotels, but the whole populace had flags and lanterns in front of their places in profusion. Their public buildings were all decorated, and they were all imposing. All individuals did their own decoration at their own cost.

The city deserves great credit for its city hall, public utilities, schools, and a market covered with a roof of cement, on cement columns, with no sides to it. And all this inside of twenty-four years.

I might say in conclusion that the convention was a success in every way, and hope that this city will see to it that representatives are always sent to represent Peterborough at such conventions, where there is a great deal to study from a municipal standpoint. Also that we are glad we went ,and hope the knowledge gained may become useful, and the money well spent.

(Signed) Joseph Crowe,
Delegate to Convention.

The delegation from Peterborough which attended the convention above referred to, consisted of Mayor W. H. Taylor, Aldermen Nagel Phelan and Joseph Crowe.

"DICK TURPIN'S RIDE TO YORK" AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

In the merry days of romance, when the second George was King, the name of Dick Turpin was renowned throughout England far and wide. On the King's highway he stole purses from fat squires and kisses from fair ladies. His dread command, "Stand and deliver," struck terror to the hardest traveller, but his cheerful smile brought comfort to the prettiest mistress, for it was whispered around that the great Dick Turpin never stole more than a kiss from a lady fair.

The picture is full of thrills, full of breathless interest, full of that full-blooded romance of Old England to which every human heart so readily responds. And the ride itself is a triumph of screencraft. Maurice Elvey, who produced this filmplay on the grand scale, has brought all his inspiration and ingenuity to bear upon the production, and it will pack every picture house in which it is exhibited.

Matheson Lang, one of the most popular actors the stage and screen have known, makes a magnificent Dick Turpin, and brings out all the daring and resourcefulness of that character. Isobel Elsom, as the sweet but harrassed heroine, makes all Dick's efforts well worth while.

This production is booked for three days only at the Royal, commencing to-day. Patrons are again advised to attend the matinees whenever possible and avoid the night crowds. Popular 20c and 30c prices prevail.

SPECIAL PERFORMANCE OF "DICK TURPIN" FOR KIDDIES AT 4.15 P.M. WEDNESDAY.

"We have seen flood and storm scenes on the screen before, but never one that could equal in any way the remarkable series of views presented in the William Fox picture, 'The Town That Forgot God' It is by far the most astounding thing of its kind ever photographed, and brought prolonged applause and cheers from the first night audience. It will make you sit on the edge of your orchestra chair from beginning to end, and grip you like nothing else has ever done before. It's a whale of a scene and worth going miles to see."

TWO JULIETS SEEK ROMEOS

Mary Pickford and Norma Talmadge Will Film Shakesperian Play.

Mary Pickford and Norma Talmadge may unite their silvery voices in this plea. For both Mary and Norma are going to film "Romeo and Juliet," each, of course, as Juliet.

This rivalry should prove interesting to screen viewers. The competitors in Shakespeare's most romantic drama will be the acknowledged two most popular women of motion pictures.

And their Romeos?

Mary (naturally) wants Doug Fairbanks to be her Romeo on the screen as well as at home in Beverly Hills.

Norma's Romeo will be that lithe young giant, Joseph Schildkraut, dramatic sensation of New York's broadway.

Schildkraut is now doing his first work before the camera in "Dust of Desire," an oriental story by Margaret Peterson, that Chester Franklin and Frances Marion are co-directing. And in "Dust and Desire" Schildkraut is playing opposite Norma Talmadge.

* * *

It was Schildkraut who suggested "Romeo and Juliet" to Norma Talmadge. He was eager to play Romeo on the screen, and told Norma he'd like her as his Juliet. A few days later Joseph Schenck (who is Norma's husband as well as producer) announced that "Romeo and Juliet" would be her vehicle next spring.

Mary Pickford was the first to announce her plan to play Juliet. Her announcement came when she signed Ernst Lubitsch, the Austrian spectacle-master, who directed her in "Rosita," to direct her in three more pictures, one a year. And the first was to be "Romeo and Juliet."

* * *

It is interesting to note that the suggestion that Mary Pickford play Juliet originally came from Ferdinand Earle, the artist-director.

Earle mad e the suggestion in self-defense after Mary announced she would play Marguerite in a film version of "Faust."

This prospect was rather disconcerting to Earle, who had put more than a year's time and labor on exhaustive research in his preparations to present Goethe's philosophical drama in motion picture form.

So Earle publicly welcomed the lovely and popular Mary as a competitor, but at the same time pointed out that Marguerite was hardly Mary's type of role and that the "Faust" of Goethe had very little to say about that feminine character anyway.

Ferdinand Earle urged that Mary appear as Juliet, a classical role he said Shakespeare might have written especially for her.

When letters came pouring into Mary from her myriad friends, most of them taking the same stand, America's sweetheart abruptly dropped hr "Faust" plans, on which Lubitsch had already done considerable work.

* * *

Poor little Mary meets competition whenever she turns to the classics, it seems. Now here's Norma Talmadge as her rival. No statement has come from the Pickford studio since Norma announced her Juliet ambitions, but it is unlikely Mary will give up this cherished idea.

Juliet has always been a cause for rivalry among actresses. Last season saw Ethel Barrymore and Jane Cowl presenting the role on the New York stage. And back in 1916 two film versions of "Romeo and Juliet" were made, one with Theda Bara and the other with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne.

DANES SOLVED AUTO PROBLEM

Speaking of traffic laws, now you do—

To drive a car along the Danish highways, the first thing you must get is a certificate from an eye specialist disclosing the fact that you can see a flivver a block away. This will cost you about $1.

Second, you must visit a doctor and undergo a rigid physical examination—and incidentally the doctor, before he can examine you must have known you for five years, and, worse yet, be able to swear that you are not subject to fits of temporary insanity and don't beat your wife. That costs you another dollar—the price fixing being done by statute.

If you drink heavily, you're automatically barred. The third step is to get three business men or other friends—not relatives—who have likewise known you for five years, to swear to your sobriety. If you drink at all, you must strike an average of drinks per day, the percentage of alcohol in them, and note it on your application.

If you smoke cigarets or cigars or a pipe, if you chew cut plug, sniff snuff or wash your teeth in nicotine, this also must be noted.

You Take Lessons

Be sure and have your birth certificate handy—if you don't you're out of luck. But if you have you are permitted to make your application, accompanied by a deposit of $60. This sum is paid to an authorized automobile teacher who gives you—no matter how experienced you are—48 hours of instruction. And the laws read that you can't take more than a four-hour dose at any one time.

When he gets through he takes you to police headquarters. Then a sergeant climbs in your car and off you go. As you drive you are subjected to a continuous cross-fire of questions about traffic laws, the operation of your motor, what happens when you put your foot on the gas when you think you've got it on the brake and why the spark plugs spark.

In heavy traffic you are told to cut corners, figure eights and Immelmann turns. And if you get out alive you are started at the bottom of a long hill and told to put on speed. At the top is a sharp turn in the road; if you make it successfully you are safe momentarily.

Just beyond the turn are numerous sharp stakes embedded in the concrete. These must miss your tires or the afternoon is spoiled. Beyond these are various wooden props scattered haphazardly. This is the last hurdle in the sweep-stakes, if you thread the course you are taken back to the station, where the sergeant, if he feels like it, may—may—certify you as a capable driver.

His certificate, your doctor's certificates, your friends' certificates and your birth certificate, together with a bill of sale for your car and sworn affidavits that you own it or want to drive it, are handed to the police captain.

Go To Jail

He issues you a card, on one side of which is your photograph, and on the other side the description of the driver and the weight of the car he is permitted to drive. Weight? Yes, if you are licensed to drive a Ford and are caught driving a Mercedes, you go to jail. Your driver's license, however, is good for five years. At the end of that time you go through all the other rigmarole, with the exception of charges. It costs but a dollar.

With this over, then comes the car Licenses depend on the make and model. For instance, it costs $200 a year to drive a Cadillac in Denmark. Not quite that much for a flivver. And taxis have a special tax, as well.

But, after you have depleted your letter of credit, sworn yourself blue in the face and been otherwise credentialed, you are turned loose. Tourists then have the opportunity of driving the 200 and some miles to the German border, and once across, go through the whole thing over again. For licenses from other countries are not accorded the courtesies prevailing between the various states in America.

Germany, Austria, France, Switzerland, Spain, the Balkans—each has its set of rules and laws, and each collects what the traffic can stand. And when you tour Europe and want to ship your car back to America—it costs you approximately 100 per cent. of its value for duty.

TREE PLANTING INCREASES

Number Set Out This Spring on Private Lands in State Sets Record

All previous records in planting forest trees on private land were eclipsed last Spring. A record of trees planted in New York since 1911 on public and private land is interesting in that it shows the active and inactive localities in this conservation work. The total number of trees planted in the State of New York since 1911, as far as it is possible to tabulate them, is 56,691,691. During the war reforestation fell off perceptibly, but has recovered and this Spring broke all records with regard to private land. The addition of trees to be set out this Fall will undoubtedly bring the total for the year beyond all previous planting operations on both public and private holdings.

Every county in the State has planted trees. Such counties as New York, Kings and Queens in the heart of the metropolitan district have planted many trees. The counties of the Adirondacks and Catskill regions, where large tracts of State land are located, have the highest records. Franklin County leads with 13,503,000; Essex comes next with 5,999,000 and Orange County third with 3,229,000. One of the surprising records is made by Westchester County, which comes first among the counties outside the Adirondacks and Catskills, with 2,453,000. This is due largely to extensive planting to protect New York City's water supply. Fulton, Oneida, Oswego, Otsego and Saratoga Counties have all planted more than 1,000,000 trees. Seventeen counties are under 100,000 trees, twenty-one above 500,000 and fifteen above 1,000,000. Schoharie comes next with 13,000 and Yates third with 15,000.

New York, Queens and Kings have planted almost an equal number, with New York leading, 28,000, 22,000, 18,000, respectively.

Half the world doesn't know how the other half lives, which is what worries it half the time

Efficient Housekeeping

The modern idea of economy extends into the household as well as into every branch of business. Most housewives pride themselves upon the fact that their homes are conducted in an efficient, business-like manner.

Every housewife knows, too, that the business of running a house, providing for the wants and needs of the different members of the family and meeting the almost daily emergencies is second to none.

The Want Ads. in the Examiner are a great boon to the efficient housewife. In securing helpers, in purchasing various articles of household equipment, disposing of discarded furniture, in fact in countless ways, the Want Ads. are the housewife's most valuable assistant.

BOWLING SEASON AT CAMPBELLFORD ENDS

Club Has Developed Some Really First-Class Bowlers

CAMPBELLFORD, September 24—The members of the Bowling Club have completed a successful season, and Caretaker Wilson is giving the green its winter cut in order to have it in shape for next year. The grass will be covered with earth to the uniform depth of one inch, and this coating will be brushed in and made perfectly level. Visitors who have played here always had a good word to say of the green, and in 1924 it will be better than ever.

A successful tournament was held during the summer, and a handsome clubhouse has been erected.

The club has developed some first-class bowlers, and next season Campbellford should be able to hold its own against any rinks in Ontario.

The closing events of the year were a number of contests on singles Dr. O. C. Watson winning by one shot over P. J. Kelly, the runner-up.

Another Championship for Peterboro in Saturday's Baseball

WITH NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME, FRANK WHITEHOUSE PITCHED HIMSELF INTO BASEBALL FAME ON SATURDAY

Brilliant Southpaw of the Lakeviews Held Niagara Falls, Junior Champions of Western Ontario, Helpless in First of Finals — Lakeviews Batted Freely — Fielders Had Day's Rest.

SIXTEEN STRIKEOUTS.

Frank Whitehouse, Lakeviews' crack young left-hander, chose a very opportune time to attain that ambition of every pitcher's heart—a no hit-no run game—by interjecting his sensational performance into Saturday's Junior O.B.A.A. fixture at Riverside Park, and thanks to his startling work and their lusty clouting, Lew Lebarr's capable youngsters emerged from the first of the final clashes victorious by 8 runs to nil. The second game will be played in Niagara Falls on Saturday, and a win for the Lakeviews will give them the Junior championship of Ontario.

Whitehouse's feat was the local pitching classic of the season.

Niagara Falls, heralded as a team of heavy hitters and a sturdy, well-developed squad, the majority of them right-handed batters, were unable to nick a single hit off the delivery of the Peterborough southpaw.

What is perhaps even more remarkable is that not once did one of the visitors drive a ball out of the infield, the Peterboro outfielders never touching the Spalding during the whole engagement.

With nice control, a world of speed and a curve ball that broke sharply and above all showing the nonchalance and steadiness of a veteran, Whitehouse had the Cataract crew completely baffled. Sixteen of them were retired by the strikeout route. Whitehouse tossed out three himself, picked two others off the bases and for the rest pop flies and weak rollers to the infield represented the Niagara Falls hitting efforts. In six of the nine innings Peterdboro twirler had only to pitch to three men and altogether was called upon to show his stuff to thirty-two batters, striking out the side in the first and third, two men in each of the last four innings, and one in the second and fifth.

Grounder Fumbled.

O. Smith's sharp grounder to Moore in the fourth inning which the second baseman fumbled long enough to lose the runner at first, the error giving the Falls the sensation of reaching the runaways for the first time in the game. Two others got on on bad throws by Cameron, one a fielder's choice and three on walks, and not a visitor reached third with the eighth inning.

Lakeviews backed their pitcher up with some timely hitting that gave him an early lead to work on and took much of the fight out of the Western Ontario champs. In this department too, Whitehouse took a big share with two hits out of three official appearances, one a terrific triple that drove in two runs and enabled the hitter himself to score on an error. Moore's hitting featured, the second sacker having a triple and a double both of which figured largely in the run getting. The Peterboro youngsters stepped into the offerings of B. Smith the Niagara ace for twelve hits in 6 innings and finally drove him to cover, Hudson finishing the game without any further additions to the score.

Drove in Their Runs.

Smith, a right hander did not puzzle the majority of the homesters to any great extent and six of their eight runs were earned by timely hitting.

The Falls crew, with the exception of several bad throws played nice ball in the field, especially Steele at third who handled six chances snappily and started a fast double play. They expect to make a much better showing in the return game on Saturday.

One record was established in that not a put out was made by any of the outfielders on either side. This is accounted for by the fact that the Peterboro youngsters followed the late Willie Keeler's classic advice: "Hit them where they aint" while Niagara Falls did not hit at all.

The game was well handled by Umpires Morrison of Niagara Falls at the plate and McMartin of Peterbor on the bases.

First Three Fanned.

Whitehouse went right to work on the visitors in the first inning, fanning Clunie, Clark and Smith in quick succession.

The Lakeviews got more than enough to win in their half. Cameron drew a pass and Lew Lebarr sacrificed neatly, being thrown out by Arscott. Moore shot a line drive into right field on which Slinn tried to make a shoestring catch and the ball rifled past him for a triple, Cameron registering. Whitlow tapped one a few feet down the third base line which Arcott figured on going foul and did not field. It remained in fair territory, however, and Whitlow got a cheap hit while Moore trotted in with Run No. 2. Whitlow stole second and went to third on Collins' out to Crossman, unassisted. Whitehouse rolled to Clark for the third out.

Second Inning.

A couple of bad throws assisted the Peterboro youngsters to add two more in their end of the frame. Bradshaw singled to left centre and reached the keystone sack when Dumas threw over second. McIntyre beat out a single and when Clark threw badly to first the batter reached second and Bradshaw scored. Jack Lebarr pushed a single into right field and McIntyre crossed the plate while Slinn's attempt to get McIntyre enabled the batter to race to second. The fun stopped, however, for Cameron and Lew Lebarr whiffed and Moore rolled to B. Smith.

Three More Whiffed.

Niagara Falls could not move a wheel in the third, Slinn, Crossman and B. Smith being quicly retired on strikes.

In the Lakeviews half Whitlow fouled to Crossman and Collins grounded to the same player. Whitehouse cut a single past Clark but Bradshaw fanned.

Fourth Inning.

Clunie first up for the visitors in the fourth popped to Moore and Clark hoisted one to the same player. O. Smith was the first of the Cataract crew to reach first, Moore fumbling his sharp hit grounder. Whitehouse, however, caught him off first and when he broke for second Lebarr's throw to Moore extinguished him.

The Lakeviews wasted two hits. McIntyre lined to Clunie and J. Lebarr was thrown out by Steele, Cameron singled to left and L. Lebarr cracked a single through short. Moore fanned.

Fifth Inning.

The visitors got two men on the runways in the fifth. Arscott, first up, was walked. Dumas in attempting to sacrifice bunted a foul fly which Collins took nicely near the stand. Steele's tap to Bradshaw should have wound up in a double play but Moore dropped the third baseman's toss and both runners were safe. Whitehouse, however, fanned Slinn and Crossman's best was a weak roller to Bradshaw who threw him out at first.

This was the only inning in which the Lakeviews went hitless. Whitlow rolled to the box. Collins struck out, but the third one was a wild pitch, on which he reached first. Whitehouse sacrificed, Bradshaw was tossed out by Steele.

Sixth Innings.

In the sixth for Niagara Falls, B. Smith whiffed, Clunie popped to Moore and Clarke fanned.

McIntyre started the Lakeviews' end auspiciously with a single over second, but he was forced on J. Lebarr's bunt to Steele and Lebarr, after stealing second and third, was stranded when Camreon and L. Lebarr fanned.

Seventh Innings.

Smith was passed to open the visitors seventh and stole second, but Aiscott and Dumas struck out and Whitehouse nipped Smith off second.

The Peterborough end of the inning saw the exit of Smith. Moore started his downfall by crashing a double across the right field foul line. He rode home when Whitlow slapped a single past Crossman. Collins drew a pass and the best hit of the day followed. Whitehouse met a fast ball on the nose and drove a vicious liner between right and centre for a three base hit, scoring Moore and Whitlow, and when Clark's low throw to the plate struck a bat and bounded away from Arscott, the Lakeviews' pitcher completed the cricuit. Hudson took over the pitching burden and stopped the rally, Bradshaw rolling to Steele, McIntyre being tossed out by Hudson and Clunie disposing of J. Lebarr.

Eighth Innings.

In the eighth for Niagara Falls, Steele hit to Whitehouse and was out at first. Slinn got a life on Cameron's bad throw and stole second and third, the first of the visitors to reach that station. He languished there while Whitehouse was striking out Crossman and Hudson.

A neat double play featured the Peterborough end. Cameron led off with a single, but L. Lebarr hit to Steele who got Cameron at second and Clark's quick peg to Crossman doubled the batter. Moore fouled to Steele.

Acid Test in the Ninth.

The big excitement in the ninth centred in waether or not Whitehouse would be able to keep up his no-hit, no-run record intact. He started off auspiciously by fanning Clunie, the lead-off man of the visitors, but Cameron put him temporarily in the hole by taking Clark's grounder and throwing to the stand, the batter reaching second. O. Smith tapped to Whitehouse and there were two out, Clark going to third. Arscott "waited them out" and drew a pass, to steal second unmolested. A hit would have meant a run or perhaps two, and spoiled Whitehouse's great mark. The left hander, however, was the coolest individual in the park at this stage, however, and he calmly proceeded to strike out Dumas to end the game. It was the acid test for the Lakeview's gunner and he made good.

AND THREE WERE VICTORIES

Only One of Peterboro's Four Ball Teams Got Set-Back on Saturday—And the Maple Leafs Still Have Good Chance.

Peterborough ball teams batted for a .750 average in their O.B.A.A. fixtures on Saturday—a mighty nice afternoon's work that justifies the claim that this is the best ball town in the Province.

* * * * * *

The C.G.E. team eliminated Oshawa in the Intermediate race, the Lakeviews kalsomined Niagara Falls in the Junior game here and at Oshawa the Curlers brought the Ontario Midget championship to Peterborough for the second year in succession by whitewashing the Typos of Hamilton.

* * * * * *

The only fly in the ointment was the fact that last year's Midget champions, the Maple Leafs, who this season stepped up into the Juvenile series, were beaten at Hamilton in the first game of the Juvenile finals. However, the Leafs can tie up the series by beating the Hamilton 2-in-1 team here Saturday, and Charlie Curtis' team say they will do that very thing.

* * * * * *

Hats off to Alex. Kay and his Curlers, Midget champions of Ontario. The team has improved wonderfully in the last few weeks. After losing the first half of the City League race to the Sacred Heart team, the Curlers got under way and eventually captured the league title, put the skids under Lindsay for the Eastern Ontario honors, and now have completed their work by beating Hamilton in a sudden death game that carried with it the Provincial title.

* * * * * *

The C.G.E. crew struck their stride at Cobourg and put Oshawa into the discard in the Intermediate race, thus moving another step nearer their goal, the winning of the Intermediate title twice in succession. The Electricians now meet the winners of the Brockville-Picton series for the Eastern Ontario title and the right to go into the finals against the Western representatives.

* * * * * *

The Lakeviews, by reason of their decisive win over Niagara Falls, have a firm grip on the Ontario Junior championship. They should, barring a run of bad breaks, repeat the feat at the Falls on Saturday.

* * * * * *

Good pitching featured all three Peterborough wins. Whitehouse's no hit-no run feat and his sixteen strike-outs was the sensation of the day, of course, but Carl Woods, the Curlers' smoke ball artist, allowed only three hits and no runs, struck out fifteen men and had four hits, including a home run, himself, while "Bun" Frost held Oshawa to five hits, and the only run registered against him was a homer.

DECISIVE C.G.E. WIN IN THIRD GAME OF SERIES

5 HITS OFF FROST.

Canadian Generals eliminated Oshawa in the play-off of their series in the third round O.B.A.A. Intermediate semi-finals Saturday.

Oshawa—Hobbs found one to his liking and hit through the fence in left for the circuit. Brown struck out. Hipwell rolled to Dugan, and Murray missed three. One run, one hit, no errors.

Eighth Inning.

C.G.E.—Ross rolled to Murray. Hall threw out Frost. Hall tripled to deep right centre. Barrie singled, scoring Hall, and going to second on a balk. McCarney hit over short and Barrie scored when Critney heaved the ball to the stands back of first. G. Bennett took Dugan's liner without moving a step. No runs, three hits, one error.

Oshawa—Hall popped popped to Dugan. MacPherson made a great running catch of Bennett's long fly. Critney singled and was out stealing. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Inning.

C.G.E.—Rose hoisted to Thompson. MacPherson singled and stole second. Jackson was passed, and both runners moved up on a passed ball. Ross singled, scoring McPherson. Ross stole second. Frost fanned. Jackson scored when Murray fumbled Hall's grounder. Hall stole second. Barrie rolled to Thompson. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Oshawa—C. Bennett singled, but was nipped by Frost when he took a little nap on the baseline. Hubbs struck out, and Jubb rolled Rose. No runs, one hit, no errors.

WOOLLENS AND VETERANS PLAY OVERTIME DRAW

Two-Hour Struggle in the Peck Cup Soccer Final Ended Three All.

EXCITING FINISH.

Ideal weather prevailed on Saturday afternoon for the Peck Cup soccer final at the Oval, and after two hours battle the game ended as a draw—three goals each, for the G. W.V.A. and Canadian Woollens. A good crowd of spectators witnessed an excellent brand of soccer, the consensus of opinion being in favor of the Woollens as the better team. They played the last twenty minutes with only ten men.

Opening Even.

The Woollens won the toss to gain the advantage of playing with the sun at their backs. Dyer kicked off for the Vets. The opening exchanges were very even until Blowers attempted to evade the defense, but Cridland frustrated his move quickly. Monkman and Reid transferred the play to the other end where Jas. Shaw tried to pick the far corner of the net with his parting shot, but the ball twirled outside the upright to go past. At the Woollens' goal Blowers repeated the same performance a few minutes later. Reid at half back was breaking up Vets' attack at the critical moment. The Woollens were the first to settle down and from this period dominated the play.

Good Forward Combination.

Beautiful combination by the Woollens' forwards kept Crowe and Chambers guessing for a while but they responded to the occasion and relieved the pressure. Reid punted back up again to Shaw who broke through the defence and again witnessed his effort rolling past the uprights. Burrows and Monks went down the wing until Jack Chambers tricked them nicely when the play looked dangerous for the Woollens. Warman accepted the pass to give Roberts an opportunity to go down the wings.

Shaw Unfortunate.

Shaw was given the ball in front of goal and steadying himself to get a view of the goal, let drive with a left footer that missed the corner of the cross-bar for the sixth time. Wade, along with his forwards concentrated an attack upon the Woollens' goal. He landed the ball into the goal amongst a bunch of players. Woollens' goal keeper made a poor clearance. Jack Cridlaw went into goal in the nick of time to save a sure goal with a left foot drive up field. Gaskill was waiting for a pass from Warman and without any hesitation he sent in a stinging shot that Griffins handled quickly when a goal looked positive. Just before half time Wade and Blowers tried long drives for goal that were unproductive. Half: Woollens 0; Vets 0.

HALF TIME.

The next forty five minutes started at a fast pace, with Jack Wade not on the field, but returned five minutes later. Through the efforts of Blowers, the Vets made play fively around Woollens' goal, which demonstrated tactful defensive work by Cridland and Chambers. But they gave away an unsuccessful corner taken by Burrows. Wade prevented an attack by Woollen's forwards through his clever breaking up work in mid-field. Then had a try for goal from twenty yards out. Twice in succession Mitchell put past from corner kick.

Bestard's Great Shot.

The left half back carried the ball down into Woollens' territory, and finished a nice attempt to score that had Woollens' goalie in difficulty. He punted up field to Mitchell who along with Lauchlin evaded Vets' defence in the corner of the field. Outside right tipped it out to Lauchlin who quick as a flash sent a beautiful centre across.

Gaskells Opened Scoring.

The centre forward jumped in between the two backs to head the ball into the net out of Griffin's reach. At this reverse, the Vets were rewarded two minutes later through a long drive by Wade into goal. The goal keeper could not see the ball and made a bad clearance that resulted in the ball falling inside the goal for the equalizer. They came back again into Woollens' area to get a fruitless corner of Jack Chambers. All of the Woollens' forwards tried hard to get the leading goal, and in fact were playing the more aggressive game, but Vets' defence kept them outside the dangerous zone. At the other end Tommy Mouks skimmed the cross-bar from the side line with a hard drive. Only five minutes to go, the Woollens never left the Vets' goal until full time arrived with each team still a draw—one goal each.

EXTRA TIME.

Football executive met and decided that they play 30 minutes extra. With only two minutes gone Dyer followed up the ball in the goal, which Griffin seemed nervous to handle but Vets' forward had the satisfaction of falling on th ball that rolled into the net. The Woollens had only ten runs now; Lauchlin retired, injured, which compelled them ot play one-back game. Chambers went forward and was unsuccessful with a twenty yard drive. Wade scored but was adjudged offside. Three minutes before the interval Chambers evened up the score again with the best goal of the game.

Interval.

Teams changed over and went right into it amid great excitement. Dyer broke away to give Griffin no chance with his parting shot. A raid on Vets' goal ended in some of the players handling the ball in penalty area which gave Chambers the privilege of making the game a draw, after two hours play. Vets 3, Woollens 3.

Goal servers: Woollens, Gaskill 1, Chambers 2. G. W. V. A., Dyer 2, Wade, 1.

CLUB BAG GIFT TO "RED" LEGON

Left To-Day to Enter Queen's University — Presentation From Friends.

One of Peterboro's best known young athletes Ernie ("Red") Legon left this morning for Kingston where he will enter Queens University. Prominent in baseball, rugby and hockey, he will be greatly missed by the local clubs and the sporting public generally.

On Saturday night a number of representatives of various local sporting activities gathered at the home of Mrs. Frank Convery, Hunter street to say good-bye to "Red" and wish him every success at Queen's where his work will be watched with deep interesa.

The young athlete was presented with a handsome club bag as a slight mark of the regard in which he is held while the following address was read by Dr. E. H. Wood:

"The little group gathered here this evening are but a few of the many friends you have made for yourself in Peterboro and it is our privelege to show you in a small measure the local appreciation of you as a good sport. We have all been able to see and to know your playing ability in hockey, baseball and rugby and to know your personal worth.

We are sorry you are leaving. It will be a great personal loss to us but a greater loss to the various sporting clubs that have learned to depend on you to always turn in the same steady, reliable game.

But we are glad for you in the opportunity that you have of carrying on your studies as we know of your success in these which equals or even surpasses those in athletics.

We know we will hear great things of you and when Queen's wins the championship again this year it will not be without your help.

We are glad to present this bag to you as a remembrance, and as a hymbol of the place you hold in our hearts.

A suitable reply was made by the guest of honor.

The hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Convery was thoroughly appreciated by the gathering. Among those present were: Dr. E. H. Wood, Eddie Wright, Harold Parker, J. J. Solomon, Max Swanston, L. W. Lebarr, J. P. Bond, Alex Kay, A. Ross, B. Burgess, H. A. Cranfield, F. Bowness, F. D. Craig.

LEAFS SHAKY IN HAMILTON GAME MISSED BREAKS

Peterboro's Juvenile Contenders Faced Big Team and Also Big Crowd.

BRADLEY UNSTEADY.

Maple Leafs lost the first game of the final series for the Ontario Juvenile championship in Hamilton on Saturday when the good-looking "2-and-1 team of the Mountain City won the contest by the score of 9 to 2. Forced to play a defensive game, the Leafs went through the ordeal well. Hemmed in on all sides by a crowd of twenty five hundred fans, the Peterboro youngsters stood up on a sun-baked dirt diamond and fought gamely against a team that was hitting the ball and getting the "breaks". The Mountaineers were lucky in the majority of their batted balls,—the Leafs clouted their offerings straight at the fielders. Six of the homesters' nine runs followed fly balls that should have been copped but fell to the ground. The first pair of runs registered against the Leafs came after two were out, a fly ball being lost in the sun.

The Western Ontario champs, however, deserved to win by a close score. Gordon, a good lefthander pitched a no-walk game, while "Chuck" Bradley was passing six batsmen. Litzen, a big youngster is a very capable catcher. Against Litzen's weight and size, Ab. Delahaye is a "Tom Thumb." On the cushions and in the garden, the Hamiltonians are big and fast. All hands played good baseball on Saturday; Kellar at short and Wyley at second, handling fifteen chances in which only one slip was made.

Bradley Unsteady.

Against formidable opposition the Leafs made but three errors, two of them being wild pegs. Incidentally, the Hamilton team erred twice in like manner. Bradley, who by the way was celebrating his seventeenth birthday, was not at his best, and failure to locate the plate got him in a lot of trouble. He was good at making recoveries, and he did some nice work against the top of the batting order holding the first stellar work behind the bat, and gave Gordon a battle every time up. In the eighth, the Leafs backstop knocked the ball out of the Park making three bases and scoring on a wild peg. He was ordered back to second, on a ground rule that when agreed upon, provided only for a ball hit into the crowd in left field. Delahaye's smash went to the opposite field, but the Hamilton crowd were taking no chances, and it was a poor day for getting anything for the Leafs.

The Hamilton swatsmiths showed no mercy for "Red" Franks, giving him ten hard chances, on which he turned in some nice work. Marchen at third and Hall at centre pulled off the outstanding plays, the former grabbing a difficult foul fly, while Hall raced across the field to cop a hard drive.

The second game will be played here next Saturday afternoon, and the Leafs are confident that they can even the series.

How They Scored.

Hamilton scored two in the second, Litzen was passed. Harley flew out to Hall and Hammond dropped a single between left and centre. Jarvis grounded out. On Wilson's fly to left, the runners made for home and both counted when C. Grant lost the ball in the sun. Bradley threw out Gordon.

After two were out in the fourth, Dave Grant scored for the Leafs getting to first on an error at the bag. He stole second and got the infielders throwing the ball, with the result that he made the plate. Thirnbeck who had singled over short advanced on the pegs, and reached third. Marchen hit a hard one down short; Kellar making a clever play to first to stop the Leafs.

Harley's double, a single by Jarvis, a pass to Wilson and Kellar's tripled tallied three runs in Hamilton's half of the fourth. Bradley fanned two in this frame and Marchen made the other out on a foul fly.

Thirnbeck doubled in the seventh, advanced on Marchen's infield out and scored on Johnston's choice to short.

Two Flies Safe.

A pass to Wyley started the Hams again in their half. Litzen flew out to Franks. Harley shot one at Bradley who threw to second to get Wyley, the ball going to center field. Hammond's single, put three on, and Wyley was hit home by Jarvis. Wilson, whose easy fly to left scored two in the second, dropped another soft one in right to score another pair of runs. Bradley came right back and fanned Gordon, lost Kellar on four wide ones and ended the frame by taking a short pop from Johnston.

Wyley doubled in the eight and scored when Franks threw into the crowd in hurrying a play off Litzen's grounder. Harley walked, Hammond popped to Franks and Bradley fanned the next two.

Bannon who had replaced D. Grant, singled over second. Thirnbeck fanned, after injuring his ankle. Marchen grounded to short, on which a double play followed, ending the game.

"I gave a beggar from my little store
Of well-earned gold. He spent the shining ore
And came again and yet again, still cold and hungry as before.
I gave a thought, and through that thought of mine
He found himself, the man, supreme divine
Fed, clothed, and crowned with blessings manifold.
And now he begs no more."

ALEX. KAY'S "CURLERS" MIDGET CHAMPIONS IN SUDDEN DEATH GAME

Blanked the "Typos" of Hamilton at Oshawa and Won Provincial Title By 5-0—Woods Fanned Fifteen and Was Well Supported.

TWO DOUBLE PLAYS.

The second of the Provincial baseball championships already won by Peterborough teams this season was brought home from Oshawa on Saturday evening by Alex. Kay's "Curlers," who defeated the Hamilton "Typos" in the sudden-death final of the O.B.A.A. Midget series by the score of 5-0.

The champions carried the colours of the Curling Club, and Kay toted in his hip-pocket the beaver's foot that has been mentioned in some of the winter battles in the Charlotte Street rink. Saturday, however, its potent charms were not required by the Midget stars, who handled themselves like veterans against the rooting of a hostile crowd.

The Typos turned out to be a snappy crew of scrappy players, with plenty of pep and a thorough knowledge of baseball. They were under the wing of Ivan Miller, who twirled for the Hamilton Plowites when that team turned back the Peterborough Seniors in 1921.

Big league ball was the brand played. Each team had but one error, and that chalked against the Curlers was a debatable one. In the ninth Ecobichon, playing right field, came in fast on a low drive. After making a pretty catch, he let the ball get away from him when he raised his arm to throw. The Typo was an overthrow to first base by Hamilton, the Hamilton backstop, and it was costly, giving Peterborough their second run.

Woods Fanned 15.

The Peterborough battery were supreme . Carl Woods, the Curlers' speed ball artiste, had the Hamilton sluggers baffled completely. They obtained only three safeties off his deliveries, and these could not have been kept more scattered. Woods struck out fifteen and issued two walks. Besides being strong on the defensive, Woods was offensively mighty. He cracked out four hits on five trips to the plate, one going for a homer.

Kin Baker, the Curler catcher, was unbeatable. Nothing got away from him, and he caught all who attempted to steal.

The support back of the Peterborough pitcher was airtight. Everything was gathered in fast. Two sparkling double plays were features. One came in the second and the other in the seventh. Alex. Baird and "Pinejuice" Macdonald teamed up well around second. "Scotty" McLeish grabbed in everything thrown in the general direction of first, and Barrie was cool at the hot corner. The Peterborough garden division was good, an especially fast relayed throw stopping a Hamilton rally in the ninth, and made the last out.

Typos' Pitcher Good.

The Typos' pitcher, Eastman, was their best man. He has a fast ball, with plenty of control. He struck thirteen and allowed ten hits, walking none. With snappier fielding, some that went as safeties would have been outs.

Carter in left field roamed all over, going far into foul territory to get a high fly.

McAndrew, the Hamilton "Bambino," lived up to his reputation, and was their best man with the bat.

Right from the start when Macdonald crashed out his long three-bagger, the Peterborough team looked the stronger, and the game was never in doubt. However, the Hamilton team battled all the way, and the championship was no birthday gift.

GLENNA COLLETT WON .... WOMAN'S GOLF TITLE

United States champion made a great effort towards the end of the thirty-six hole final for the Canadian women's open golf championship on Saturday got in the lead and won from her opponent, Mrs. Gavin, Huntercombe, England, who held the championship last year, by the narrow margin of 2 and 1.

RAIN REDUCED SOCCER GATES

Quality of Old Country Football Also Affected—Many Injuries.

LONDON, Sept. 24. — (Canadian Press, via Reuters).—A week of wet weather had its effect on Saturday's games in the association football league, not only in the quality of the football, owing to slippery and muddy grounds, but also on the attendances, which aggregated 85,000 less than a fortnight ago, while the casualties in the games were more than usually prolific. The fact that early season form cannot be accepted as a sure guide to the future must bring cold comfort to Liverpool, whose hopes of taking the championship for three years in succession are now beginning to recede. Similar consistent luck, but in the opposite direction, is being shown by Notts County, who have soared to second place at incredible speed since their promotion.

Cardiff City, the leaders in the First Division table, were severely tested by Newcastle, who played like a good side, but could not defeat the Welsh team. The draw of one-one was a feather in Cardiff's cap. In contrast to the superfluity of drawn and goalless games in the First Division, it is curious to note that there were only three games drawn in the Second Division and one each in the two sections of the Third Division.

The newcomers to the Second Division, unlike their counterparts in the First, continue to hover around the bottom of the table. Bristol Rovers' win over South End gave them encouragement, but Nelson seems to be preparing to meet its old companions again next season.

Watford suffered their first defeat owing to their slowness against Queen's Park Rangers, who hurried their opponents off their feet. Merthyr, the only other undefeated side, also fell from its perch. Reading retain the distinction of not having won a match this season. They were lucky to get a brace of goals, one of which was accidentally put through his own goal by Charlton of Exeter.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

All Lines of Business Seem Prospering—Choir Gave Social Evening.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept 24. — Every line of business seems to be prospering in Campbellford at present. C. W. Palliser, the florist, in order to keep up with his orders finds it necessary to add another large greenhouse to his already extensive plant.

Houses are still in demand notwithstanding the large numbers of residences that have been put up during the summer. W. Runnels has nearly finished a handsome home on Grand Road, and the foundation were scarcely laid before there were over a dozen applications for it, some wanting to purchase and others to rent it.

Choir Had Social Evening

Mr. and Mrs. Art Connor entertained the members of St. Andrew's choir after the weekly practice, Friday evening, at their home on Grand Road. It was expected that Harry Bertrand, a former member of the choir, who recently moved to Norwood, would be one of the guests. Mr. Bertrand, however, was unable to be present. His former associates had planned a presentation as a recognition of his former valuable services but this part of the programme was necessarily postponed.

The evening was pleasantly spent with cards and music after which refreshments were served.

Mr Wilkinson's Farm

J. R. Wilkinson has leased his farm on the Grand Road, to Robert Robnson, who has moved onto the premises. This farm was recently purchased by Mr. Wilkinson and an expert has informed him that it contains deposits of the kind of clay required for the manufacaure of the best grade of brick.

Guide Posts of Business

RIDING along an unfamiliar road, you depend upon sign posts to guide you. Whether you're hitting the thank-you-mams in a flivver or soaring along in a costly car, they do their work equally well.

To-day, as you spend your money to fill your needs, advertisements are waiting to direct you. They are the guide posts of business. They point the short, straight road to satisfaction in buying. They will serve you well, whether you spend much or little.

Do you stop to read the advertisements? They are published to tell you exactly where to go for what you want. They lead you to values of which you would never know were they not there to guide you.

And remember that advertising always points out goods of unquestioned value. When a store or manufacturing concern puts its name on goods and tells you about them, you may be sure that they are worth consideration. It does not pay to advertise unworthy merchandise.

HOLD FAST TO SOME THINGS

Interesting Theme of Thoughtful Sermon Delivered by Rev. Richard Bamforth at Mark Street.

"Some Things Must Be Held Fast" was the subject of a thoughtful sermon delivered by Rev. Richard Bamforth, B.A., pastor of Mark Street Methodist Church, at Sunday morning's service, the text taken from Revelation iii., 11: "Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown."

"There is nothing in the world harder to wear than a crown," said the reverend speaker, "and nothing easier to lose. That applies to the earthly crowns which we have seen tumbling down around us during the last thirteen or fourteen years, and to the Christian's crown of righteousness and glory, the immortal crown which has for its basis and foundation the emblem of purity. The law of the Lord is pure and the command of the Lord is clean. When you find an absence of purity in the wearer, you find that one of the chief gems in the crown has been lost. The beautiful stones, one by one, make a crown whose sparkling loveliness attracts the eye. It is easy enough to lose these precious gems that symbolize the charitable heart, the spirit of kindness and the Christian smile on the face of the wearer. Of all jewels there are none like the gems of humbleness and the pearl of patience. Take natience from the crown and you have the short, sharp, choppy habit of unkindness."

Topaz of Truth.

"Then there is the topaz of truth. Remove it and you have an awful blank space. And the diamond of devotion; devotion to the principles of God, and an energetic sense of duty. The amethyst of hope is another beautiful gem. Some people are without hope. They see always the dark side of events, and watch constantly for some calamity to overtake them. Others I have met, whose hands are twisted and their bodies broken, but they have in them that wonderful spirit of hope. They look past the storm into the great to-morrow. Then there is the emerald of humility. Some people who lack this stone in their crown cultivate a haughty, self-conscious attitude that keeps others away from them. The kindly hand is never extended, there is no response in the soul. Who am I, a miserable creature, to stand on my dignity with my fellow-creatures when my Lord came down to the earth and suffered and died on the Cross for me?"

Chrysolite of Charity.

The chrysolite of charity, the jasper of cherfulness, the sapphire of zeal and the ruby of the glowing love of Jesus Christ were also desirable gems to be worn and possessed by the holder of the true Christian crown, which Rev. Mr. Bamforth presented to his hearers as the desire of all true Christians.

CITY OF TORONTO WINS ITS APPEAL

TORONTO, Sept. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—The city of Toronto will pay $10,575,500 for the rolling stock and plant taken over from the Toronto Railway Company, on September first, 1922, instead of $11,118,500 as awarded by the Board of Arbitration in the case. The reduction of $543,000 is on the order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario, to whom the city appealed.

This amount represents certain portions of railway properties, including the head office buildings, which the Transportation Commission did not require, but which the Board of Arbitration held should be taken over any way. There may be further appeal by the company. The reduction in award means $35,000 interest saved to the city annually.

GOOD VERSUS POOR REARING OF HEIFERS

(Experimental Farms Note.)

What may be affected by feed—Is a superior or inferior cow born or made? To answer the question definitely has required and will require a deal of careful and well conceived investigational work. The matter is by no means settled yet, but it is advisable to give out some of the information now available. Feed is supposed to affect size, type and production; and though it would take a whole book to cover all these points, a few words may not be amiss here.

Feed as affecting Size.—There is no doubt that a heifer fed a heavy grain ration will develop into a larger cow than one reared on roughages alone; but the difference in size is much more marked during the first few years and less so at maturity. Experiments conducted in Missouri showed the height at the withers of an eighteen-months-old, heavy-fed heifer to be 3.5 inches more than for the poorly fed one, whilst at maturity the difference was only an inch.

Feed as affecting type.—Liberal feeding may affect type temporarily in that heifers so fed will be heavier and show beefiness of form instead of the angular conformation looked for in the good dairy cow. If, however, the heifer has inherited from her parents the factor of heavy milk production, she will usually milk off this extra fat during her first lactation period and ultimately develop into as good a producer as her more scantily fed mate.

Feed as affecting production.—A few years ago an experiment was conducted at Cap Rouge with twins, so as to minimize the chance of error due to breeding. One of them was well fed, produced 11,392 pounds of milk, testing 3.75 during her first two periods of lactation, and qualified for Record of Performance; her sister was not well fed, produced 3,767 pounds of milk, testing 4.45 during the first two periods of lactation, and could not, of course, qualify for Record of Performance. But experiments conducted in the United States have shown that "the milking tendency of a cow when mature is not influenced to any appreciable extent by any ordinary variations in the ration fed during the growing period.

What course to follow.—Under certain conditions, such as preparing pure bred stock for sale or exhibition, or when it is desirable to increase size somewhat, it might pay to feed very heavily on grain, and it must be said that there is no fear of hurting heifers in doing so, for if the cows are bred right they will lose the surplus body fat soon after calving. But, in general, the most profitable course to follow will be an intermediate one, between the two extremes; on very good pasture, no concentrate, and at other times, all the clover hay they will consume, with silage and roots when available, and a grain allowance of from 2 to 3 pounds per animal, per day, according to age.—Gus. Langelier, Superintendent, Experimental Station, Cap Rouge, Que.

CULTIVATION OF ROOT CROPS

The object of cultivation is four-fold: (1) To destroy and prevent the growth of noxious weeds. (2) To develop various degrees of openness of texture and uniformity of soil conditions suitable to plant growth. (3) To modify the movement of soil moisture and soil air. (4) To change soil conditions so as to make it either warmer or colder.

The cultivation of the soil should begin at the first indication of weeds; in fact it is still better to make a start before the weeds get rooted. To expose them to the hot sun in the germinating stage is the most effective way to kill weeds. If harrowing has been properly carried on cultivation may begin with a cultivator, the teeth of which are 2 to 2½ inches wide, but, if the soil is soddy or lumpy, a narrow-toothed cultivator will be necessary to do effective work. Be sure the cultivator has a sufficient number of teeth to cover the ground effectively—that is, so that the whole surface of the ground will be thoroughly stirred to a depth of from 2 to 3 inches.

The harrow tooth cultivator is the best to start with; the teeth are narrow, they do not throw the earth over the young plants, and one can cultivate closer to the plants without covering them. Later the larger tooth is better, and as the cultivation season advances and the plants get well rooted, the cultivator should be narrowed and cultivation should be deeper in the centre of the rows. The most efficient work can be accomplished by first going one way all over the field. In a day or two cultivate again but go in the opposite direction to that of the previous cultivation. Cultivation should be continued at intervals just so long as the plants are not injured by horse or cultivator.

The reasons for thorough cultivation are briefly as follows: the soil particles are rounded in form, and when massed together without being crushed they leave a large amount of unoccupied space; this unoccupied space in the soil is needed for the movement of the soil water and air and the spreading out of the root fibres; it is also the home of micro-organisms which develop the available nitrogen used by the higher plants.

If these soil particles are too large and too loosely packed the soil permits the rain-fall to pass through it too freely and the water is soon out of reach of the plants; nor does it return rapidly enough through capillary action to meet the needs of the crop. If the particles are too small and too closely crushed together the water moves very slowly and the air is excluded from the soil; and when the water dries out, the particles are cemented together too strongly by the salts, which have become too concentrated to stay in solution. Consequently, the root fibres are unable to set the soil particles aside; the root system of the crops, is prevented from proper development; the plants are cut off from sufficient food supply; and as a result the yields are reduced.

If thorough and continuous cultivation is carried on it will, correct the detrimental conditions mentioned, will lessen hand hoeing, and increase the yield and profits, which is one objective to be borne in mind in all farming operations.—W. W. Baird, Superintendent, Experimental Farm, Nappan, N.S.

COMMUNISTS IN BERLIN CARRY RED FLAG, SING REVOLUTIONARY SONGS

Police Charged Paradeas Chancellor Stresemann Struggled With Last Details of Capitulation To France — Premiers Approve Surrender.

FRENCH JUBILANT

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—(Special.)—Three thousand Communists, marching through Berlin streets beneath the Red Flag and singing revolutionary anthems, were dispersed by police charges to-day, as Chancellor Stresemann struggled with the last details of capitulation to France.

Throughout a day marked by widespread disorders and an undercurrent of disapproval of the surrender programme, the Chancellor was closeted in constant consultations with political and industrial leaders, telling them privately of the plan to quit resistance and seeking advice on how the news could be broken to Germany. The Government proposes to announce publicly Wednesday that passive resistance will be unconditionally surrendered.

In a private conference Chancellor Stresemann made the announcement at noon Monday to Ruhr and Rhineland members of the Reichstag, including Hugo Stinnes.

The Chancellor told the Reichstag members that resistance must be abandoned without conditions, regardless of the fate of expelled Germans and German prisoners. He added his belief, however, that most of the expelled Germans would be permitted to return when passive resistance had actually ended.

Premiers Approve.

The German State Premiers, in their conference with Chancellor Stresemann to-day, fully approved the decision of the Government to abandon passive resistance in the Ruhr without conditions. Approval of the State Premiers followed that of the Rhine and Ruhr organizations, given at their conferences with the Chancellor yesterday. It was interpreted as the final step before Stresemann's public pronouncement, which will be Germany's acknowledgement to the world that she has lost the "war after the war," and virtually throws herself on the mercy of the Allies.

According to the latest information, it has not yet been decided definitely in which form the Chancellor's public announcement will be made first, but information obtained by the United Press indicated that an official proclamation is considered. If prepared, it probably will be a brief document stating the decision to abandon resistance without conditions, but expressing the hope that the Allies will be lenient.

Ruhr Battle Won

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Government circles are jubilant at the news that the Ruhr battle has been won. Capitulation is regarded as an overwhelming victory for Premier Poincare.

The general tone of triumph was emphasized in the rise of the franc.

Officals told the United News that France would still hold to the letter of her policy as outlined in diplomatic exchanges. Her program following capitulation will be roughly as follows:

1—The German debt to remain as fixed at 132,000,000,000 gold marks.

2—The reparations commission and not an international commission to decide the methods and amounts of future payments.

3—The evacuation of the Ruhr to be carried out in fixed steps in ratio to payments of reparations.

4—The Ruhr coal syndicate to resume relations with the French and the Belgians.

5—Germany to resume deliveries in kind, industrial activities to resume, normal work in the Ruhr, the Ruhr railway men to resume work under the French and Belgians.

6—The occupation of the Ruhr to be modified, the number of troops to be reduced to whatever extent is consistent with safety.

7—The blockade to be withdrawn and normal commerce resumed between occupied and unoccupied Germany.

8—France and Belgium will consent to direct negotiations with Germany for the resumption of pay-

Officially Report Their Abandonment Passive Resistance

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press).—It was officially announced this afternoon that the Premiers of the German Federated States, at their conference with Chancellor Stresemann today, unanimously agreed to the abandonment of the passive resistance programme in the Ruhr, but at the same time expressed firmly their determination to safeguard the unity of the country.

On Thursday Chancellor Stresemann will go before the Reichstag, where the only opposition awaiting him is expected to emanate from the Extreme Right and Left parties of the House. The present Cabinet is considered to have strongly fortified itself against Parliamentary attacks, in that its resolve to surrender without having secured concessions in advance from France was fully communicated to the leaders of the coalition parties as well as to all factors which are supposed to have a decisive influence on the deliberations of the Reichstag.

MARKETS FIRM RAILWAY LIST

Clearing Up of European Situation Reflected In Higher Prices.

NEW YORK, Sept 25. — (Special.)— Stocks were strong in the early dealings, reflecting the extraordinary improvement shown by some of the August earnings statements of representative railroads and optimism resulting from the encouraging nature of European news. New York Central, whose August net jumped to $7,137,420 from $1,958,307 in the same month last year, maintained leadership of the carrier group, while Steel and Baldwin were the outstanding features of the industrial list. Baldwin's buoyancy was largely based on rumors of constructive developments in immeditae prospect.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT THE MISSION FOR MEN

Dawn these mornings finds hundreds of men of the Church of the Sacred Heart attending the five o'clock mass, which is one of the important daily services of the mission that is being given exclusively for men this week by Rev. Fathers McPhail and McCann, of the Redemptorist Order.

Working men of the South End of the city and farmers from the rural part of the parish throng the church in numbers that have won warm compliments from the missionary Fathers. The second Mass at eight o'clock is also well attended, and in the evening both the morning congregations are united for the vesper service. Sermons and instructions are delivered at both ends of the day.

Sunday evening's sermon by Rev. Father McPhail dwelt upon the subject of salvation, and last night Rev. Father McCann preached on sin. The mission continues throughout the week, with the evening services at 7.30 o'clock.

FRANCE BUILDS UNDERSEA NAVY RESULT TREATY

Many Hornets Better than One Lion Is Motto In Defence Program.

HALF FIRST CLASS

PARIS, Sept. 25.—The result of the Washington treaties limiting the construction of battleships now is evident, as far as France is concerned. France has begun the construction of a great number of submarines, and plans for the future include a still larger submersible fleet, with several units of great size.

At present the French navy has under construction 12 submarines, six of 600 tons and six of 1,100 tons. Nine more of 600 tons have been laid down, or are to be laid down before the year is out. In addition, the Ministry of Marine is preparing to ask Parliament to approve, in the course of the next few years, the construction of four cruiser-submarines of 2,400 tons or larger, and 30 first-class submarines of 1,100 tons or larger. It is stated unofficially that the construction of 600-ton submarines for coast defence will also continue.

If the programme is approved by Parliament, France will have in 1926, or shortly thereafter, at least 100 submarines, probably a much greater number. The total will depend on whether some of the smaller and older submarines now in operation will be scrapped. Five were destined for the breakers' yards as far back as 1921, but four of them still figure on the naval lists.

Half to Be First-Class.

Of these 100 submersibles, at least half will be first-class modern weapons of war.

The arguments by which France justifies this building programme are somewhat conflicting. First, there is the argument that France has been held to such a small number of capital ships by the Washington agreements that she can not build enough to defend her coasts. She must therefore increase greatly the number of small units in her navy.

Second, the other great Powers have begun to build submarines in growing numbers and in increasing dimensions. In this race, France can not afford to be left behind.

Third, the Ministry of Marine is convinced that in view of relative costs, the submarine is the better defensive weapon. A whole fleet of submarines can be built for the money it would take to construct a battleship, and it is better to have a swarm of hornets than one lion. One hornet may be lucky enough to put a lion out of business; whereas if the lion succeeds in killing half a dozen hornets, he is still in danger from the rest of the swarm. Besides, France is poor and must limit her naval appropriation to the smallest possible figure. She could not afford a battleship, even if she wanted one — as she claims she does not. What money is available is better spent on a number of units, which can be scattered along her coast, than on one big target.

C. G. E. TRAVEL TO BROCKVILLE THURS.

The C.G.E. team will journey to Brockville on Thursday for the first game of the Intermediate O.B.A.A. semi-finals, instead of on Saturday, as was first expected, Jake Solomon, O.B.A.A. representative, announced this morning. The return game will be played here next week, probably on Saturday, unless some other date is agreed upon by the two teams. The winner of this round will go into the finals against the Western winners.

PRESIDENT EBERT TAKING MEASURES

LONDON, September 25 (Canadian Press). — President Ebert, according to a Central News despatch from Berlin, had a long consultation with Gustave Noske, Chief of Police, last night, and energetic measures were discussed, and will be submitted to the Conference of Federal Premiers to-morrow.

The correspondent says it is reported that should the Bavaria Nationalists make trouble, the Cabinet will resign, and Noske will be appointed dictator.

SHEPHERD CREATES A SENSATION AT HEARING

LONDON, September 25. Canadian Press. — An Albanian shepherd testifying before the International Committee of Inquiry at Janino into the massacre of General Tellini and his suite, created a sensation, says an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Athens, when he declared that the Albanian Governor of Argyrokastrq asked him some time before the crime if he would undertake to "assassinate a mission."

General Tellini and his brother officers were members of an interallied mission delimiting Greco-Albanian frontier.

GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION COAL INDUSTRY IS URGED

To Protect Public From Monopolistic Evil, U. S. Commission Suggests Levy of Graded Tax On Royalties and Differential Profits

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—Declaring that to deal effectually with the problems of national coal industry, government must go beyond "continuous fact finding and publicity," the Coal Commission in its final report to President Coolidge, recommends Government supervision of the industry through exercise of its inter-state commerce powers. Direct responsibility for such supervision, the Commission believes, should be lodged in a specially created division of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, opertaing through a system of licensing to include dealers as well as producers.

A fundamental evil in anthracite industry, the report said, lies in its monopolistic feature. To protect public interest in this regard, the Commission suggested the levy of a graded tax on royalties and differential profits. While this would not lower the price of coal, the Commission said, it would secure a public revenue without increasing the price. In the availability of a substitute for hard coal, it was said, the public holds in its own hands the main remedy for extortionate prices.

Over-development, irregularity of operation and uneconomic distribution as to rail carriage were summarized as basic evils of the bituminous industry.

RUSSIA SEES REVIVAL NIGHT LIFE AND FUN FOR MERRY POPULOUS

While Residents of Moscow Have Plenty of Troubles They Are Enjoying Themselves These Days — Cabarets, Restaurants, Cafes in Full Swing.

By JOHN GRAUDENZ

MOSCOW, Russia, Sept 25. — (United Press)—The western world seems to have an idea that the Russian of to-day has little but gloom in his daily and nightly life.

But the people of Moscow while they have plenty of troubles, are enjoying themselves these days.

Th old Russian habit of late or rather early, hours has revived. The varous cabarets restaurant, and cafe chantants have adapted themselves to the revived custom. The performances in many of them begin after midnight and last until the hours of the late morning.

If you are not accustomed to this and have day work, it come, hard at the start. It is 1 a.m. and you have just turned in for a good sleep after a hard days work. When the 'phone rings. Not in a very friendly mood, you trot over to the 'phone and a sweet voice asks: "What are you doing this evening?" Well, if the lady back of the voice is attractive enough, you scorn the bed, dress and go out to one of these numerous night-life resorts.

After many years of hardships, the public seems to have a frantic desire to amuse itself.

During the summer (when this is written) most of the regular theatres are closed but there are a number of both outdoor and indoor stags running full blast. The Summer Hermitage has four stages. On the outdoor stage in the big garden pseudo American dancers, acrobats, humorists and an unending number of singers, male and female try their best to entertain a good-natured audience, only too anxious to be entertained.

Three Indoor Stages

On one of three indoor stages a musical comedy is being performed many of the singers being good enough for the first-class theatres of New York and Chicago. On another stage regular plays of a more serious cast are shown. On the third called the "Crooked Jimmy," I don't know why there is always a variety show.

Then Moscow has five big gambling establishments, one with a big park where the gamblers can cool off and hear music. Strange to say, there is no record of a gambler's suicide at this place.

The Winter Hermitage called the "Olive". Hermitage has a cabaret which never fails to include the "famous gypsy choir."

Besides these more famous places, there are a number of others, many of them with reputations coming down from the days of the old empire. All of them have cabarets some excellent. There are also a number of gardens with open-air stages, which are resorted to largely by what are termed in America the "common people." This includes the governmental employers of lower rank, who do not care to be seen at the costlier places, with the "nepmen" as the newly-rich profiteer class are known.

The "Naked" Dances

The orchestras that play in these gardens are very good and keep pretty well up to date with their programs. Some of these gardens produce the so-called "naked" dances. For the benefit of shocked readers, it is well to say that the "nakedness" is faked. At the same time the costumes would be considered somewhat extreme even for the New York stage. Some of the dances on these open air stages, performed exclusively by women, are frankly extreme, but dancers and owners of the gardens say they are art.

The number of "beer restaurants," as they are called here, have increased immensely. They are the "beer gardens" of Germany and of America before Volstead law. A number of these have "Volks Choirs" and each has a group of "Volks Dancers" with some kind of music, usually good.

Then there is the "Enthusiast." Located in a former wine cellar, with bare gray walls rough tables and rougher chairs, this place is open to the members and their friends only. It has a buffet a small kitchen and a threepiece male orchestra. The visitors are largely male and female poets painters, artists, dancers journalists and a large sprinkling of foreigners who have member friends The place is purely informal. When the air gets hot the men take off their coats, vests and even roll up their sleeves, to allow more freedom to "shake the shimmy," which some of the most courageous try with plenty of pluck, but less grace.

In the Underworld

Of course there are opium and other dope dens in the underworld. There are also minor gambling places, where the masses play lotto, a favorite for the shopgirl and typist.

All of the Moscow movie houses are crowded at every performance, although most of the pictures are old and worn out.

As yet there are no ice cream parlors, as Canadians know them, but there are plenty of pastry shops and tea shops where ic cream which is highly prized by Russians, is served In addition there are scores of ice cream sellers on the streets, like the hokey-pokey wagons in New York.

Yes, the Russians do have some fun in their daily, life after all.

HEROIC CAPTAIN FROM JAPAN AT VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 25. — (Canadian Press).—Captain Samuel Robinson, R.N.R., commander of the Canadian Pacific S.S. Empress of Australia, the heroic figure of the recent Japanese disaster, was stormed by a small army of newspapermen and reporters as his ship made a night run from Victoria to Vancouver, where she docked at six o'clock in the morning. On his desk lay the sixteen-page report, which he will submit to his company. Behind his chair lay a "refugee," a fine spaniel picked up by one of his men during the awful days which followed the earthquake of September 1.

YOUNG PEOPLE HELD MEETING IN AFTERNOON

Delegates Present From All Parts of the Peterboro District at Both Sessions.

ROUND TABLE TALK

A meeting was held in St. John's School-room or Monday afternoon, specially for the leaders in the work among young people in the Church of England. The meeting was addressed by W. R. Sproule, first vice-president of the Dominion Council of the A.Y.P.A., who will be remembered by those who attended the Dominion Conference held in Peterboro two years ago, as an outstanding figure in A.Y.P.A. work.

Representatives were present from Omemee, All Saints' and St. John's, Peterboro, and Lakefield.

Mr. Sproule invited discussson, and the result was that a round table conference took place, which was inspirational and of practical value to the various branches.

For Active Work.

Mr. Sproule explained the underlying reason why the A.Y.P.A. was organized; it was to be a young people's organization, primarily for young people over 18 years of age, who were banded together for their own good and for active work in the Church. This gathering of young people into the Church and its active life is a means toward the greater end, that of extending Christ's kingdom in the locality in which one lives. There is the opportunity and the challenge. It is a recognized fact that from 18 to 24 years is the time of doubt when young people begin to doubt what they accepted earlier in life. This is the opportunity and the challenge is to take advantage of the means offered to lead them back to the church and make them useful members of it. Appropriate study, which comes under the head of edification, helps to mold the minds and characters of the young people as it is of untold benefit to study something useful, which enables one to appreciate the better and higher things of life.

Mr. Sproule stressed the importance of outdoor sports in the recreation and social side of the programme. It is advisable that the leader or convenor of the Social Committee does not attempt to exploit his (or her) department above the others, which are of equal importance at least. Let the recreation be constructive rather than destructive, so that what might otherwise be a liability will be converted into an asset.

In our sports do not forget that anyone can sit in the grand stand and criticize, and it is wise to get all the young people "playing the game," and to provide inside the church for the social life of its young people and not leave their "spare time" to be exploited by private interests. This latter is deplorably true of the United States.

The Worship Side.

The worship side of the programme is the most important of all and involves regular attendance at the services of the church, especially the Holy Communion. Let us avoid the idea of striving to make a good showing of numbers at church services, regardless of the spiritual side. Carefully organized study groups are valuable assets in this branch of A.Y.P.A.

The "work" side of the question was discussed, and the speaker urged a definite obejct of work as it is almost impossible to overwork a branch, which, however, will go to pieces without some definite service.

The Dominion Council, which celebrates this year the coming of age, or 21st birthday, of the A. Y. P. A., will hold its annual conference in London, Ontario, on October 18, 19, 20, and 21. The A.Y.P.A. came into being in Huron diocese, and it is fitting that the 21st birthday should be celebrated there. The programme is a live one, and it is hoped that there will be a good representation from Peterboro district.

Mr. A. Hope moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Sproule, which was seconded by Mr. Wilbert Clemett, and heartily endorsed by the meeting.

Evening Meeting.

At the evening meeting, which was held in St. John's school room, there was a large attendance, which included delegates from All Saints', St. George's, St. John's and St. Luke's, Peterborough and also Christ church, Omemee, St. Thomas', Millbrook and St. John's, of Lakefield. Rev. C. G. King of Lakefield, opened the meeting with prayer. Dr. R. C. Blagrave introduced Mr. Sproule in a fitting speech in which he urged greater zeal in the higher and more spiritual side of A.Y.P.A. life, more devotion to church attendance and Bible study which make better educated church men and women of the young people.

Mr. Sproule recalled with pleasure the conference held two years ago in Peterborough which he had attended and which impressed him by the amount of "pep" shown by the young people of the district in the work of their branches.

Mr. Sproule is making a tour of Peterborough, Kingston and Brockville and hopes to stir up a special interest in this year's conference,

THE PERSIANS HOSTILE VOTE

Article Ten in League Covenant Held Up as a Result.

GENEVA, September 25 (Canadian Press). — The hostile vote of Persia to-day prevented the unanimous adoption of Canada's interpretation of Article Ten of the League of Nations Covenant, which would remove all suspicion that the League is a "Super-state."

The vote on th Canadian proposal, which was brought up in the session of the League Assembly today, was 29 for 1 against 13 abstentions.

Proponents of the measure immediately conferred with the Persian delegates, who announced that they would telegraph to Teheran for instructions to change their vote, thus preventing the defeat of the Canadian interpretation.

In debate before voting the representatives of both Persia and Panama spoke against resolution. The Persian delegate, however, said his country was willing to have resolution submitted to permanent court of international justice for and advisory opinion.

Resolution provided that constitutional authorities of each state alone should have right to determine to extent military assistance should be accorded other nations if their integrity were threatened.

Canadian spokesman favored resolution and French representative, Professor Joseph Barthelemy, in an eloquent address also approved it. Frenchman remarked that impression existed among some of delegates that with article thus intrepreted entrance of United States into League might be hastened, if so, he added, it was so much the better.

SCOTCH MINES SCENE TRAGEDY

Water Flooded Into Falkirk Mine With Heavy Loss of Life.

GLASGOW, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press.)— Seventy lives are believed to have been lost early to-day in one of the worst colliery disasters in the history of Scotch mines, when the deep pit at James Nimmo Company's colliery near Falkirk was flooded.

The water which flooded the pit broke through the walls of an adjoining pit which had not been used for many years. Active pit was flooded so quickly that there was no opportunity to warn the miners. They had no chance to get to the pit head, and only one man escaped after the inrush of water began.

Frantic relatives of the victims rushed to the pit head at which rescuers hastily began work, but little if any hope was entertained of saving any of the unfortunate.

ONWARD BIBLE CLASS GAVE MEMBER SHOWER

On Monday night the Onward Bible class with their teachers, Mrs. James Stubbs, met at the home of Mrs. H. McHoull, Harvey street, and gave a miscellaneous shower in honor of one of their highly esteemed members, Miss Mable Crane, whose marriage takes place this week.

The evening was pleasantly spent in games and music. At the close dainty refreshments were served.

FUNERAL TO-DAY.

The funeral of the late Mr. William Hayes took place this afternoon from Belleghem's Funeral Chapel to the Little Lake Cemeteray. Service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Bousfield of St. Luke's Church. The pallbearers were all fraternal and musical friends, as follows: Messrs. H. Rush, G. Duncan, J. A. Aylmer, R. Layfield, G. Lech and R. Black.

Rotary's Plan to Improve Their Physical Conditions and Teach Them To Be Self-Sustaining Is Enthusiastically Endorsed.

SPLENDID MOVEMENT

1. To improve as far as possible the physical condition of all crippled children in Peterboro, and the immediate district.

2. To see that such children are educated or trained so that they may become self-sustaining.

3. To endeavor to have occupations provided for such children.

These are the chief objectives of a movement inaugurated by the Rotary Club of Peterboro, and announced at an open meeting at the Empress Hotel last evening at which in addition to the members of the club and their wives—the Rotary-Annes—there were present representatives of the clergy, Medical society, Health Association, Well Babies' Clinic, Board of Health, Kiwanis Club, and other organizations, whose co-operation in the humanitarian scheme will be enlisted.

Rotarian Dr. A. W. McPherson, chairman of the Crippled Children's Commitee of the Rotary Club, who was in charge of the proceedings for greater part of the programme, outlined the leading details of Rotary's plans for the welfare of the scores of unfortunate little ones who through no fault of their own, are facing life handicapped by some physical object that might easily be remedied, and the enthusiasm with which the scheme was endorsed by the representative citizens present, left no doubt as to the co-operation of the community in this great enterprise. Speaker after speaker approved of the plan and promised the assistance of the organization he represented, and at the conclusion of the speeches, Dr. McPherson declared that the committee proposed definite action—not merely talk.

During the dinner, President V. J. McElderry was in the chair and Rotarian John Crane presided at the piano for the singing of several choruses under the direction of song leader Rotarian R. A. Browne.

The meeting was then turned over to Dr. McPherson, who explained the procedure considered by the committee as necessary for a successful effort on behalf of the city's crippled children. After outlining the objectives of the movement as set forth above, Dr. McPherson said that the first step would be to take a house-to-house survey of the city for the purpose of definitely ascertaining the number of crippled children. This work it was hoped would be undertaken by the Rotary-Annes. Then each Rotarian would be assigned one or more children over which he would be expected to make a complete report. After this step had been taken, and the cases that required attention were definitely located, a committee of doctors would examine the children with a view of deciding what treatment would be necessary.

In some doubtful cases it might be necessary to bring a specialist for consultation.

In addition to improving the physical condition of the child, the committee would seek to have all defective children educated or trained in order that they might be in a position to earn their own livelihood, and to provide employment for them.

It was not expected that this work could be accomplished all at once, but it was the hope of the committee that eventually it might be said of Peterboro that there was nowhere in the city or suburbs a crippled child that was not being looked after.

Last Year's Work.

Dr. W. D. Scott, called upon to speak of the work done during the past year for crippled children by the Health Association, acting for the Rotary Club, first highly commended the scheme explained by Dr McPherson, and said that he was sure that in the years to come the Rotarians would have the blessing of Heaven called down upon them from many and many a source. The committee of which he was chairman, had dealt with some twelve cases, and Dr. Scott described briefly three of these in which great improvement had been effected. He welcomed the comprehensive scheme that was now proposed.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., promised every assistance that he could give to the plan, which he endorsed enthusiastically, and which he was sure would have the support of the whole community. The fact that Dr. Forbes Godfrey was now Minister of Health for Ontario he considered as a most fortunate thing and he was confident that the Rotarians might expect the backing of the Minister in their undertaking. Mr. Gordon refrred to the magnificent work of the Sick Children's Hospital, as a sample of what could be done, and declared that Ontario should never forget J. Ross Robertson who founded the institution, and left $2,500,000 for its maintenance.

Dr. G. S. Cameron, secretary of the Peterboro Health Association, referred briefly to the work done by that body for the Rotary Club in looking after crippled children. The money granted by the Rotary Club had been spent carefully and results

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Sir,—Yesterday's Mail and Empire in reporting Mr. Meighen's Western speeches attacking the King Goverment, states that Mr. Meighen laid it down that we must return to the two old parties. What a pity he and those who follow him had not discovered all that before the party was wrecked by his attempts at a double-barrelled fifty-fifty absurdity. It's brains we need not wheat in this country.

SPECTATOR.

DR. GANDIER AND CHURCH UNION.

Sir: Principal Gandier, as Moderator of Assembly, has published broadcast an official message to Presbyterians, telling them that "the question of Church Union is now finally settled," and calling upon them to rally in support of the Mission Funds—telling them, in other words—that their church is to be scrapped, wiped out for ever—that they, themselves, with all their rights in that church, are to be handed over by civil law to a new Church which has been prepared for them—that they may as well accept the situation and pay out their money for the new corporation to lay hold on whenever it gets the power. The chief feature of Dr. Gandier's letter is its complete absence of fact.

1. Dr. Gandier states that "church union is now finally settled" when the action of himself and his fellow-coercionists, in asking parliament to settle it, shows that it is not settled, and that he knows that it is not settled. His letter is simply an effort to keep the people quiet until he gets them tied hand and foot by Act of Parliament. The world may well be thankful that Presbyterians in history have never kept quiet in the face of injustice, intolerance and wrong, and Canadian Parliaments have too much regard for honor, truth and right to be made the tool of such wrong.

2. Dr. Gandier states that the whole procedure in re "Church union" has been in strict accordance with the constitution of our church. This statement is absolutely untrue. The church has no constitutional provision for its own disbanding, and Dr. Gandier cannot point out one single provision in its constitution for such an end. The Presbyterian church was never intended to disband so long as there are people who wish to carry it on. All its constitutional steps for its own continuance, and every minister and elder on taking office under that constitution, is pledged to that continuance. The use of the church courts to disband the church is unconstitutional and illegal. The Assembly has no shadow of right to wind up and sell out the church, and hand over its membership to some new organization, and the members of the Assembly who attempt such a thing transgress their rights and violate their solemn ordination vows.

3. Dr. Gandier states that every provision has been made for the protection of the rights of those who do not accept union. This is not a fact. Our supreme right in the Presbyterian church is our religious liberty, our right to remain in that church and carry on her work, and the "Church Union Bill" would take away that liberty, wipe out that church, drive us out of her by civil law, coerce us into a new church, and compel us to remain there or get out homeless on to the street.

4. Dr. Gandier places upon those who seek to maintain their religious liberty "the onus of disrupting the church." This recalls Esop's fable of the wolf and the lamb drinking together, the wolf upstream. Seeking an excuse for coercion, he fouled the water and cried out: — "What do you mean by fouling the water that I am drinking?" "How can I foul it for you when the water is flowing from you to me?" was the reply. "Well you have no business there anyway," said the wolf, as he "Consummated Union." It is Dr. Gandier and his fellow-coercionists who are distracting and disrupting the church and ruining her work. If they wish a new church let them quietly go to it; none will object or oppose.

5. Dr. Gandier completely ignores the greatest fact, the supreme fact, of this whole question, that is the people. He does not even refer to them in his letter. To him the people are nothing, nobody, nowhere. They are not even worth the mentioning. His continued refrain is: "The Church has spoken." "The Church has decided," that is, the Assembly has decided. This is the Roman Catholic doctrine of the Church. She teaches that her clergy are the Church by divine right, and that the part of the people is simply to obey. She has a perfect right to her own doctrine of the Church. But in the great Churches of the Reformation, in world-wide Presbyterianism, the people are the Church, and ministers are chosen by the people to serve the Church within clearly defined limits, and pledged to "maintain and defend" that church within those limits.

Dr. Gandier ignores the people. He does not mention that only one-third of them voted for "Union" and that many of that one-third were in missions, supported by the church, including Chinese and other aliens, and numbers of Canadians who had never been really Presbyterians—while on the other hand—the self-supporting churches in more than two hundreds of the largest centres east of the lakes, centres such as Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, London, etc., the main strength of the Church, gave a combined total majority against "Union." Dr. Gandier does not tell that when the vote was taken it was on the distinct pledge that "Union" would not be pressed unless there were "practically unanimous action" of the people. He does not tell that when the people voted they had no hint of the 'iniquitous" Church Union Bill upon which they have never had an opportunity of giving their judgment. Never were the people of a Church treated with greater contempt than in these "Union" proceedings. After twice asking their judgment by vote at a cost of thousands of dollars, which the people had to pay, and then ignoring their greatly increased opposition, the Moderator now does not even mention them.

Christians of Canada, of every name, this is your concern to oppose in Parliament. It is a question of religious liberty vs. clerical despotism. If this should succeed your turn may be next to have your Church, whether Catholic or Protestant, scrapped by Act of Parliament. Stand fast men and women for freedom, truth and right, in all our broad land, and freedom, truth and right will triumph.

Germany's Passive Opposition To France In The Ruhr Is Formally Ended

IDLE WORKMEN FEW IN FRANCE

Minister of Finance Shows Budget Has Balanced This Year.

PARIS, September 24. — M. De Lasteyrie, Minister of Finance in an address before the Chamber of Commerce of Tarn Department, dwelt upon the excellent situation in France from a financial and economic point of view. He produced figures to show that "for the first time since 1914," the French budget has balanced.

The Miniser said that France in the past four years, without receiving a franc from Germany, had accomplished the enormous task of spending one hundred billion francs in the reconstruction of the devastated regions and in the restoration of the country's finances. This was made possible by voting eight billion additional taxes, the collection of which was intensified, so that without an increase in customs tariffs, ordinary receipts were raised from fifteen billion in 1920 to 19,176,000,000 in 1923.

In 1921 there were 63,963 idle workmen in France, while on Aug. 1, 1923, only 1,075 were unemployed in France, of whom 130 lived in Paris.

PREPARE SETTLERS FOR THE DOMINION

One Result Expected from Imperial Conference.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press Cable). — Developments of an important character with relation to empire settlement are expected to result from the imperial conference where the question of emigration to the dominions will be an outstanding feature of the discussions. Full inquiry will be made into the results of the state-aided policy since the imperial conference of 1921 and questions relating to the training of intending settlers before leaving Great Britain and after their arrival in the dominions will be up for consideration.

The necessity for the preliminary training of men who are to go on land in the dominions is being emphasized in many quarters and it is claimed that men with the necessary physique and the inclination to engage in agriculture should be given an idea before they sail as to what will be required of them overseas.

A far-reaching proposal is being discussed by officials of the government and representatives of Canada which has for its object the enlarging of the soldiers' settlement scheme so as to include civilians. This marks an important advance in the emigration policy. The plans is in process of preparation for submission to the imperial conference.

11,883 Harvesters At Winnipeg From The British Isles

MONTREAL, Sept. 24—Reports to the Canadian Pacific Railway show that there arrived at Winnipeg this year from the British Isles for the purpose of working on the Canadian western harvest a total of 11,883 men. Of this number only 221 were out of employment at the time the report was compiled. A score of these returned to Winnipeg complaining of harsh treatment by farmers, a larger number had refused work at fair wages, while the greater number of these unemployed were either physically or mentally incapable of performing work in the fields.

Special efforts are being made to find occupation for as many as possible of these men to cover the winter period and it is stated that it is now probable that a considerable number of these harvesters from Great Britain and the Irish Free State will remain in the Dominion.

WINNIPEG, September 25 (Canadian Press). — Western Canada's grain crop is moving eastward at an increasingly rapid rate, and on Saturday the railways established a new record when a car was loaded every 18 seconds, taking Saturday as a 12-hour work day. A total of 2,353 cars were loaded in the Prairie Provinces, while the aggregate of grain marketed amounted to 4,636,364 bushels.

STRESEMAN ANNOUNCES DECISION THAT WILL START UP AGAIN THE RUHR AND RHINELAND INDUSTRIES

German Government Capitulates in Weaponless Resistance to Franco-Belgian Seizure of Reparations Territory—Expect Ratification By States.

CONFERENCE INFLUENCED STRESEMANN

BERLIN, Sept. 25.— (Canadian Press). — Chancellor Streseman announced last night that the Government had decided to abandon passive resistance immediately and unconditionally.

In his statement the Chancellor announced that the Government had decided to abandon the policy of passive resistance in the Ruhr and Rhineland and had ordered resumption of activities in all lines at once. The Government's decision is not made conditional on the previous return of deportees or the release of imprisoned nationals, these and other disputed points being left to subsequent negotiations with the occupying powers.

RUHR REPRESENTATIVES MEET THE CHANCELLOR.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Three hundred representative spokesmen from the Ruhr and Rhineland discussed passive resistance with Chancellor Streseman for five hours today; then unanimously agreed that further opposition to the Franco-Belgian occupation was futile and that passive resistance as such must be abandoned.

Only on one point was there a difference of opinion, and this concerned the advisability of entering into direct negotiations with France.

The conference was attended by the representatives of all the political parties, labor organizations, industrialists, civic bodies and Governmental and municipal officials connected with the German posts, telegraphs and railway administrations in the occupied zones, and its outcome is taken as confirming the Government's conviction that the Ruhr conflict must be brought to an immediate conclusion.

Referred to States.

The concurring sentiment at today's conference will be communicated to the Premiers of the Federated States tomorrow. Final official action will be decided upon by the Cabinet Wednesday.

This, it is believed, will comprise ratification of the non-official opinion gathered by the Chancellor in the course of his conferences and personal canvass of the situation and will be given expression in a brief but emphatic Governmental declaration to the Reichstag. The date for its presentation has not yet been fixed, but it is expected that Friday will be selected.

Resistance Hopeless.

The participants in the conference today, without exception, supported the Government's attitude and promised Chancellor Streseman their aid in the Government's impending procedure. Even the delegates from the German Nationalist Party of the Ruhr and the Rhineland conceded the hopelessness of further passive resistance, but opposed formal negotiations with France or a signed capitulation.

OPENING OF LABOR CONFERENCE TODAY

Discuss Proposals Recommended at the Geneva Congress.

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press)—The federal-provincial labor conference called in order to consider draft conventions and recommendations of the International Labor organization is expected to get under way tomorrow morning. The opening session, which was to have been held today, was postponed owing to the non-arrival of Premier E. H. Armstrong and other members of the Nova Scotia delegation. Delegates are on hand from all the remaining provinces except British Columbia and Prince Edward Island.

The conference will be inaugurated with an address by Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, who with Hon. Ernest Lapointe, represented the Canadian government at last year's conference of the international labor organization at Geneva. At this session employees in Canada were represented by Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress; employers sent a representative in the person of W. C. Coulter, Toronto.

OKLAHOMA CRISIS EXPECTED TODAY

Governor Orders "Force of Arms" to Prevent Session of Assembly.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 24.—Adjutant General B. H. Markham to-night was ordered by Governor J. C. Walton to "use all force of arms necessary,' to prevent the session of the Lower House of the Oklahoma Legislature called, for noon Wednesday.

All citizens soldiers of the State between the ages of 21 and 45 were directed in the order to hold themselves, in readiness, "with such arms as they possess or can obtain, to come to the assistance of the sovereign State of Oklahama when ordered to do by the Governor."

As a precaution against any attempt of the legislators to meet elsewhere should they be barred from the House Chamber, at the State Capitol, the Governor also directed Adjutant General Markham to disperse the meeting at any other time or place in the State of Oklahoma.

With issuance of the military order all doubt was removed as to the Executive's determination to prevent the House session, which has been called by his legislative opponents to consider his impeachment.

The Adjutant General was ordered to use all military forces of the State if necessary to disperse the assembly.

Governor Walton reiterated his charge that the proposed meeting would be an unlawful assembly, "dominated and controlled by the so-called Invisible Empire, commonly known as the Ku Klux Klan."

He declared that since the Ku Klux Klan was proclaimed an enemy of the State of Oklahoma under his martial law proclamation of September 15, the session therefore would be in defiance of the laws of the State and an attempt to break the peace.

"The troops will be ordered to shoot to kill, if that is necessary, to prevent the assembly," Governor Walton told newspapermen. "I hope, however, that no such measures will be necessary."

ALBERTA'S SLEET AND SNOW RETARD THRESHING CREWS

Favorable Weather in Manitoba and Saskatchewan Make Progress Good

SOME YIELDS HEAVY.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 24.— Unseasonable conditions in the shape of snow and sleet have retarded threshing in Alberta, according to the weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railways issued here to-day. It is expected that work will become active again by the middle of the week. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan the weather has been favorable and good progress recorded. Pasture conditions in all three provinces are good and live stock is thriving.

In southern Manitoba threshing is practically complete with the balance of Manitoba 70 to 75 per cent. finished, and work is proceeding briskly under satisfactory conditions.

It is estimated that from 40 to 50 per cent. of the Saskatchewan wheat crop is threshed with coarse grains 20 per cent. finished. The latter crop is uniformly good in all districts and showing little damage from rust. Wheat outturns are generally better than expected except in the north-east, where a large area of poor crop reduced the average yield of the province.

An early snowfall in Alberta had the effect of knocking down grain in some areas and necessitated its having to be cut all one way. Frost also did some damage to late grains but the loss is very small. Cutting is completed and 20 to 25 per cent. of all grains threshed. Some outstanding yields are reported; twenty acres of summer fallow grown by Mr. Sutermeister ,Cayley district, produced sixty bushels of No. 1 northern to the acre.

Threshing has been held up for a few days on the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway. Threshing outturns to date indicate very satisfactory results.

Weather in British Columbia has been warm and dry with cool nights. Winter apples are expected to move early in October, showing up well in size and color ,and with a good demand.

TIME HAS COME FOR THE WOMEN TO RULE WORLD

Men Running It For Twenty Centuries, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont "Cries in Wilderness."

URGES GYNEOCRACY

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press)—Declaring that it was time for women to take over world affairs, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, of New York, president of the National Women's Party, in an address before the western division of the organization, dealt traditions and established order a solar plexus blow.

"For twenty centuries men have been running the world," Mrs. Belmont declared. "Now it is time to take over affairs and as they very nearly hold a balance of political power at this time the day may be not so far distant as old party leaders imagine when there will be set up a woman's government by women for women, children and humanity in general."

Mrs. Belmont stated she never voted and would not vote until she could cast her ballot as a member of a woman's party and asserted that she long since despaired of making what she declared as "women of luxury and leisure" awake to a sense of responsibility and duty in a world where they have earned no place for themselves.

"For nine years I have been as one crying in the wilderness to women of wealth and leisure to give over their pleasures and frivolities and do something to justify their existence. I have cried in vain. No reform ever appealed to people who have all they want," Mrs. Belmont said.

DALY DENIES SELLING SHARES IN HOME BANK

Interesting Disclosures in Bank's Affairs Indicated By Head of Defunct Institution.

TORONTO, Sept. 25.— Interesting disclosures connected with the affairs of the Home Bank are indicated by Herbert J. Daly, president of the now defunct institution who was visited at his summer home by a reporter. In an interview Mr. Daly declared he knew nothing about the transaction of 1,000 shares made in his name and in which Mr. A. J. Pattison, a Toronto broker, figured, and he didn't know until ten days before the bank suspended payment that Mr. Pattison had an account running into many thousands of dollars.

Tears ran down his cheeks when the reporter mentioned the predicament of the depositors. President Daly states he is preparing a complete statement of his connection with the Home Bank and the affairs of the bank and he will place his case before the Canadian public for judgment.

It will be remembered that a report was published to the effect that Mr. Daly had disposed of 1,000 shares of the Home Bank between January 1st and July 1st of this year. The shares it was pointed out, had been disposed of after the last return was made by the bank to the government last December, and long enough prior to the suspension of the bank to make the disposal legal. Depositors have referred to this transaction at their meetings. Mr. Daly, while positively declining to be interviewed, consented to answer certain questions which were read to him twice, and his answers checked over.

Not His Shares.

"Were the shares bought or sold by Mr. Pattison your shares?" he was asked.

"No," he replied emphatically.

"Did you ever have any dealings with Mr. Pattison?" "No."

"Did you negotiate with Mr. Pattison for the sale of 1,000 shares of Home Bank stock?" "No."

"Did Mr. Pattison have an account in the Home Bank?" "Yes."

"When did you first learn of this account?" "On August 7th, 1923."

"Were you surprised?" "Yes."

"Who bought the 1,000 shares that were said to be in your name?" "Mr. Pattison."

"Did you know these shares were being negotiated in your name?" "I know no more about the transaction than you do."

"But if you didn't know about the transaction and the shares were not yours who was responsible for the transaction?" "Ah," replied Mr. Daly, almost in a whisper, and his fists clinched with indignation, "that is a long story, my boy, and I cannot and must not tell it until the curator has made his report, which I understand will be ready in a few days."

It is quite apparent from the interview that President Daly did not know about many of the bank transactions. When asked point blank, if he knew that the bank was going to suspend payment, he replied, after first declining to answer yes or no to the question and with a sad smile on his careworn face, "my wife deposited $1800 in the bank three days before it suspended payment." And most of the relatives of the family had substantial deposits in the bank.

Mr. Daily also pointed out that he was the "largest stockholder."

The interviewer asked Mr. Daly about the alleged heavy investments of the bank in British Columbia timber limits, in the New Orleans Railway Company, in the pulp business in Australia, and where the heaviest losses were incurred. To all of which Mr. Daly sadly shook his head and declined to furnish any information. He quite frankly said that he would tell about it in his prepared statement and he wanted to treat all the newspapers alike. "They will all get it," he said.

Is in Poor Health.

Mr. Daly's summer residence on the shores of Lake Simcoe is a spacious summer home painted in green and white and separated from the beach by the roadway which skirts the lake. The house itself stands back from the roadway about sixty feet, and the lawn is enclosed with singers. Mr. and Mrs. Orser, would

THE HIGH COST OF STRIKES.

The economic waste involved in an industrial strike no matter how short in duration it may be, is effectively illustrated by the recent difficulties between the anthracite miners and the operators.

The men were off work eighteen days, and in that period they sustained a loss in wages of $13,500,000.

The loss of production during the eighteen days, has been estimated at 5,400,000 tons of coal.

In addition, many railwaymen who were laid off because there was no coal to move suffered heavy wage losses.

If this general dislocation of business and heavy costs to every one concerned, particularly to the public, who will eventually have to pay the shot, would end for all time the disagreement between miners and the mine owners, then the loss incidental to the recent strike would be cheerfully borne.

When, however, it is realized that the peace is only temporary, that in a comparatively short time the whole expensive farce will have to be played out again the Examiner wonders if the game is really worth the candle.

The perpetual warfare between the two factions only serves to harrass the public, and it is time that genuine efforts were made on both sides to establish a working basis that would have some elements of permanence.

THEY'RE ALL IN USE HERE.

In a news item the other day the Lindsay Post offered a number of suggestions to the Lindsay Fair directors that would, in its opinion, materially improve the annual Fair.

The recommendations are all good, and the most striking feature is that most of them have already been adopted by the Peterborough Exhibition Board and have been in effect here for several years.

Better illumination for the grounds, a large tent for the baby show, a drawing contest, a tug-of-war competition, track events in front of the grandstand for boys and young men, and a decorated motor car contest (the latter a feature of the local Exhibition for several seasons) are some of the tips by our contemporary for use in making the Lindsay Fair a better one.

All of these features have been in use at the Peterborough Exhibition, and yet there are citizens who, shutting their eyes to the merits of the local Fair, are always ready to praise Exhibitions held elsewhere and to condemn their own enterprise as failing to come up to the standard.

A fair comparison of the plant, grounds, grandstand accommodation, exhibits, special features, conveniences and programme offered by the Peterborough Exhibition with conditions found in other places should convince an impartial observer that it meets the test successfully.

PREPARING FOR THE FUTURE.

Do you know that thousands of mothers and their children are receiving doles from the Ontario Government? To be exact, 3,771 mothers and 11,640 children under 16 years of age are securing the benefits under the Ontario Mothers' Allowances' Act.

Recently the retiring chairman of the Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association stated that the banks and loan companies had public deposits of two billion dollars. This means that the per capita savings of Canadians is $250, which puts the people of the Dominion amongst the richest in the world. In Canada, and Ontario especially, pregnant with possibilities added to which are the benefits offered by life insurance companies to enable every man to immediately create an estate, there is no excuse for such a large number of mothers being left chargeable to the Province.

In the majority of cases it has been found that mothers and families have been left destitute due to the delays of the breadwinner in acquiring adequate life insurance. In a Canadian orphanage it was found that the majority of the children being supported and educated by charitable contributions were the families of small business men or average wage-earners. Many of the business men had become engrossed in the building up of their business and had neglected to provide for the future of their families.

Although in perfect health to-day, death may be a grim visitor to-morrow. This is a fact often overlooked, and which contributes to the large list of destitute Canadian widows. To realise how often death comes suddenly, just look over your newspaper and count the number of deaths which occur from accidents and acute illness. These are often within a few months of the issue of the policy. The men who neglect to take out insurance because they feel perfectly well, do not realise the dangers of delay. When death arrives, life policies are the first of the assets to be cashed. No man can be sure of having time to settle all of his affairs before his death, but every man can provide against death, however sudden, by carrying life insurance. Not only is it his duty to do so for the sake of his loved ones, but he owes it to the Province in which they reside.

A HUMANITARIAN SCHEME.

The movement inaugurated by the Rotary Club of Peterborough and announced last night at a gathering representative of many local organizations appears as the dawn of a new era in this city.

The object of the Rotarian plan is the care of the crippled children of Peterborough, those who are physically handicapped and in their present condition unfitted to face the battles of life.

Briefly it is proposed to improve each of such children physically as far as possible, to see that they are educated or trained to become self-sustaining and to provide employment for them.

Rotary stands behind that plan, and last night was promised the support of various other organizations representative of different phases of community activity.

The co-operation of the individual citizens should, and doubtless will, be as spontaneously accorded the undertaking, one of the most worthy that has been launched in Peterborough.

Ultimately, it is hoped to be able to truthfully say that nowhere in this city or the immediate vicinity is there one crippled child who is not being given every chance that surgical skill and attention, that practical sympathy and assistance can provide.

There are here, as in every other community where plans of this kind have not been carried to a successful conclusion, children who are entering the competition of life, impeded and hindered and held back by physical defects that could be partially or completely removed if their cases were considered in time.

They are not being treated, either because of financial difficulties or because of neglect and indifference.

The humanitarian scheme announced last night should go a long way towards making such conditions impossible in Peterborough.

It should be hailed by every thinking citizen as a most sincere and commendable effort to place the city's crippled children in a position to achieve success in spite of the physical defects that now stand in the way of their progress.

NOT GETTING ALL THE BENEFITS.

An American health expert declares that the people of this continent need to learn how to play.

At first blush that statement will appeal to Examiner readers as a mistaken conception of things.

Surely nowhere on earth, unless it be in the British Isles, are people more interested in sport than on this continent.

And yet the authority proves his case by showing that the crowd at a ball game, for example, are not really enjoying themselves—actually they are merely making another variety of work out of it by following the details of the play as critically as the manager.

There is no relaxation.

And then he points the moral which should not be lost sight of in Peterborough or anywhere else.

The trouble is that most of us have the idea that the great thing is to win, that we place the stress entirely upon victory, instead of being devoted to sport for sport's sake.

Nobody who attends a baseball match here cannot fail to be impressed with the truth of the charge.

The umpire, no matter how efficient or i. partial he may be, is continually abused for every decision that goes against the home team.

No verdict that does not favour the local cause can possibly be right in the opinion of many of those in attendance.

A bad decision on behalf of the homesters is on the other hand accepted as a matter of course.

The desire to win is greater than real love of the game itself—just as our American friend points out.

So long as that condition exists there is little real benefit from interest in sport.

WHY SOME MEN ARE WINNERS.

The statistician of the Swift Company in the United States has been analyzing that company's experiences with young men, says the London Advertiser. He finds that only 1 out of 10 make good. The fault with the nine has been on their own part. The opportunities of good employment and advancement have been open to the ten; but only one out of ten has had the sense to take advantage of the opportunities. It is pretty much the same in every occupation and in every part of the world. Men are their own hindrances.

The statistician gives five principal reasons why young men who have been taken into service by the Swift Company have been failures nine to one; and the nine have lost their jobs.

The first is lack of sense of responsibility: neglecting work and letting some other person do the worrying.

The second is shirking: unwillingness to work hard; arriving late and leaving early; taking extra time at lunch hour, and wasting time in telephone conversations and other ways.

The third is lack of thoroughness: unwilling to master one thing before going at another.

The fourth is false notions of salary and promotion. Not realizing that the key to promotion is to do more than one is paid for. The mistake is expecting to be paid for more than one does—which would ruin any worker.

The fifth is lack of principle. This is shown by concealment of mistakes, untruthfulness and constant making of excuses.

These reasons may be said to be generally applicable. The young man who wants to succeed will be interested in his employer's business—so interested that he will not be a mere clock watcher: He will always be willing to 'e on work and do it thoroughly. And he will be honest with himself and his employer. Such a young man usually succeeds.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It was announced that 25,000 people visited the Lindsay Fair on Saturday. There couldn't have been much room left for the exhibits.

Attendance at the Woodbine Saturday was only 20,0000. But then the Ontario Jockey Club is a small concern alongside the Lindsay Exhibition.

Gasoline takes a drop in price. Pedestrians will have to watch their step more carefully than ever.

Judging by the poetic leal to the Globe's story of the opening of the Woodbine the writer must have had a dollar or two down on a winner.

Careless drivers in Toronto are being given a month in jail. This treatment should be effective if it is spread around enough.

In Detroit if they miss you with a car, somebody is almost sure to get you with a revolver, judging by the murder returns for the present year.

President Beatty of the C.P.R. said a whole lot in one sentence when he declared that alarmists, despondents and unthinking optimists are equally out of place in Canada.

Another reason for a more vigorous immigration policy on behalf of Canada in Great Britain is furnished by the statement of the Executive of the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church that Canada is three per cent. more non-British than twenty years ago.

TORONTO CATTLE MARKET.

TORONTO, September 25. — There were more than enough cattle to go around at the Union Stock Yards yesterday. Last week's better market had the natural effect of bringing forward heavier shipments and the receipts yesterday were 6,933 cattle, 666 calves, 2,199 hogs, and 5,856 sheep and lambs. Two hundred and twenty-one cattle were also billed through.

The cattle receipts were enough for a decent week's business, and buyers adjusted their bids to meet the supply. Trading was slower than last week, and the only early dealing was in some handy weight choice butchers and the exporters.

For a nice bunch of Angus steers and heifers under 1,000 pounds each, E. Jifkins paid 7 cents a pound, and J. Rogers paid Shields & Co. $7.65 for some very good export steers.

A load of light heifers not too breedy sold at $3.90 a cwt. Westerns are arriving again, and yesterday saw about 400 of these on the market.

The exporters expected to get around $4.50 a head and the price range for these was $7.25 to $7.75 a cwt. This was regarded as unchanged from last week, but the quality was better. In other directions, except in the choice butchers, prices were 10 to 25 cents a cwt. lower than last week, and this carried into the butchers 'cows and bulls.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.— Corn today scored new high price records for the season and brought about fresh upturns in the value of wheat. Assertions that the stock of old corn is the smallest ever known and that tht movement of new corn will be extremely small for some time, had a decided bullish effect. Wheat closed strong, 7-8 to 1 3-4c. net higher, with December $1.04 to $1.04 1-2 and May $1.09 3-4 to $1.09 7-8. Corn finished 1-2 to 1 3-4c. up; oats at 3-8 to 3-4c. advance, and provisions unchangtd to 12c. down.

Almost as soon as the market was open, September delivery of corn jumped above 87c., for the first time this season. and during the day May delivery had also attained a new top figure. Scarcity of immediate supplies of corn continued to be acute, and this circumstance was emphasized by further reports of frost damage to the new corn crop. Under such circumstances, offerings of wheat were light and the wheat market reflected the upward swing of corn values. The fact that hedging sales of wheat at Winnipeg were small to proportion to the large receipts there, was also a bullish influence, as was gossip about increased tariff on wheat imported into the United States.

Highest prices of the day were current for both wheat and corn in the final trading. Previous sellers of corn found themselves in a pinch and made haste to extricate themselves, but in doing so were forced to bid prices up. At the finish No. 2 Yellow Corn available for immediate delivery commanded 90c. a bushel, 1 5-8c. over September.

Dealings in corn showed more volume than has been the rule of late, and oats also displayed more activity. Lower quotations on hogs eased the provision market.

The members of Cobourg Rotary Club paid a fraternal visit to Oshawa on Monday evening when they were guests of the Rotary Club at that place. An interesting programme, largely impromtu, was carried out. A unique feature was a sale which was conceived and carried out by Mr. Richard Mohan and Mr. J. E. Stone with the latter as auctioneer, when a number of boxes, the nature of the contents of wihch, was a mystery, weer sold to the Rotarians present. By this means $22 was realized for the crippled children's fund and was left in the hands of the Oshawa club, for the furtherance of the work of this kind, which they have undertaken.

A large number of applications have been received for the position or organist of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church here, rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. Roy Brignall who is going to California.

Big Attendance at Orono School.

Nearly every High School in the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham reports a record attendance this year. At Orono High School there are over seventy pupils this term, the largest since the school was established, and a new wing is suggested by some citizens.

Real Estate Sales.

The Canadian National Railway has sold a portion of the old G.T.R. railway track leading from Cobourg to Harwood, which has long been in disuse to some of the farmers whose lands were intersected by it. This action will efface an old landmark, as the building of the old Cobourg, Peterboro and Marmora railroad preceded the erection of the Grand Trunk in this district. The former was opened for traffic as far as Harwood in 1854. A little later the wonderful engineering feat was undertaken of bridging Rice Lake, but the bridge owing to insecure foundation proved to be unstable and it was abandoned after it had been used for a short time. The Harwood line was afterwards acquired by the Grand Trunk and was operated for some time after the bridge was abandoned but has been in disuses for a long time now. It now bids fair to be absorbed by the farms through which it runs.

Bicycle Was Stolen.

Rev. J. N. Norton recently left his bicycle on the verandah of his home, and a little later found that it had been stolen. A lady in the east end of the town saw a bicycle in the middle of the road, where it had been left and notified the police. It was recovered and returned to Mr. Norton.

Council in Special Session Drafts New Industry By-Law — Proposition For Second New Factory.

HASTINGS, Sept. 25.—The Council held a special meeting with the following members present: Reeve, W. M. Fowlds; Councillors Chapman, Dodd and Coughlan.

The new industry has offered to supply a bond by which the town will be well protected.

It looks as if Hastings is going to boom, as another American concern is looking for a site here to manufacture their products for Canada, and should they locate in Hastings they will employ 50 skilled mechanics and about 75 other hands—in all 125 employees.

"With these two factories operating Hastings would be one of the busiest spots on the Trent river.

Considering what he was up against this was a most creditable performance and Veronal thoroughly deserves the congratulations he is receiving in his home town.

Stock buyers have been combing the district the past week, and as a result many settlers will have fewer sheep to feed this winter, a flock of nearly a hundred and fifty being taken out on Friday last. Prices were not very dazzling but preferable to feeding the wolves which have begun their annual depredations, two or three settlers having lost several sheep and lambs to these pests already.

Winter activities in social work will commence next month. The A.Y.P.A. and the Community Choral Society resume meetings next week on Saturday and Tuesday respectively, and there is talk of organizing a drum and fife band.

She gets relief from DR. CALDWELL'S LAXATIVE SYRUP PEPSIN And so do the children

Some Families Are Never Ill

FORTUNATE are the children whose parents fully realize the seriousness of constipation. Hospital records prove that 75 per cent of all disease originates in bowel obstruction, or constipation. Young children cry because of it; school children are hampered in their studies; grown people are made 25 per cent less efficient; elderly people's blood pressure increases 28 per cent. Clara M. Smith, Big Valley, Alberta, recommends Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin for all, and especially for children and old folks; Mrs. Bettles, 8 Napanee St., Toronto, keeps it always in the house for family use.

Largest Selling Laxative

Every up-to-date family medicine chest should contain a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin, a compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and palatable aromatics, a prescription written 30 years ago by Dr. W. B. Caldwell, who practiced medicine 47 years. You can buy a bottle in any store where medicines are sold, and the cost is less than a cent a dose.

We guarantee that if you will give Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin to a child or for a few nights to an adult it will relieve any case of constipation no matter how chronic, or your money will be refunded.

10 Million Bottles a Year

Use it once and you will never again take coal-tar drugs in candy form, calomel or salts. Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a vegetable laxative free from opiates and narcotics. It can be safely given to infants, yet it effectively moves the bowels of adults. It acts gently; does not cramp or gripe. Keep it in the house and use it for any indication of bowel obstruction such as constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, dyspepsia, pimples and like skin eruptions. Give it early and it will break up a fever or a cold overnight. A spoonful proves it.

UNEASINESS OVER GRAIN MOVEMENT

Doubts About United States Fleet Taking Business in October.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., September (Canadian Press). — It is too early to anticipate the probability of a grain blockade here, since the total grain in store at the head of the Lakes at the end of the week was only 7,808,388 bushels, while a year ago the stocks amounted to almost double this, being 14,494,636.

Five million bushels of wheat were reported in store, while a year ago there were 11,307,405 bushels, considerably more than the total stocks of all grains here yesterday.

It is stated by an authority here that expectation that the United States fleet will come in full force late in October, and that this will tend to keep lake freight rates down, renders shippers indifferent to chartering at present rates.

However, there is no assurance that this will be the case, as the United States lines which have been sending ships here for grain this fall do not control sufficient tonnage to take care of the surplus that it is estimated will have to be moved after the quota of Canadian ships has done all that it can.

The chief uneasiness is caused by the fact that chartering is not being done, and if the shippers do not utilise the space now available it is possible that later in the season, if a sudden demand for space should arise, there might be a lack of the necessary tonnage. The apathy in chartering is attributed partly to a hope that rates may drop, and partly to a lack of immediate export demand.

The elevators here will not feel the pressure for a month to come, since they can handle 50,000,000 bushels more than they held yesterday before becoming congested. It is believed that the pressure will be felt more quickly in Montreal if export demand does not relieve the situation, since the report from the Harbour Commissioners' elevator at that port shows that it now contains 2,209,310 bushels of Canadian and 3,068,999 bushels of United States grain, this being practically its full capacity.

PUTS HEALTH AND VIM INTO WOMEN

So Says Mrs. MacPherson of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brantford, Ont.—"I was always tired and the least exertion would put me out for a day or two. I had a pressing pain on the top of my head, pain in the nape of my neck, and when I stooped over I could not get up without help, because of pain in my back. I did not sleep well and was nervous at the least noise. I keep house, but I was such a wreck that I could not sweep the floor nor wash the dishes without lying down afterwards. A friend living near me told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her so I began to take it. With the first bottle I felt brighter and got so I could wash dishes and sweep without having to lie down. Later I became regular again in my monthly terms. I have taken ten bottles all told and am now all better. I can truly say that your wonderful medicine cannot be beaten for putting health and vim into a woman."—Mrs. James H. MacPherson, 309 Greenwich St., Brantford, Ont.

MOUNT OLIVET CHURCH ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

Impressive Sermons Were Preached By Campbellford Pastor to Methodist Congregation Near Codrington.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 25.—Rev. Wesley Elliott pastor of the Methodist Church here, preached the anniversary sermons Sunday in the Mount Olivet Church, near Codrington, one of the oldest places of worship in Brighton township. The present edifice was dedicated fifty years ago but the life of the congregation, originally a member of the Wesleyan Methodist denomination dates back to an early period in the last century.

A good many changes have taken place in that neighborhood since the church was first opened. Those who were most active in the building of the church and in the work of the congregation in 1873 are now resting in the little cemetery adjoining the building but their descendants remain. The families which first settled on the wild bush farms and helped to clear up the country are still represented. There were at the services yesterday some who can recall the dedicatory services of 50 years ago and prominent among these were Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Orser. Both were in the 'teen age at that time, but two years later they were married and for over thirty years they were members of the choir Mr. Orser acting as leader and organist.

Fifty years ago the worshippers came to the service in the somewhat primitive vehicles of the period and probably nothing so strongly indicated the material progress of the community as the large number of handsome cars that brought people from all parts of the county, from Toronto to Campbellford and Brighton.

Two services were held yesterday one in the afternoon and another in the evening and on both occasions the church was crowded. The interior had been handsomely decorated by the ladies of the congregation. The pulpit was decked with white and pink chrysthanemums and maple boughs, the leaves tinged with the hues of autumn to typify the advanced age of the edifice, were twined around the railing which separates the choir from the rest of the congregation. Handsome bouquets of bright flowers were on every window sill. The cross pews to the right of the preacher's desk reserved in the days gone by as the seats of honor for the pioneers members were filled with strangers.

Impressive Sermons

Rev. Mr. Elliott preached two interesting and impressive discourses In the afternoon he spoke of Christ as the Head of the Church, united to his followers who carrying out the simile, the preacher likened to the different parts of the human body all of which are governed and regulated by the head. As each of these members has its own function to perform so there is a particular work expected of all the followers of Christ, each to act according to the powers given him. No one man can do the work assigned to the other because in the divine plan no two persons are made exactly alike or gifted with the same endowments.

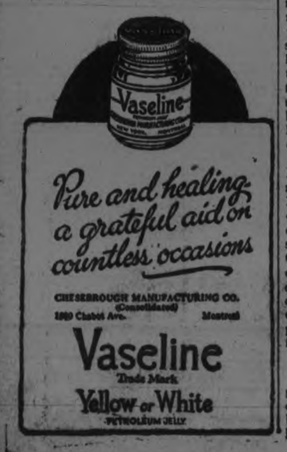
Value of a Man

In the evening the preacher read the story of Christ's discourse to the Pharisees when they questioned His moral right to heal the sick on the Sabbath. Asking them if they had a sheep which fell into a pit on Sunday whether the would rescue it and taking answer in the affirmative for granted, Christ ended the argument with the question, "Is not a man greater than a sheep?" The preacher then went on to show the superiority of the members of the human family over the lower animals the greatest difference of all being the fact that a man is immortal, He urged his hearers to love their neighbors as themselves and to extend a helping hand to the brother who is down.

This is the second time that Mr. Elliott has preached anniversary sermons in Mt. Olivet Church. About 17 years ago when he was pastor of the church at Hastings he exchanged pulpits with Rev. T. Cruick shanks, at that time on the Mount Olivet circuit and who is now superannuated and residing in Feterborough. Mr. Elliott was unable to recognize many of his audience yesterday but all of the older members present had pleasant memories of his former visit.

Good Musical Service

There was a good musical programme furnished by a well trained choir of 14 voices, Miss Nettie Ames being leader and organist. It was hoped that those veteran church be able to assist the choir but all the seats were occupied by members of younger generations Mr. and Mrs. Orser will be heard at a social gathering in the church this evening.



DALY DENIES

an ornamental iron fence. Rows of cedar trees growing on the inside are just high enough to peep over the fence.

When the reporter entered he was met at the verandah by Mrs. Daly, who courteously took a message to Mr. Daly and in a few minutes the interviewer was ushered into a large sitting-room.

At one side of the sitting-room a large open fireplace built of big cobble stones created an atmosphere of homeliness, and although the day was fairly warm, a fire of wood was burning fitfully. In front of the fire was a long chesterfield couch. Over the big mantel shelf and on the walls several heads of deer kept vigil. Behind the chesterfield away from the fireplace and on a table, a typewriter with sheets of paper in the machine was visible. It is on this machine that the statement for publication is being prepared.

Mr. Daly met the reporter in the sitting-room as soon as Mrs. Daly invited him in. The bank president gripped the hand of the reporter cordially and asked him to be seated. The interview continued for several hours.

The president of the Home Bank explained how impossible it was for him to talk about the affairs of the Home Bank at present. Dressed in ordinary flannel pants and outing shirt and smoking a pipe, he sat or reclined on the couch during the conversation. Mr. Daly talked about many things, but rarely about the Home Bank. The reporter had to return to it occasionally.

Wane and Drawn.

During the conversation Mr. Daly very politely excused himself, he could not sit up and had to practically lie down on the couch. Sometimes during the conversation, when it turned on Home Bank affairs, he would sit looking into the fire, through the wide horn-rimmed eyeglasses he wore, and for quite a while he would not speak. During these pauses the reporter wondered what was passing through his mind and if he would tell the history of the Home Bank and his connection with it. But no words came from his lips and he would slowly puff at his pipe. His face was drawn and he looked in pain. At certain moments his eyes would light up with their old time fire and enthusiasm, when talking about friends and public service. And then he would slip back to the serious, sad visaged man, whose financial foundations have been shaken as by an earthquake, and whose health already undermined is struggling under the shock.

Mr. Daly is a very sick man, judging by appearances. Dr. Lockwood his physician, arrived during the conversation and evidently he was prepared to stay all night with his patient. To anyone who knew Mr. Daly when he was in good health the change in his appearance is a shock. He is 41 years of age and yet his very pale face is furrowed with deep lines of sorrow and ill-health.

He has a burning desire to employ his future in placing the affairs of the Home Bank in such a shape as to prevent anyone from losing anything. And he believes he could do it. During the conversation the reporter mentioned the depositors, and although Mr. Daly would not comment, his emotions could not be restrained and tears flooded his eyes.

His distress at the situation of the bank, coupled with his breakdown in health, is giving great concern to his family and close friends, as to the result upon his constitution.

President Daly refuses positively to go farther away than a convenient spot near enough to Toronto, where he can come into the city to any conferences and be on hand to furnish any information required by the curator and others who desire it. His wife is making a brave fight to bring him back to vigor and strength.

The reporter took a last look at the typewriter as he left in the early evening and wondered what kind of a story it is that Herbert Daly is hammering out on the machine, and what mysteries it will reveal about the Home Bank affairs.

Astonished at Statement

"Regarding Mr. Daly's statement," said Mr. Pattison, "that he did not know I had an account in the Home Bank until ten days before the bank suspended payment, I would call your attention to the fact that I paid him $35,000 in April and May and these checks I have shown you were drawn on the Home Bank and endorsed by Mr. Daly personally. That is my answer to that statement."

"But Mr. Pattison, did you ever speak to Mr. Daly about the shares in question?"

"Why, I am astonished at Mr. Daly's statements. I had to call him up on the telephone on more than one occasion and ask him to deliver to me the shares which should have been delivered on the 10th of the month and were often not delivered until many days later. And the dates on the checks and the dates on the transfer books of the bank showing these transactions will prove this."

Produces Agreement.

A. J. Pattison, junior, Toronto broker, was visited by a reporter and asked what he had to say about the statements made by Herbert J. Daly, president of the Home Bank.

"Mr. Daly says that he never had any dealings with you and that the 1,000 shares bought by you were not his shares, that he didn't know anything about the transaction and didn't know until ten days before the bank suspended payment that you had an account at the Home Bank," said the reporter.

Mr. Pattison didn't answer, but arose from his chair and put on his hat and coat. He asked the reporter to accompany him to a trust company's vaults. He entered the vaults and opening a deposit box said, "here, look at these."

"First of all," said Mr. Pattison, handing the reporter a document, "here is the agreement to sell 1,000 shares signed by Mr. Daly. Now then, here are five checks amounting to $90,000 endorsed and cashed by Mr. Daly or his attorney. Three of these checks are on the Standard Bank and two of them are on the Home Bank. The two checks on the Home Bank are initialed by a responsible official and endorsed by Mr. Daly himself."

"I think this all the proof you will require," said Mr. Pattison.

When the reporter pointed out again that Mr. Daly said he had had no dealings with Mr. Pattison, Mr. Pattison replied, "It is quite evident that Mr. Daly has forgotten the interviews we had and the talks over the telephone about the shares."

CHICAGO, September 25. — More than 900 hundred persons packed the jails of Chicago yesterday as a result of extensive dry raids staged over the week end.

Scores of saloons, cafes and 'coffee houses,' were closed and their patrons and proprietors lodged in jail.

Mayor Dever said to-day that he would order the licenses of most of the places revoked. The activity of the police is an aftermath of the "beer war" in which six persons have met death so far.

CAMPBELLFORD MAN WEDS ONE OF RECENTLY ARRIVED EUROPEAN BRIDES-TO-BE

Courtship Conducted By Long Distance System of Correspondence, and Young Woman's Arrival Final Step in a Romance Begun in Old England.

NEWS BUDGET

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 25.—All of the 38 prospective brides who arrived from Europe at Montreal last week were not destined, as the press despatches stated, for fortunate and lonely bachelors in the West. One of them had been bespoken by Levi Wicher of this place, the courtship having been conducted for some months past by the long distance system of correspondence and the arrival of the lady, was the final step in a romance which began when Mr. Wicher was a young man in old England.

The happy groom elect left for Belleville, on Sunday to meet his fiancee, who arrived in that city Monday morning. The couple were at once joined in matrimony by Rev. H. B. Kenny, formerly of Campbellford, but now pastor of the Tabernacle Church in Belleville.

The wedding was a quiet affair but the same cannot be said of the reception that was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Wicher upon their arrival here on the 7 o'clock train last evening. Fully 200 friends of the groom were at the station and as soon as the wedded pair left the train they were greeted with cheers and showered with a perfect blizzard of confetti. Fire crackers, old shoes and rice figured in the demonstration.

The crowd followed Mr. and Mrs. Wicher to their home on Victoria street, and continued their attentions on the street in front of the residence Someone threw a lighted cannon cracker upon the roof and when the missile exploded the shingles began to smoke. Then an alarm was turned in and the fire truck came thundering to the scene carrying a full quota of the brigade. There was no necessity for the services of the firement but the alarm attracted hundreds of citizens as usual, from all parts of the town until the streets were packed with autos and humanity, which required the best exertions of Police Chief Duncalfe to control.

The demonstration was meant as a friendly expresison of public sentiment to Mr. Wicher and his bride, who were the recipients of many more dignified and orthodox good wishes for their future happiness. It was the novelty of the affair that caused the outburst of tumultuous enthusiasm.

Celebrated Tin Wedding.

A very pleasant time was spent Monday evening, when about 30 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mack on the east side to help them celebrate the tin anniversary of their wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Mack received many useful gifts, including a frying pan, tin tray and scraper, a set of layer cake tins, tea kettle, large preserving kettle, covered sauce pan, a roasting pan and several large dishes. Nearly all the articles donated were of aluminum. The guests were entertained with music and various games. During the evening Rev. Wesley Elliott baptized Mr. and Mrs. Mack's infant son Raymond.

After dainty refreshments had been served W. Collinson favored the audience with a couple of solos. Mr. and Mrs. Mack received numerous good wishes for many more years of happy wedded life.

Preparing for the Fair.

The government exhibits that will be shown at the Fall Fair here next Friday, have arrived and have been placed in position in the new building.

One of the features of the fair will be the display of poultry. So many entries have been received that the large new building devoted to this class of exhibits will likely be taxed to capacity.

The baby show, for which the Examiner and Dr. A. W. Murphy, offer cash prizes, and which will be held in the new rest room, has already attracted a number of entries, and numerous inquiries as to the conditions of the contest. It is expected that Dr. John Macoun will act as judge in this department, the position which he has so satisfactorily filled on former occasions.

There are a number of poultry fanciers in town, and nearly all of these will compete. George Webber who in past years has been a successful exhibitor of pure bred fowl, is at a disadvantage this year, as his poultry house and a number of his best chickens were consumed in the fire which destroyed Charlie Black's outbuildings a week ago.

It is expected that the gates will be opened for visitors at 7 p.m. on Thursday, the opening day, by which time the exhibits will be nearly all in place and the midway attractions will be in full swing.

Free Methodist Services

The quarterly meeting of the Campbellford Circuit of the Free Methodist church will be held next Sunday with preparatory services on Friday and Saturday. The program provides for preaching at 8 o'clock on the evening of each day, a love feast at 9.30 a.m., Sunday, and with preaching at 11 a.m., and 7 p.m. Rev R. Burnham, the new district elder, who succeeds Rev. L. Slingerland, transferred to Toronto, by Conference, will have charge of the services.

BARN AND CONTENTS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Farmer on the Brighton Road Suffers Serious Loss.

BRIGHTON, Sept. 25.—The barn belonging to George Leaster, situated on the Brighton road, about and a half miles north of the village, was completely destroyed by fire on Sunday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock. The building was filled with hay and also contained articles used on the farm. The origin of the fire is a complete mystery. It was with the greatest difficulty and by heroic efforts on the part of neighbors, that the house was saved from the flames.

As Mr. Leaster carried only a small amount of insurance, his loss will be heavy.

Balance in Bank.

A well attended meeting of the executive committee of the Cavan and Millbrook Old Boys' and Old Girls' Reunion, was held in the town hall on Saturday night, Mr. A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., presiding. The object in calling the gathering was to reach some definite decision re the wisest way of disposing of the funds on hand after all expenses of the reunion had been paid. The total receipts from all sources were $1740.84. From the sale of badges alone $246.50 was realized, the initial outlay being $40, and the badges selling at not less than 25 cents each and as much more as any generously disposed persons felt inclined to give.

Bills aggregating about $1,165.00 were presented and ordered paid when O.K.'d, in each case, by the chairman of the committee which incurred the expense. Balance on hand $75.00. This is rather less than the committee had hoped to hold to their credit in the bank, but it refutes the idea, which has gained considerable popularity, that a Re-union as a general thing is carried out at a financial loss. The recent Re-union for Cavan and Millbrook was not got up with any idea of making money out of the event, a low charge being made for the sports, community dances, etc., the committee simply desiring to clear expenses, which were necessarily heavy when three days' entertainment had to be considered.

Various suggestions were advanced in connection with the disposal of the amount on hand, amongst others being the idea that it should be expended in providing shed accommodation for the convenience of the farmers when in town. Another suggestion was that the money be invested against the time when another Re-union would be planned for, the amount then on hand to be held as an insurance to cover necessary expenses should unfavorable weather prevail, was also suggested. The decision finally arrived at, however, was to expend the money in building a new grandstand at the Agricultural Park, and otherwise improving the grounds for athletic purposes, changing the location from where the old grandstand (now unsafe) is, to a situation more favorable for viewing the ball games, etc., so that its use may be more general on all occasions when sports are in progress.

A committee chosen from the executive will meet a similar committee from the Agricultural Society and discuss the best ways and means of carrying out the object decided upon before any action is taken and the money put to the use agreed upon by the majority vote.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE MOON RABBIT

"'I will give you the life you would not take,' offered the rabbit."

"I will tell you why there is a rabbit on the moon," said Umpeetah, the Indian medicine man, after he had taken a long pull at his pipe.

Nancy and Nick sat as quietly as they knew how, waiting for the story. They had seen the rabbit through Umpeetah's magic glass.

"It was this way," went on Umpeetah. "Once upon a time a mighty hunter came to the place where the plains and mountains meet. He had made many arrows and well he deserved the name of mighty, for what he saw he killed, and he saw much, for his eye was swifter than lightning.

"But winter came quickly that year. It tore down the mountain passes and out onto the plains like a white fury while the cottonwood trees were still in leaf and before the wood berries had withered.

"Mister Mighty Hunter had lost his way; he was hungry and almost frozen and it was night!

"At last he found a cave, and having flint stone and a few dry twigs he made a tiny fire. Then he dug under the snow and found some pine branches and made a greater fire.

"Then he lay down to sleep. It was warm in the cave now.

"By and by something soft rubbed against his cheek.

"Mister Mighty Hunter sat up. 'Ah!' he said. 'Here is food of the best kind!' It was a pure white rabbit!

"Then he stopped. 'No, no, I can't eat such a helpless creature. Lie down, little rabbit, and keep warm as long as you like. No harm shall touch you.'

"'Thank you,' said the rabbit gratefully. And he lay down close beside the hunter and slept.

"Three cruel days passed. More snow and cold bitter wind, with never a chance for food!

"'I will give you the life you would not take,' offered the rabbit. 'At least one of us shall be saved.'

"But the hunter would not have it so.

"But the rabbit hurled himself into the glowing embers.

"The great hunter thought of his squaw and papoose waiting for him, and at last partook of the food that was offered.

"Suddenly a fairy stood before him. 'The little white rabbit is on the moon,' she said.

"'With this magic glass you can see it. Take it and tell your children's children never to be unkind to an animal. They must never forget the rabbit on the moon. Go now! The storm is over. You are safe!'

"The mighty hunter turned and left the cave. But ere he did so, he threw his bow and arrows on the fire!"

"That's a nice story," said Nancy and Nick. "Thank you, Umpeetah. We shall remember the rabbit on the moon, too."

(To be Continued).

MEAT SANDWICHES

Many women hate to make sandwiches, but if the knife is sharp and the butter creamed to spread and the bread not too fresh, there is no reason for considering sandwich making a hardship.

Sandwiches served with tea or milk on the porch make a delightful luncheon. And there is not a more clever way to use up left-overs than in these very sandwiches.

These suggestions for meat sandwiches may help you:

Left-Over Beef

Roast or steak can be used. Carefully remove all fat or gristle from meat. Put meat through food chopper. Four tablespoons chopped meat, 1 teaspoon minced parsley, 2 or 3 slices tomato, salt and pepper.

The amount of salt and pepper, of course, depends on how highly the meat was seasoned when cooked. Put meat, parsley, tomato, salt and pepper in a bowl and mix well. There should be enough tomato to make the mixture moist. Put between thin slices of bread and butter.

Veal Sandwiches

Remove all fat and bone from meat and put through food chopper. Four tablespoons chopped meat, 2 tablespoons grated new carrot, ½ teaspoon minced onion, 1 teaspoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, oil to make moist.

A quick way to do this is to put meat, a small carrot, 1 slice onion and four or five sprigs of parsley stripped from the stems into food chopper and grind. Mix well and season with salt and pepper. Make moist with oil and lemon juice. Raw carrots are a wonderful food as well as being very tasty with veal.

Lamb Sandwiches

Combine chopped lamb with minced watercress and mint. If watercress is not at hand use tender nasturtium leaves. Season with salt and pepper and a few grains of sugar and make moist with good cider vinegar. If cider vinegar is not procurable use lemon juice. These sandwiches are high in food value, each one containing a valuable raw vegetable rich in minerals.

Bacon Sandwiches

Combine crisp bacon with curly endive. Mince bacon and endive, using half as much bacon as endive. Season with paprika and make moist with lemon juice.

The person who would "eat and grow thin" may enjoy any or all of these sandwiches with iced tea, and he who would "eat and grow merry" should drink good rich milk with them.

Left-over fish makes delicious sandwiches. Carefully remove bones and flake. Season with salt, pepper and lemon juice or add one-fourth as much minced watercress.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

BREAD AND MEAT AS FOOD

Both children and adults eat too much meat. Meat's food value is well established, but although it contains more fat than bread, carbohydrates and minerals are practically lacking from it.

Bread has been termed the staff of life, and in many countries where meat is not obtainable or used as food, bread or its equivalent in the starch and sugar group (carbohydrates) is just that. In such countries the fats are furnished chiefly by oils.

The relative value of these two foods as builders of energy, strength and blood, or working power, is of great importance to all workers as well as laymen in all classes.

White bread is one of our chief foods. As it comes from the miller, with some of its nutritive value taken out by milling, its composition in each 100 parts is 1.1 parts mineral matter, 1.3 parts of fat, 9.3 parts of protein, 35.3 parts of water, 53.1 parts of carbohydrates.

Bread has a fuel value of 1,215 calories per pound.

Ordinary round steak contains about 8.4 parts of unedible material, 1.2 parts of mineral matter, no carbohydrates, 9.3 parts of fat, 18.8 parts of protein, 62.5 parts of water, and has a fuel value of 745 calories per pound.

The quantity of protein in meat (nitrogenous and albuminous parts of food) is nearly twice as great as that of bread. This is the building material of the body. However, a half pound of bread will furnish enough protein for the necessary requirements of the hard-working man for a day.

Careful experiments have determined that the protein of bread, milk, potatoes or meat have practically the same food value.

Thus, taking all food elements into consideration, bread is more valuable as a builder than meat. It contains more lime and mineral elements that are strong in bone building, a most important nutritive essential. A person, either child or adult, may be well sustained on bread without meat, but not on meat without bread or its equivalent food in the starch group.

Some meat once a day is essential but undoubtedly most people eat too much.

In youth meat is more essential than in middle age. Old age requires little or none, a vegetable diet being fully sustaining.

STEEL FREIGHTER SAILS FROM TORONTO HARBOR

TORONTO'S Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Toronto's harbor will be brought a step nearer realization of its ambitions as an ocean port on Thursday when the all steel freighter, Van Eyck of the Kirkwood Line, steams out of the bay on its first trip to establish a new direct route between this city and Halifax and St. John.

Besides its significance for the harbor, inauguration of this service will make the maritime market considerable more accessible to Toronto and Ontario manufacturers.

THRESHING ENGINE WHEELS RAISE MOTORISTS' IRE

Because many of the country roads in Ohio have been made almost impassable for automobiles by the havoc wrought by thrashing machines passing over them, the Cincinnati Automobile Club is backing a movement to urge the passing of a law making it imperative that thrashing machines, when traversing country roads, use plain iron wheels or rubber tire wheels.

Pretty soon the necessities of life will cost more than the luxuries.

Revolution in Bulgaria Bursts Into Full Flame

Rebels Hold the Whole Country, and Sofia Is Blockaded—King Baris Has Offered to Resign.

LONDON, Sept. 25. — (Special).— A revolution in Bulgaria has burst into full flame, and the whole country is in the hands of rebels, according to a despatch to the Morning Post from Belgrade.

The despatch adds that Sofia is blockaded. King Boris has offered to resign, but his offer has not been accepted.

The insurgents are said to have destroyed all means of communication, and the new Government has lost connection with the provinces. The situation of the capital is critical. It is blockaded both in a military and economic sense, is short of provisions and is threatened with attack.

The despatch to the Post says Premier Zankoff is re-shaping his Government and reinforcing it with adherents to General Teodore Alexandroff, the Macedonian leader, who has become Minister of Police and holds the whole city under military dictatorship.

Recruiting Militia.

A despatch from Athens says: The Bulgarian Government is recruiting ten thousand militia men to aid in quelling the Agrarian - Communist rebellion, messages from Sofia indicate to-day.

Despite the severe censorship which prevails in Sofia, advices indicated the situation on the Zankoff Government is endangered.

Despatches from Sofia to-day revealed the Communists planned a terroristic, using five corps of special troops they had organized for the plot. Under the command of Major Zankoff, these troops were to occupy Sofia and overthrow the Zankoff Government, which has been in power since the defeat of the Stamboulisky Agrarian regime last spring.

The principal feature of the plot apparently has been frustrated, although the situation still is unclear, owing to the censorship and various mysterious Balkan propaganda sources which are spreading alarmist reports.

FLED 2,500 MILES TO WED.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 25.—(Associated Press)—A 2,500-mile trip, afoot and afloat, ending in marriage, might summarize the feat of Carolyn Cushman Murphy, 15, and Roy Silvestre Wiegand, four years her senior. Both were students at Miami University, Ohio, but fled from that institution last June, according to the bride, because their parents objected to their marriage.

Both have gone to work, Mrs. Wiegand's first adventure in that line being in journalism and her first story a record of her trip on foot and in automobile and side-door Pullman to New Orleans and as extra hand aboard a freighter from New Orleans to era Cruz. Her home is in Brooklyn, N.Y.

PRESS WOMEN AT THE CONVENTION

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 25. — (Canadian Press). — Women representing every branch of journalism and from all parts of the Dominion, gathered here yesterday for the opening session of the triennial convention of the Canadian Women's Press Club. Two hundred members were present, including two women judges, a member of Parliament and the parliamentary secretary of a Cabinet Minister.

In her presidential address Miss Doyle, after referring to previous meeting places, declared that "since we last met in the West Canada's women have sustained their greatest test in her history and the very status of our sex has been changed. To-day We are numbered among her citizens.

"No body of Canadian women reflects the decade's changed conditions of our sex more vividly than does the Canadian Press Club. Look through our membership of nearly four hundred to-day and you will find women who are filling every position on newspapers.

"From seasoned editors to the indefatigable young reporters they abound. But our members are more and more realizing how wide a field our club embraces."

"Not only have our members achieved much," said the President, "in their own profession, but just as men have graduated from newspapers to the world's proudest poets, so our women are now climbing."

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Miles Sheridan, made wretched by his wife's infidelity is attempting to facilitate her obtaining a divorce by creating a scandal about himself. To this end, he offers $20,000 to

Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl known as the Million Dollar Doll if she will take a yacht trip with him. Juliet is unable to go, herself, but greedy for the money she persuades

Teresa Desmond (Terry) her lovely and unbelievably innocent half-sister, an exquisite counterpart of herself, to go in her stead, masquerading as the Million Dollar Doll. Ever since a kindness Miles did her in her childhood, Terry has made him her Dream Prince, and now she is grateful for the opportunity of serving him.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife, is in love with

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian.

Eustace Narlo, a wealthy Greek, who does not know of Terry's relationship to Juliet, is in love with the younger girl.

Mrs. Harkness, Miles' old servant, prepared to hate the "Million Dollar Doll" is won over by Terry's sweetness and charm. Miles has stipulated that he will have nothing to do with the girl, on the voyage, but already his resolve is wavering. He does not recognize the little girl whom he befriended so long ago, but he is surprised to find the notorious Juliet Divine so girlishly charming. In order to make the scandal known, he appears at Monte Carlo with the girl.

CHAPTER XLIX

A Queer Viewpoint

They turned the corner between the Casino and the Hotel de Paris, and were on the upper of the two terraces, where the crowd mostly congregates between eleven in the morning and the hour of dejeuner.

Through the group of palms behind the marble bust of Berlioz they could see the romantic shape of the Rock where Hercules landed, the grey towers of the ancient stronghold of the Grimaldis, and the huge modern bulk of the Prince's Museum. To the left, far away, floated the mountains of Italy, behind and above the olives and pines of green Cap Martin: and straight in front was the sea, so deeply blue that it seemed to have drunk the color from a paler sky.

On chairs shaded with huge umbrellas, close to the Casino, a number of men and women in summer clothes sat beside little iron tables drinking mineral waters for a "cure."

On green benches near the terrace—balustrade sat more men and women, gazing out to sea, watching a couple of hydro-aeroplanes, or studying little books of the systems they meant to play at roulette. And along the gravelled promenade—brown in shadow, gold in sun—strolled many more men and women.

Some were young and handsome, and smartly dressed: girls in tennis frocks, men in flannels. There were marvellous middle-aged women, clinging to the ragged edges of their youth with the aid of Poiret or Lucille: middle-aged men, once soldiers or statesmen, now resigned to fate, as their wives' escorts: but the majority were dull, dowdy creatures, whose sole mission in life was a burning interest in their own food, luck at play, or other peoples' millions or scandals.

Everyone stared at Sheridan and his companion, and many looked after them when they had passed. Suddenly, from the group of water-drinkers under the sun-umbrellas, a lean figure rose up, and came hurrying forward: the figure of an elderly woman in black, with a tiny Pekinese tucked under one arm.

"Why, Miles!" she shrilled. "It can't be you."

Terry glanced at Sheridan. His face flushed. He was not pleased with this meeting. Why not? she wondered, since they were on parade together, for all the world to see?

His hat was off and he stopped with evident reluctance. The girl, in her inexperience, did not know whether she ought to pause also, or walk slowly on. But the decision was snatched from her.

"And of course this is dear Betty!" the lady in black went on, bestowing upon the girl a smile which suggested in a flash a great rush of teeth to the head.

A thin, knuckly hand hung with the old-fashioned rings reached out for the small, white gloved one carrying Juliet Divine's gold-mesh bag, and shook it so emphatically as to drop the bag on the gravel.

Miles stooped to retrieve the glittering thing, and Terry felt that he was glad to stoop just then. It was queer, how she began to read thoughts of his! But they were only small thoughts. She could not read the big ones.

"I wouldn't have recognized you, my dear, from the photo Miles sent me when you married, but photos never do us justice, do they? They look older, and don't show our coloring," the lady chattered on.

"Now do come and sit down, and tell me all about yourselves: how you got here, and how long you're going to stay and everything. I'm ordered by my Mentone doctor to take the Vichy cure, which you know they give at Monte Carlo now, as well as at Vichy itself, so I'm obliged to drive over each morning—though of course quite against my principles, as I don't approve of Monte Carlo."

Her stream of words had given Miles time to recover himself, and for Terry to realize that this must be the aunt of whom Mrs. Harkness had spoken. The girl guessed that Sheridan would have preferred to let the lady hear the truth about the situation from Harky, rather than it should burst upon her in this sensational way.

Terry's cheeks were no longer red. She had a sensation of physical sickness, and the blood drained from her face to her heart.

"This is not Betty. Aunt Caroline," Miles had at last a chance to explain. "I——"

His aunt did not let him finish.

"Oh, my dear boy, I must apologize," she said. "I'm so near-sighted, and I don't like wearing glasses except when I read. You're on the Riviera by yourself, then, and this young lady is just a friend you have met on the terrace.

"Now I look closely, she's not at all like Betty's photograph, though she's very charming and I should like you to introduce us. If she's an American, I dare say I know some of her people, though I've lived mostly in France and Italy the last few years; my dear little Peke is such a bad sea traveller!"

Miles hesitated for a second. When his aunt heard the scandal (she was sure to hear it in a few hours or days) she would be righteously indignant with him for daring to introduce a girl of Juliet Divine's type.

But to ignore the request would be a slap in the face for his companion, and strangely he found that he preferred to insult Miss Caroline Sheridan rather than hurt the girl. This was a queer viewpoint. But there it was!

SHAKE THE SHIMMY.

BERLIN, (By mail to the United Press).—Away with the shimmy and fox trot! Bring back the good old German waltz and its masters.

This is a new note in the night life of Berlin, H. M. Heidrich, authority, declares.

Every night—that is when police restrictions do not prohibit—Germany's youth, and "not so youth", flings a jazzy heel in restaurants, bars, cafes, dance-halls and cabarets.

But, says Heidrich, the pity of it is nobody dances the old German waltz. Nothing but rythmless foxtrots and shimmys; dances originating in the warm clime of Spain and negro dives of New Orleans.

SOCIETY WOMAN HELD FOR FRAUD

Secretary of Sarnia, Ont., Fence Company Charged With Mail Order Swindle.

PORT HURON, Mich., Sept. 25. —Sarnia business and social circles are stirred by the arrest of Miss Judith Pendergast, 28 years old, prominent in Sarnia society, on a warrant issued by the crown attorney of Sarnia, charging theft in connection with the affairs of the defunct Pendergast Fence Co.

It is alleged by the crown attorney that a number of farmers in Canada have been defrauded of sums of money totaling more than $10,000. He charges that the Pendergast Fence Co., following an intensive circular campaign throughout Canada, accepted orders accompanied by cash for cut-rate wire fencing. The orders were never filled and the crown attorney says he can show that the failure to fill orders was deliberate.

Miss Pendergast was secretary of the company and her signature appears on many of the company records, which were seized by the crown attorney in a locked room in the former Pendergast home.

Gives $13,000 in Bonds.

Three months ago creditors seized the office fixtures and the officers of the defunct company, which had been dissolved without any assignment or official winding up of the concern's affairs.

Maurice de Burgh Pendergast, president of the concern, came to the United States and is believed to be in Minnesota with his two sons, operating wire fence plants. Miss Pendergast took up her residence in London, Ont. She was brought to Sarnia Thursday on a warrant charging theft. She gave up a $10,000 personal bond and friends put up two $3,000 bonds for her appearance in court when wanted.

Complaints for non-delivery of fencing fully paid for are being received daily by the Crown attorney, he says ,and the total amount involved may reach $15,000 or more. Circular letters were sent out, it is said, to allay the anxiety of purchasers over the failure of their fencing to be delivered.

CENSURE BALLOON RACE COMMITTEE

Brussels Press Condemn Starting in Adverse Weather.

BRUSSELS, September 25 (Canadian Press). — A general protest against the officials in charge of the James Gordon Bennett Cup race for not postponing the start of the balloons yesterday in the face of the adverse weather conditions, was raised by the evening newspapers yesterday. They expressed astonishment that the event should have in the first place been set for a date during the autumn equinoctional period when unsettled weather is to be expected.

The president and vice-president of the Belgian Aero Club declared last evening that the rules of the race are positive, and that once the day and hour is agreed upon, the start must be made at that time.

The president said he could hardly understand why some of the pilots had made complaints, as "they were under full liberty to cancel their engagement if they considered the weather conditions too dangerous."

FELL INTO THE SEA.

BRUSSELS, September 25 (Canadian Press). — The British balloon Margaret fell into the sea 60 miles north-north-east of Skagen, Denmark.

The Aero Club, which makes this announcement, adds that the balloon and its occupants were saved and conveyed to Gothenburg.

MANY ATTRACTIONS AT MANVERS SCHOOL FAIR

Annual Event in Southern Section of Township, First Quality Exhibits, Community Singing, Parade and Physical Culture.

MILLBROOK, September 25. — The South Manvers Rural School Fair was held at Lotus on Friday afternoon, about three hundred people gathering on the school grounds and taking a keen interest in excellent and numerous exhibits in large tent, the live stock out of doors, and in the various events arranged by the management and successfully carried out from the time the Fair opened at 1 p.m. until it closed at 5 o'clock..

As usual the school parade and physical culture exercises formed one of the main attractions, Inspector (Major) E. E. Snyder, of Port Hope, acting as judge, and expressing himself as being well pleased with the thorough manner in which the teachers had trained the pupils.

The favourable weather permitted the choral singing, introduced for the first time at this Fair, and the public speaking, to be held on the grounds without the necessity of seeking shelter in church or schoolhouse, as has been the case at some former Fairs this week.

The races have been heartily entered into by young and old this season, and have given a healthy outlet for the surplus energy of the boys and girls ,helping to warm the blood even of the older folks, when the air grew too chilly for comfort after an hour or two standing round out of doors.

Galloway School has asked that the Fair be held at that point next year and the invitation will be considered by the management when another season's programme is being arranged. This school won the silver cup for efficiency in all School Fair work again this year, and as this is the third time in succession, it becomes their permanent property.

The pupils from Galloway's School had over one hundred entries at Friday's Fair, and their jaunty sailor suits were especially admired when the line-up for the parade was called.

RIDES TO LOSE WEIGHT.

By FERDINAND C. M. JAHN

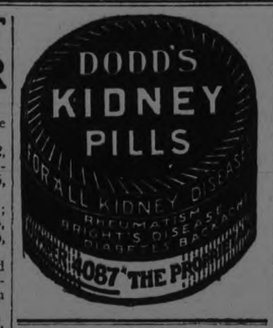
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN (By mail to the United Press)—President Ebert gets his daily exercise by horseback riding.

According to the opinion of former Kaiser Wilhelm, one couldn't be a monarch or head of a great state unless he could ride. This probably is not the main reason Ebert rides each morning, he having been persuaded to take up this form of outdoor exercise as he was becoming corpulent.

While Wilhelm formerly rode a beautiful white horse through the principal riding lanes of the famous Tiergarten, being saluted left and right, Ebert takes his ride in the privacy of the closed yards of the Moabit soldiers' barracks.

Wilhelm was wont to tell his royal stable masters that the monarch's horse ought to look fiery and sprightly while, as a matter of fact, it ought to be tame and meek. The latter part fits in Ebert's case, as there is nothing fiery about his mare.



FEDERATION OF LABOR MEETING

OTTAWA, September 25 (Canadian Press). — Owing to the recent resignation of the secretary and the consequent lack of publicity, the convention of the Canadian Federation of Labour, which opened here yesterday was only attended by thirty-eight delegates, most of them from Eastern Ontario and Quebec Provinces, but seventy-four credentials were received.

The morning session of the convention, which was presided over by David Giroux of Montreal, president of the Federation, was devoted to the registration of delegates and the reception of credentials, followed by the presentation of the various reports.

President Giroux, in a brief address, outlined the progress which has been made during the past year by the Canadian labour units affiliated with the Federation, and said that the signs were promising for a much bigger membership in the future. Canadian labour men had begun to think that they should belong to Canadian organisations, without any international aspect, he said.

At the afternoon session a number of resolutions were forwarded, chief of which was one to request the Dominion Government to enact an Order-in-Council whereby Labour Day, instead of being celebrated on the first Monday in September, be recognised on Dominion Day so as to make the day a truly Canadian holiday.

Delegates referred to recent investigations which had brought to light very insanitary and unclean conditions in some of the lumber camps in Western Ontario, referring particularly to the camp arrangements, bunks and bedding.

The secretary-treasurer was instructed to write the Dominion Minister of Health drawing his attention to these conditions, with a request that they be remedied.

Another resolution was to the effect that housing schemes should be Provincial and not Federal, and that loans should be administered by a Commission appointed by the different Provincial Governments, so that individual labourers could receive money direct whereby they could erect suitable homes.

Another resolution calls for the establishment by the Dominion Government of an old-age pension scheme.

FIND PREHISTORIC BONES.

MILES CITY, Mont., Sept. 25.—(Associated Press)—The jaw bones and tusk of a large prehistoric animal were uncovered here recently by a railroad construction crew working with a steam shovel. The tusk is 22 inches in circumference.

The animal had only two teeth, each more than six inches long and three inches wide, with thirteen rows of cutting edges running crosswise on each tooth. A short distance from where the jaw bones and tusk were unearthed, shells of mussels a foot and a half long were found, it is reported.

WARD HEARING BEFORE COURT

Opening Session in Murder Case Provided Many Thrills.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Sept. 25. —(Canadian Press.)— Two women, principals in the trial of wealthy Walter S. Ward for murder of Clarence M. Peters, ex-sailor, faced each other for the first time with dramatic suddenness yesterday.

Beryl Curtis Ward, slight, well-groomed, wife of the defendant, was one. Inez C. Peters, toil-worn and plainly dressed, the mother of ten children, one of whom was the man Ward killed, was the other.

They saw each other as Mrs. Peters took the witness stand shortly after Mrs. Ward unexpectedly had been called to testify. They flashed a look of recognition, stared for a moment without change of expression, then wept.

A court room crowded to the corridors, buzzed with anticipation as Mrs. Ward was called from her place beside her husband to testify for the prosecution. There came a jam at the entrance, as women and girls, who comprised half the spectators, struggled with men for place within earshot of the testimony.

As her name was called, Mrs. Ward wended her way through the bunched chairs of opposing counsel, to the stand. Her "I do" when the oath was read, was almost inaudible.

"Mrs. Ward," began Attorney Sherman, "what time did your husband come home the night of May 15, 1922, or the next morning?" (the day Peters was slain.) Her answer, coming through hardly mobile lips, had to be read by the stenographer, it came so indistinctly.

"He came between four and five o'clock—in the morning."

"Did he give you any explanation as to why he was out so late?" asked the prosecutor.

"He did," replied Mrs. Ward, a little defiantly.

"Was it satisfactory to you?" the attorney pursued. Before defence counsel could voice an objection, which was sustained, the witness answered: "It was."

Excused from lengthy quizzing by defence counsel, Mrs. Ward resumed her place beside her husband. It had been her first public appearance as a witness in the case.

Spectators got their major thrill of the day when the prosecution called the name of Mrs. Peters.

She too, spoke inaudibly. Her son Clarence was "a good boy" she said almost with each answer, even while she was telling that he had been in "little troubles" with the police which caused him to be sent twice from their home city, Haverhill, Mass., to the Shirley School for Boys.

The slain youths' father, Eldridge O. Peters, corroborated the testimony of his wife.

One of the most startling developments of the day was reserved until after the jury was dismissed and during argument on the admissability of the Peters letters.

George H. O'Neill declared the prosecution intended to show that "Clarence Peters was not the kind to blackmail or to kill a man."

"He didn't carry a gun," said O'Neill. "We'll prove that Ward's story of killing this man in self-defence was a pure fabrication. We'll prove that Ward's story of this blackmail plot was just framed as a means of getting money out of his wealthy father."

SHOT IN ARGUMENT OVER HUNTING DOGS

MONTREAL, Sept. 25—(Canadian Press).—Henri Lavolette, aged 50, of Valleyfield, who was shot during an argument over hunting dogs in the Valleyfield Hotel Saturday, died at the General Hospital late yesterday.

Walter Muir, aged 24, and Edward Carroll, aged 26, of New York, who were arrested in connection with the shooting, will now be charged with murder.

THE LAURA SECORD ESSAY COMPETITION

Attractive Prizes Offered For Canadian Historical Events.

Announcement is made at Toronto of attractive prizes for Canadian Historical events, the first one being that of the life of Laura Secord the Heroine of 1812.

$500.00 in all is being offered to boys and girls up to eighteen years of age. Two classes make up the divisions, the dividing line being fourteen years. Fifteen prizes of varying amounts are listed chief of which is a grand prize of two hundred dollars or a free trip to New York for the successful essayist and his mother.

These prizes are made possible by an outstanding Canadian company owned by Mr. Frank O'Connor, a former fellow townsman. In this way he is celebrating the tenth anniversary of the founding of his business.

Frank O'Connor as he is popularly known in the city is one of our "native sons" and of whom we are proud, not only for his success in business but because of his splendid qualities while a resident here. Old timers will recall his football prowess and his late connection with Canadian General and Canadian Chicle Co.

In October 1913 he founded the Laura Secord shops devoted to the making and sale of fresh candies and his unique and distinctive merchandising ideas have met with such marked success that from the one store in that year to 37 shops in Canada alone, Laura Secords Shops have developed to a position where they are recognized as the worlds leading candy shops.

It is interesting to note the Laura Secord candy shops were also the first candy company to announce and put into effect a profit sharing plan in which over 700 employees will share at Christmas time this year.

Mr. O'Connor is intensely interested in Canadian History and is taking this means of interesting boys and girls in a wider appreciation of the outstanding Canadian Historcal events.

The contest extends over two months, closing October 31st. The subject is a really fascinating one, and stirs the imagination of our best pupils in our schools.

FRANK OLIVER APPOINTED.

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.— (Canadian Press.)—Hon. Frank Oliver, newspaper publisher and Minister of Interior under Sir Wilfrid Laurier, has been appointed member of the Dominion Railway Commissioners, to succeed the late Dr. James G. Rutherford, it was announced yesterday. Mr. Oliver will assume his new duties almost immediately.

ALBERTA COAL RATE HIGHER OCTOBER 4

Ten Thousand Tons The Limit of $7 Rail Rate Sir Henry Announces.

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—Efforts of Attorney General Nickle to have Canadain National Railways increase their stated 10,000 ton maximum of coal shipments from Alberta at a temporary $7 freight rate have failed.

In telegraphic exchange between Hon. Mr. Nickle and Sir Henry Thornton yesterday, the C.N.R. chief definitely declared the 10,000 ton allotment to be the limit and the $7 rate to cease at midnight, October 3.

That there is need for caution on the part of Alberta fuel purchasers was the warning issued yesterday from official sources at the Parliament Buildings. Intending purchasers, it was stated, should protect themselves before making payment, by seeing that their orders go to the Ontario government through the fuel controller of Ontario. It has reached official ears that inferior brands of western fuel are being offered, and that mine "strippings" may be sold as high grade coal.

52 CANDIDATES FOR M'GILL TEAM

First Real Workout of Full Squad This Season.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24. — Fifty-two candidates comprised the McGill inter-collegiate rugby squad that turned out under Coach Frank Shaughnessy and his staff of assistants this afternoon at the Percival Molson Stadium. It was the first real workout of the entire squad, the regulars of last season's squad having reported back at the week-end from Powell's Camp where they have been going through a hardening up process through mountain climbing and long canoe trips with their attendant portages.

There are still several players to report. The mainstays from last year are all in harness and the majority of the younger grid-men who are coming up for the first time with good reputations as prep school players, have found the stadium. But there are still a few players of repute yet to make their appearance. Two of these, who are well spoken of by that great McGill rugby scout, Buster Reid, are coming from London. They are Williams, and Jack Little. Williams was for three years a first team man with the Ridley College squad and last season was a stellar performer at Western University, while Little is rated as a first class gridman. The pair are expected to be out either to-morrow or Wednesday.

BALL ENTHUSIAST SEEKS STAR TEAM

Brighton Sport Would Have Personnel Selected From Northumberland League.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 25.—A baseball enthusiast in Brighton, who has in mind the personnel of a star team selected from players in the Northumberland League, has written the managers of the various clubs asking them to furnish the names of one or more of their best players.

So far as Campbellford team is concerned that is no easy task, not from a dearth but on account of our excess to material. Anyone desirous of seeing a nine of all stars could take the regular players who finished the season for Campbellford and his task would be completed.

When it came to a selection of the best players the only way to settle the problem was to draw the names of six from a hat. First came the name of "Nip" Weston, the first baseman, who by common consent was the star of the league in that position, excelling as he did as a fielder and a batter. He got through the season without a single error and never hesitated to take a chance. Weston saved his teammates from many an error by reaching after high and getting down after low throws.

W. Brady, the pitcher, was another selection. He did not go on the mound until the season was half over and he improved in every game until the end. If Brady had not been injured just before Campbellford and Warkworth played off for second place, his team would have won that series and probably would have landed the championship cup which went to Trenton.

Blakely had the honor of being selected as a star. In left field he covered more ground than any of them, being as fleet-footed as a deer and able to get them whether they drop from the clouds or come humming along the grass. Blakely is an accurate thrower and improved in hitting as the season advanced.

W. Hume, another choice, proved a reliable man, at bat, in right field or as a substitute catcher.

Charlie Holmes, at second base, has been known to jump four feet in the air to pull down a liner or a high throw and when occasion required was a valuable man behind the bat. He, with Weston, Nesbitt and Hume, was one of the home run hitters of the team.

"Barney" Eagleson is selected as a infield utility man, for he is not only a safe proposition at first but can take his turn on the mound and fan his share of the best batters that face him.

Some Batting Averages.

Some of the scorers are publishing what purports to be official batting percentages of their respective teams. Of course figures never pervaricote if left to themselves but it is unfortunate that they so often are the victims of liberal minded manipulation. It is simply marvellous the number of players in the Northumberland League who batted 400 or better last summer. What is still more surprising is that these Babe Ruths in embryo did not manage to bring their teams to a place at the top instead of leaving them trying to grope their way out of the cellar at the close of the season.

OLD COUNTRY RUGBY.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press Cable)—In a rugby union fixture played here today Cross Keys defeated Birmingham by 22 to 10.

NINE FOR YANKS IN BIG INNING

Easy Victory Over Detroit —Boston Drops Two to St. Louis.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. — The New York Americans knocked out nine runs in the sixth inning here today and defeated Detroit in the first game of the series, 12 to 4. Twelve Yankees went to bat in the sixth inning. Ruth doubled and walked in this inning and scored two runs. Score:

Detroit ..... 300 000 001— 4 6 3
New York .. 000 09 12x—12 15 0

Cole, Olsen and Bassler; Hoyt and Schang.

Senators Blanked

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Chicago shut out Washington, 1 to 0, today. Robertson having the better of Zahniser on the mound. Collins' walk in the sixth, followed by Ruel's wild throw to catch him off first, and Sheely's single accounted for the score: Score:

Chicago .....000 001 000—1 9 1
Washington ...000 000 000—0 7 2

Robertson and Schalk; Zahniser and Ruel.

Pair For St Louis

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—St. Louis took both games from Boston today, 6 to 1, and 4 to 2. The second game was won in the 10th when Schliebner's single to left, with two out and the bases filled, scored two runs. Scores:

1st game

SOCCER NOTES

The game for Saturday is between the Canadian Woollens and the Thistles at King Edward Park. Kick-off at 3.30 prompt. Referee, J. Russell.

The Association decided that the Peck Trophy will be settled next Monday evening.

Interviewed after the game last Saturday, Jack Cridland and Jack Chambers said: "I don't think we will ever win a trophy, but we will try hard the next game!"

The Quaker Oats team have decided to drop out of the League for the remainder of the season which leaves only three teams, and two (2) games to be played: Canadian Woollens has to play the G.W.V.A. and Thistles yet.

It is stated on good authority that the Scots are contemplating two teams for next season, and are working on that basis at the present moment. The more the better.

The following note was handed to the press by the President of Trades and Labour Council: "The rule governing the trophy donated by A. E. Peck, to the Labour Council known as the Peck Cup, is that the final game is to be played on Labor Day, under the auspices of the Trades and Labour Council of Peterboro, the place and time to be designated by that body, and the cup to be won three times in succession before becoming the property of the winning Club."

The Peck Cup Final should have been played on Labour Day, but the Association made arrangements with the Labour Council so as to have the game played at a later late.

The G. W. V. A. and Thistle are standing even in the League and the games to be played decide the championship that will entitle the winner to the "White Challenge Trophy," and medals and runners-up "Clarke" Shield."

Barricading players while on the field of plays seems to be prominent in every sport, as the following taken from "Athletic News," from the pen of the President of "Notts County," complains bitterly of the unsportsmanlike tactics of the spectators barricading players and running on the field of play between two Enguish teams.

TENNIS

City Championships.

The following games were played off over the week-end. In the first round and preliminary games of the mixed doubles:

Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Langley won from Miss Meyers and F. C. Webber, 6-2, 6-3.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Cranfield won from Miss Wade and Walter Jackson, 6-2, 6-3.

The above two winning teams to play oc to see who meets Miss Young and Dr. McPherson in the finals.

Miss Young and Dr. McPherson won from Miss Fife and G. C. Scott in a semi-final game, 6-2, 7-5.

Mens Singles.

G. S. Scott won from H. Tamplet, 7-5, 6-2.

Miss Dr. Young is again ladies single champion, having defeated Mrs. Ross in final games, 6-0, 5-7, 6-2.

Miss Young and Miss Giroux are ladies' doubles champions, winning from Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Cranfield in the final games, 6-3, 3-6,6-3.

Miss Young played both the finals in the ladies' doubles and semi-finals in mixed doubles on Saturday afternoon and gave a great exhibition of tennis in both matches.

BROCKVILLE NEXT FOR C. G. E.

Brockville and the C.G.E. of Peterborough are the surviving teams in the Eastern Ontario section of the Intermediate O.B.A.A. series, and will probably play the first of the semi-finals in Brockville on Saturday. Brockville won both their games from Picton, taking the second right in Picton Monday afternoon by the score of 3-1. This will necessitate a long jump for the C.G.E. team in their next trip. The winner of this series will go into the Intermediate finals.

MAKES GOOD, FIRST YEAR IN MAJORS

George Grantham of Chicago Cubs Rates Real Find of Season.

BY BILLY EVANS.

An Eddie Collins in the rough, who needs only a few years of his big league polish to rival the brilliant second sacker of the White Sox.

Those are just a few of the nice things they are saying about George Grantham, playing his first year at second base for the Chicago Cubs.

Grantham is one of the most talked about players on a much talked about club. Just at present the Chicago Cubs are the sensation of the National League. No player has done more to keep the Cubs in the limelight than Grantham.

If I am not mistaken Grantham was dug up by Jack Doyle, who saw him performing for Omaha in the Western League. Grantham came to the majors as a third sacker.

Started Career at Third.

Grantham, as a third sacker in the Western League, made more errors than any other player at that position in the organization. Fifty-seven varieties of bobbles were charged against him. This didn't have the slightest effect on Doyle. Jack figured Grantham would hit in the majors, liked his speed, and when the error question was brought up, Doyle argued that it was a recommendation.

"He goes after everything. That is why he makes a lot of boots," explained Doyle to Manager Bill Killefer. That was enough for Manager Bill. Grantham was bought.

Real Praise From Star.

Recently while in St. Louis I bumped into Bobby Wallace, famous shortstop of other days, now scout for the Chicago Cubs. Sometimes it is hard for one scout to see good in the players picked up by another baseball Sherlock Holmes, but not Bobby Wallace.

"What about this fellow Grantham of the Cubs?" I asked Bobby.

"There's a real ball player, Bill," he replied. "He is one of the best prospects that has broken into the majors in the last 10 years. He has a world of ability, is always eager to learn, and best of all, he likes to play ball. I really think he likes to play double headers better than a single game. Grantham in a couple of years should be a real star."

Is Enjoying Big Year.

It is an interesting fact that Grantham is making good at second base, rather than third, the position seems to be his spot. It is also a coincidence that Eddie Collins, premier second baseman, came to the majors as a shortstop and was tried at short, third and the outfield before he found himself at second.

Few players in the history of the game ever had a better first year than Grantham is enjoying. He is going big in every department, and seems destined to wrest from Max Carey the honor of being the premier base runner in the National League, that has been Carey's for years.

WILLS NOW ON THE DEMPSEY BLACKLIST

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(United Press)—When the court decided that Harry Wills had no legal rights to force his way into a contest for the world's heavyweight championship with Jack Dempsey he lost what little chance he had remaining for the title.

Wills may be held up as a martyr, in that circumstances seemed to militate against his chances to win the championship and a fortune, but when the facts are considered dispassionately, the big colored fighter has no one to blame but himself.

He had many supporters up to the time he sought to prevent the Dempsey-Firpo fight at a time when all the arrangements had been completed and when Tex Rickard had spent more than $50,000 in preliminary arrangements. It placed him in the position of a bad sport and it cost him a lot of public sympathy.

Had Wills been that aggressive in forcing the issue a year of two ago he would have had a crack at Dempsey before Firpo and he would have had a better chance to win the championship two years ago, because it is known that he has slipped considerably in the last year. It is only natural that he could not retain whatever form he possessed without fighting.

Firpo worked himself into a bout for the title by building himself up a lot of fights. He wanted a crack at the championship and he submitted to the process of being built up to the position of the logical contender by fighting everyone he was asked to meet.

Wills would have had the bout a long time ago if he had agreed or been willing to do the same thing. When he started out to build up, he made himself look bad, especially in the bout with Clem Johnson, and he apparently decided then that he had only one shot in him and that was good for a losing end with Dempsey.

He was offered $10,000 to meet George Godfrey in one of the bouts on the Milk Fund show, where Firpo and Jess Willard appeared, but he turned down the offer, saying that he was too good to appear in anything that looked like a preliminary.

Firpo might have considered himself as being better than a preliminary fighter, but he had business sense enough to see the opportunity of making such a good showing that the fans would consider him the best of the lot on the card.

Wills could have gone on in a preliminary and he might have made such a fine showing that the crowd would have given the verdict that Willard and Firpo were both hams and that Wills was the real contender for the title.

The colored fighter would have been asked to meet Firpo, but it is almost sure that he would have refused.

Floyd Johnson, the young Iowa heavyweight, was willing to fight Wills, and several promoters were willing to offer a fancy purse, but Wills would not consider the fight.

While other contenders were fighting around and trying to force themselves into a title bout, Wills sat back and wept that he was being given a raw deal, but he made no move to help himself and in the boxing game there are few helping hands extended for anyone.

There has been some talk of a Dempsey-Wills fight in Tia Juana this winter, but Jack Kearns does not consider it a possibility.

Wills is not a drawing card in California. He has made most of his bad fights out there, and the Pacific Coast fans would be more interested in a Dempsey-Gibbons return bout, which is now being considered.

Wills is still a card in the east, but not as good as he was a year ago. There is no place in the east in which the bout can be held and the longer it remains in the making the less interesting it will become.

Don't be fooled by talk that Dempsey is afraid of Wills. The champion has even spent his own money trying to get Wills into the ring, but he got no help from his challenger.

When Dempsey and Wills signed the agreement to meet for a promoter who would submit the best terms, Jack Kearns tried and spent money to get promoters interested but he couldn't get a response from a reputable man.

What offers were made for the bout were made in the interest of Wills by promoters who didn't have any desire to put on the bout and who wanted to make Dempsey look bad.

The champion insists now that he will never meet Wills because he does not want to help him get a big losing end after he turned out to be such a bad sport.

Kearns, however, says that the firm will still consider offers for the fight, but that he will not be willing to work for a bargain rate as he was last winter, when the match was being discussed.

"Before Wills decides to get out and show that he really has the ability, a couple of new heavyweights may spring up, like Firpo, and we can't fool around with a risky bout, like the one with Wills," Kearns said.

McCorkindale, of Long Beach, N.Y., against the Argentine boxer, for $54,206.24.

McCorkindale, who obtained an attachment against Firpo's share of the purse for his title battle with Jack Dempsey at the Polo Grounds recently, charges this amount is due him under an alleged contract with the South American by the terms of which he was to receive 25 per cent. of the fighter's earnings, plus $3,300 for expenses.

COMPREHENSIVE PLANS

had been obtained. He cordially endorsed the larger plan now proposed and promised the whole-hearted cooperation of the Health Association. Their summer camp work for children had shown them the needs of such an effort, for in spite of the frequent statements that there was really no poverty in Peterboro they had found children who were almost dying from starvation when they reached the camp.

The Medical Society.

Dr. A. Moir, vice-president of the Medical Society, said that he would have much pleasure in carrying back to the members of that organization the intelligence of the plan proposed by the Rotary Club. They could not have chosen a more worthy work in his opinion, and it was the duty of those more fortunately situated to assist others who were handicapped. Dr. Moir suggested a closer co-operation with the Medical Society in this enterprise, as the doctors were in possesion of the details in regard to the cases.

Monsignor McColl warmly endorsed the plans and remarked that anything that relieved suffering permanently was a noble work that deserved support. He declared that if hospital accommodation to assist the scheme were neecssary it would be forthcoming. Monsignor McColl paid a high tribute to the medical men of the city for their self-sacrifice and conscientious work.

Dr. S. W. Rose, pastor of the Murray street Baptist church, speaking on behalf of the Ministerial Association, promised the co-operation of the ministers and expressed his own hearty aproval of the plan. It was movements such as this, he felt, that were responsible for the unanimity with which he had been assured by former residents of Peterboro he had encountered, that Peterboro was the finest town in Canada in which to live.

The Well Babies' Clinic.

Mrs. James Kendry, for the Well Babies' Clinic, conveyed the best wishes of that organization towards the movement launched by Rotary. She referred to the many splendid babies shown at recent baby show and expressed the opinion that it was the duty of the Well Babies' Clinic to impress upon the mothers of these children the fact that there were other children in Peterboro not so fortunate who should be given their opportunity in life.

Mr. J. A. McKone, chairman of the Kiwanis Club, gracefully pledged the co-operation of the Kiwanians in behalf of the work carried on by the Rotarians in aid of the crippled children. The scheme should have general support, he declared, and he promised that Kiwanians would assist in any way possible.

A similar assurance was given by Mr. George H. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Health, who congratulated the Rotary Club upon undertaking this splendid work. The scheme would be discussed by the Board of Health, the speaker declared.

During the program several most enjoyable solos were given by Miss Engel, new soloist of St. Andrew's church, whose splendid voice was heard to great advantage.

The Rotary Bantams' baseball team, champions of the Bantam Bantam League, were the guests of the club last evening and were introduced by the chairman of the Baseball Committee, Jack Primeau, who said that the boys had conducted themselves as true Rotarians, both on and off the field. The boys were warmly applauded as they were introduced. They finished their evening with a theatre party.

PRAISES PETERBOROUGH FAIR

An outsider's impressions of Peterboro's Exhibition this year are interestingly recorded by Mr. P. O. VanSickle, of Alberton, Ontario, who judged the swine classes, in the following review which he wrote to Mr. T. W. McIndoo, one of the directors in charge of that department, as follows:

"Another notable Fair has come to a close in Peterboro. The story of the expansion and rise of this Fair from the ranks of the negligible to a position of pre-eminence is one of co-operation, courage and goodwill. Sitting at the luncheon of the Kiwanians and Fair Board, and hearing the president tell of the receipts in 1907 of $800; in 1916 (when the present Board assumed office) of $3,000, and in 1922, after six years of the present administration, of upwards of $19,000, one was impelled to ask "Why?"

Co-operation.

The first answer was "co-operation." Upon investigation this was proved to be correct. In the first instance here was proof right before us—the Kiwanians, comprising the hard-headed business men, and some of the most urban of the citizens, sitting elbow to elbow with the most capable farmers and stockmen of the district, with the common purpose of devising ways and means of furthering "OUR FAIR." But even this scene of fraternizing of urban and rural is the climax of a story of co-operation too long to relate here—it did not just happen.

Prizes Worth While.

A strong factor in building up the livestock departments of the Fair has been the courage of the Board in offering really worth-while prizes. With an inducement of $15 as the first of four prizes for a pure-bred bull, and other sections provided for accordingly, it is not to be wondered at that a long string of cattle should be present, including numerous animals which would do credit to any herd, or any show-ring in the Dominion. With $8 as the first of three prizes in swine, and a similar amount as the first of four prizes in sheep, the faith and courage were vindicated, which sustained the head of that department in building repeated additions to an already extensive accommodation.

The prizes running up to $30 for a first in the horse ring attracted quality from a considerable distance, many animals of excellence in both the lighter and heavier classes being on exhibition, although the total number of entries here, as elsewhere, but reflected the influence of mechanical transportation on the horse industry.

There was one feature in which Peterboro Fair was unique in the experience of the writer; inasmuch as along with animals of very high standard in many classes were numbers of mediocre individuals; or, in other words, the presence of the good stuff has not prevented owners of lesser animals from bringing out what they had. This is a wonderful advantage from an educational standpoint, because the fact that the exhibitor has his stock there indicates that he regarded it as at least "passing fair." When he stands in the show-ring throughout the judging of his class, and inevitably makes comparison between the winners and his own entry, with both before his eyes, there is a concrete impression inscribed upon his mind much more real than there would have been had he left his stock at home and become a disinterested spectator, attempting to carry all away in his memory.

Substantial Prizes.

The substantial prizes offered all around should induce local stockmen to exhibit if they feel that they have at all good stuff, as well as to continue to attract good animals from shipping distance.

Planned For Future.

Great as is the work being done, it is only part of what is being projected. Vision has been the basis of expansion of the recent past and of the present. That greater vision was impelling the management for the future was evident from the glimpses of his thought, which the President allowed us to catch during his brief address. So much has been accomplished by the men who have charge of this Fair that they command our confidence for the future. But they cannot accomplish any of their aims unaided. A great deal of co-operation on the part of all concerned, including citizens, organizations, and governments, is a necessity if the desired objectives are to be attained. Besides the avenues now being drawn upon for financial assistance, the City Council could well accept the mandate served upon it by the representatives of its citizenship in the persons of its Kiwanis Club and get in behind its Industrial Exhibition. The County Council could well take cognizance of the fact that out of $6,500 actually paid out in prize money, $5,700 went to rural exhibitors in 1922, and carried with it, probably, even greater value in its educational aspect, than in its immediate financial assistance. The county will be short-sighted indeed if it fails to render speedy and ample financial support to this most vital project, which may prove such a strong factor in combatting the tendency, which in our neighboring states, has resulted in wholesale farm desertion from even as good soil as Peterboro County.

A Capable Board.

The Governments too, both Provincial and Dominion, have here an organization of the type which they are laboring arduously to establish and assist. This one is a self-starting, automotive organization, not faltering in the mists; one with a programme; a programme of citizenship, headed up by safe, sane, progressive co-operating urban and rural business men. Although this healthy board is drawing the limit of its grant from the Province at the present time, one feels that our legislators would be well advised to set to work to devise ways and means whereby a grant more fitting the needs of the Fair Board and more commensurate with the opportunity of the Province in this direction might be forthcoming for next season.

Taken all in all, there is a movement under way which is beyond the experimental stage, and which could do for the life, both urban and rural, in the "Midlands of Eastern Ontario" what the Canadian National Exhibition has done, on a larger scale, for the citizenship of Canada, namely, inculcate a healthy, hopeful, confident spirit at this time when such is so desirable and necessary."

COMMUNISTS IN BERLIN

ments. Officials say Poincare recognizes the necessity of a moratorium. Official notification of the German decision is eagerly waited.

A Freer Life

"In event the Rhineland separatists are successful in their efforts to establish an Independent State it will be necessary for France to negotiate with them for payment of their share German reparations, French High Commissioner Tierard said in an interview with the correspondent of Le Gaulois at Goblenz.

"The Rhineland people demand a freer life," Tierard said. The popular sentiment in favor of absolute independence from the Reich is increasing everywhere.

An official communique issued after the Premiers' meeting said:

Prime Ministers of States of the German Reich deliberated this morning with the Cabinet of Reich upon the question of ending passive resistance. The representatives of states, after an expose by the Chancellor, made known their opinions.

"There was complete unanimity upon the decision that the passive resistance must cease, for reasons of interior politics, and especially the country's finances. The opinion was also unanimous that it was the intention as well as the duty of the central government to end the passive resistance in a manner conformable with dignity and honor of the German people.

Take News Soberly.

The French Prime Minister and his associates in the Cabinet appear to have received the news soberly and without the thrill which it has given the French people, the authorities having long expected the German decision.

Premier Poincare, who is at his summer home in Sampigny, is in constant touch with the Foreign Office by telephone. He will return to Paris to-night.

Passing over the pending problems to the Reparations Commission would be merely a formality, because the members of the Commission can only act upon instructions for their respective Governments.

Consequently it is forecasted that Premier Poincare's first endeavour will be to arrive at an understanding with the British Government as to what shall be done with the new situation.

Premier Poincare will communicate with the British Prime Minister as soon as Berlin has taken the first direct step toward a settlement.

The French Premier's general view, it is understood, is that the Reparation Commission should avoid directions of too specific a nature to Chancellor Stresemann as to expedients to be employed in straightening out Germany's tangled finances.

The action of the German Government yesterday is not regarded here as finally clearing the situation in the Ruhr.

Resistance there will be considered as ended when Berlin withdraws all orders given functionaries and people of the Ruhr to resist the authorities of the occupation.

Communists Take 4 ....

Premier Poincare's next move, in view of Germany's economic surrender will be to ask the Inter-Allied Reparation Commission to deal with the new situation, it was indicated to-day.

As soon as the German Government officially withdraws its resistance orders, directions will be sent to General DeGoutte to make the Ruhr occupation as nearly "invisible" as possible.

NEW ALLIED PARLEY.

LONDON, September 25 (Canadian Press). — A new Allied conference, in which France, Great Britain, Italy, and Belgium will take part, is anticipated by London political writers as one result of Germany's decision to give up passive resistance in the Ruhr.

However, although speculation is already active regarding the probable action by the Allies, there is as yet nothing on which any prediction of value can be built.

It is now believed that Prime Minister Baldwin will be very cautious in his references to foreign affairs in his speech at Northampton on Thursday. He may, indeed, confine himself entirely to domestic issues.

Chancellor May Resign.

The recoil of the People's Party, of which Chancellor Stresemann is the leader, against the Government's decision to abandon the passive resistance in the Ruhr, has been so violent that several members of the Party have announced their withdrawal from its councils, says a despatch to the Daily Mail.

The despatch adds that the Chancellor will almost certainly resign, and it is not believed possible at the moment to find a successor who would be willing to give effect to the Government's decision to cease passive resistance.

Subscriber in "Canadian Grocer" Criticizes New Regulations.

In the "Canadian Grocer" for September 14th., a subscriber calls attention to some of the inconsistencies in the new law that covers egg grading regulations. He points out that in the "Class (1) Fresh" are included, under "Grade (a) Specials," eggs over 25 ozs per dozen with air cells 3-16 of an inch in depth, which 'i's all right, as the size of aircell indicates an egg up to about ten days old which can be termed "fresh."

But eggs that average under this weight per dozen, and run between 24 and 25 ozs. which "are most desirable eggs from every point of view as they fit the card division of the egg case and therefore show less breakage in transit than larger eggs," and that are really the "big run" on most egg farms may be just as fresh have as small aircells, have as clean, strong sound shells, the white may be as clear and the yolk no more visible than in the "over 25 oz." eggs, still according to regulations, they must be described and marked as "Grade (b) Extras." Further, the same name applies to eggs with aircells up to 3-8 of an inch in depth equal to 1 1-4 inch in diameter, or the size of a half dollar, which, the writer declares, is not liable to be much if at all less than a month old.

"Why compel the storekeeper to put on the basket of lovely, large fresh eggs from a neighbour's nests the same card as he must show on the eggs that have been several weeks in transit, or that have been kept by a distant farmer for his monthly visit to town, or by a speculative merchant for a rise in price Size has nothing to do with the quality of an egg, and it is not size, but freshness that the public seeks a guarantee for. Most people with 'half an eye,' let alone the customary pair, can judge size for themselves.

"The regulations contain no provision for pullet eggs of less than 20 ozs. At certain seasons, I understand adult flocks lay a larger proportion than usual of small eggs 20-20 1-2 ozs. P.D. These must, under the regulations, be marked untruthfully as "pullets." Then again, beautifully fresh eggs, 2 1-2 ozs. to 24 ozs. just out of the nest exactly right for a little child's breakfast or an invalid's "whip," or a cup of salad dressing must be described as "Grade (c) First,' in legal company with veterans whose aircells have attained the very respectable depth of half an inch. And the regulations provide that any other eggs whose shells are sound and that can legally be described as "fit for food" are to be sold as "Fresh Seconds."

"Is it fair to murder the English language in this fashion? The regulations appear complicated and involved and their significance can only be grasped after hours of study. To carry out the candling and grading with any accuracy would require skill worth at least $5 a day. A farmer's time is worth as much, but his grading will be slower and therefore more costly. But whether done by a skilled grader, or less skilled farmer or storekeeper, the cost must in the end be paid by the consumer in an increased price for the (eggs, however fractioned; while the cost of inspection, which bids fair to become a large outlay will fall also on the consumer in his capacity of taxpayer. Such is the inevitable consequence of over-control by semi-experienced officials, however zealous and trustworthy.

"Since most of the inconsistencies and hardships referred to above, arise from the attempt to grade size and quality together and as the buyer needs no guarantee of size, the plain course would seem to be to to grade for quality only, and to enact that containers be marked in accordance with the condition of the contents.

"It is not fair to criticize without suggesting a better way so I venture to offer this suggestion that we be allowed to sell eggs of a given quality in any size or all sizes, uniform or mixed and to price them per pound weight, as we do other food products.

"If any of your readers will try for themselves they will realize how difficult it is for a candler to guage accurately and quickly within 1-16 of an inch the depth of an aircell. The difference in curvature in different eggs increases the difficulty. In eggs under a month old the diameter would seem to afford a much surer and more rapid test.

"When the depth exceeds 3-8 inch (equalling by careful experiment 1 1-4 inches diameter), nature's own egg tester, the nasal organ may yield quicker results. How an egg with an aircell of this depth can be tolerated in "Class (1) Fresh," even under "Grade (c) Firsts," frankly puzzles me."

YOUNG PEOPLE HELD

which is being held in London. The A.Y.P.A., which this year comes of age, has become more thorough and definite in its church life and it is expected that this year's conference (the theme of which is "Leadership") will help those men and women who are not content to wait behind with the crowd, but who are natural leaders, to take on the responsibilities of organized leaders. We know that the organization of the A.Y.P.A. is only a means to an end as the A. Y. P. A. stands for Christ and the church, and is only an auxiliary to win young men and women for Jesus Christ.

There is a great field among men and women not connected with any branch of the church work and very often valuable leaders can be developed not only for A.Y.P.A. work, but other branches of the church activities. A branch cannot long survive the lack of a definite object of service.

Recreation which is re-creation means a building up of the tired body and mind and one's whole being cries out for it. In providing for the social life of the branch we should stress the outdoor sports and encourage all the members to play them. There is the growing tendency to sit in the grand stand and pay the other fellow to play the game. Lose if you must, but play the game and do not be content to be a grandstand critic. When the A. Y.P.A. becomes just a social club and nothing more its existence ceases. Another branch of the A.Y. P.A. activities is edification and it is well to provide a study programme which will be helpful to members of the branch and enable them to better meet their fellow citizens. Don't be like children building sand castles on the beach which a wave washes away, but provide constructive study which tends to improve the mind. Most important of all, study how to worship God more intelligently, encourage regular attendance at holy communion and at the services of the church, not dwelling so much on the showing your branch has made, but doing because you want to do so, thus obeying the Saviour's command. Remember that every person not connected with any other parish activity is a prospect for the A.Y.P. A. Make them constructive so they in their turn will contribute to the life of the church.

"Life is not a goblet to be drained, but a measure to be filled." Service to man and worship of God brings the reward of the voice of conscience (which is the voice of God) saying "well done."

Miss Herridge moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Sproule, which was seconded by Mr. Stone.

Rev. A. T. Weir, Dr. R. C. Blagrave, Rev. R. B. Grobb, Mr. Robert Stone, Miss. Blake and Mr Charles Stenner made a few brief remarks, after which the meeting was closed by the benediction, which was given by Dr. Blagrave.

A social hour was spent in the basement of the school room discussing the bountiful refreshments provided by St. John's branch. After a vote of thanks to the hosts, the various groups wended their way home, agreeing on the undoubted success of the evening.

WORLD'S SERIES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The 1923 world's series will open in the Yankee Stadium on Wednesday, October 10, it was announced to-day at a meeting of baseball officials, at which Commissioner Landis presided.

It was determined that if the New York club of the National League wins the pennant in its league that the games will alternate between the new Yankee Stadium and the Polo Grounds.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

The much-heralded "Hollywood" picture is at the Capitol Theatre, and there was a well-filled house last night to greet it. There is interest and amusement and plenty of life in the screen story of the village girl who makes her way to Hollywood in search of fame. The story is thin, and the main interest of the picture centers about the close-up portrayals of the life in their California homes and studios of most of the screen favorites. Without make-up or background or pose, they are just ordinary, everyday beings in this picture, going about the daily round. Instead of being the hero of a thrilling romance, Tom Meighen is shown buying lollipops for a crowd of children; Charlie Chaplin, bereft of his moustache and cane and baggy trousers lounges at a hotel desk, May McAvoy takes pile of mail from a letter-box, and Lila Lee, Gertrude Astor Hope Hampton and Agnes Ayres foregather in the station waiting-room for a friendly morning chat.

Angela Whitaker, the girl heroine, mingles with all these notables, and doesn't recognize them. She goes to the different Hollywood studios in search of employment and bumps into Lois Wilson, chatting with Warren Kerrigan Jack Holt passes her unnoticed, and the only screen actor she really identifies is Joe Martin, the ape, out for a constitutional? Around and about her the heroes and heroines of her dreams stand and walk and chat, affording an interested audience a unique view of their real personalities. The funny men of the silent drama, including the cross-eyed Turpin and the dignified Lloyd Hamilton, direct her to Universal City where once again she suffers refusal. In the meantime the old grandfather, who came west for his health, has broken suddenly into the movies. William DeMille, in working togs captures him as a desired 'type,' and the old gentleman has a wonderful time thereafter, golfing with Leatrice Joy and Sigrid Holmquist and T. Roy Barnes, quite ordinary-looking in sport togs, motoring with Nita Naldi and dining with Pola Negri along with William Hart and Theodore Kosloff and a score of other screen notables.

The girl encounters Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks when she returns a dress that the modiste has sent to her house by mistake, but she never arrives at the goal of her dreams even a small part being denied her. Finally, the entire family arrives and breaks into the game; the old grandmother, the stern aunt and the rube lover of the heroine, and the final scene shows them in gorgeous cars, the old lady indulging in a cigarette, while the young grand daughter now married to Lem Lefferts, the boy lover who had developed suddenly into a screen star, stays at home and minds the twins.

To 'movie' fans who wonder at times what their particular heroes and heroines do when they are not working, and just what conditions at Hollywood are like, this picture affords an admirable glimpse of real life. It is unusual and pleasant, with a light vein of humor running through the production.

The comedy, "Kick Out" is also a hilarious version of life in the movie colony. It records the adventures of a blithe young man who breaks in on working hours unannounced and gets tangled up with the studio lions, crocodiles and monkeys. This comedy is a good one, with plenty of laughs and thrills in the scenes where the big lion follows all comers and parks himself near the flustered hero.

"FINE BRITISH PICTURE" AT THE ROYAL

We have with us this week another British picture, "Dick Turpin's Ride to York," a splendid production that will meet with the approval of old and young elements—adventure, and enough mystery to keep the interest well sustained. At once let it be understood that this isn't an imitation of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood." Although the central figure is a highwayman, the tale is an entirely different one, and is no strain on the credulity. Dick Turpin isn't the jumping-jack type of hero who does impossible things. He's a rogue of course, but he's a solid, reasoning sort of fellow, and while he performs remarkable feats and is bold and fearless as well as lawless, he's very human and likeable. The high spot of the picture is his famous ride across country with the Bow Street Runners in hot pursuit, and the horse he rides shares his glory, a noble beast that's alive in every fibre. From the remarks of two girls behind us it appeared that one of them thought she was seeing John Gilpin. "No, dearie, this isn't the same fellow at all," the other assured her. "John Gilpin is the fellow whose horse ran away with him!" She was right at that.

Matheson Lang plays Turpin and is supported by a competent cast. The photography is a feast for the eye, and ought to further the mounting prestige of English films, which have been "getting better."

The England of two hundred years ago, when his deeds and-deliver hero kept the country side in a state of mingled terror and delight, as reproduced here, is an act to marvel at. The picture is rated as England's best, but one can only judge from what has been seen so far of old country photoplays. As a romantic drama of the better sort it leaves nothing to be desired in the mind of the unprejudiced observer.

Special Show For Kiddies.

A special performance for school children will be given at the Royal on Wednesday afternoon at 4.15. "Dick Turpin's Ride to York" is the special attraction. The admission price is 11c.

BIGGEST THRILL EVER SEEN, SAYS NEW YORK JOURNAL.

"That truth is more thrilling than fiction is amply proved in the new William Fox picture, "The Town That Forgot God." The biggest thrill seen on any stage at any time, in picture or out, is caused by the flood scene which is stupendous in its awfulness. More than three months were required to build this town which was then destroyed by a single explosion of the dam."— New York Evening Journal.

"The Town That Forgot God" comes to the Royal Thursday.

FRESH PEACH DESSERTS

Although fresh peaches lack the valuable minerals found in apples they have a definite place among the tonic fruits. Use them often while in season.

A delicate tartness is brought out in cooking peaches which makes them peculiarly satisfactory combined with rice or tapioca. A pudding of this sort precludes the use of potatoes in a meal. Almost every woman likes to serve a meal once in a while that doesn't necessitate the preparation of potatoes.

Peach cobbler is a simple old-time dessert economical but delicious. It should follow a light dinner or luncheon.

Peach Cobbler.

Six peaches, ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon butter. Batter — One cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons butter, water to make soft dough, 1 egg (yolk). Meringue — One egg (white), 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 dessertspoon water.

Pare and slice peaches. Put in a buttered baking dish, sprinkle with sugar, dot with butter, add four tablespoons water and simmer, covered while making the dough. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Rub in butter with tips of fingers. Lard can be used in place of butter. In this case use milk instead of water. Beat egg yolk with one-quarter cup water or milk. Cut into dry ingredients with a knife. Add more water or milk as necessary to make a soft dough.

Spread over peaches and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. Turn upside down on a deep pie or pudding baking dish, cover with meringue and brown in a hot oven. The oven should be hot enough to color the meringue in four minutes.

To make meringue beat white of egg with cold water on a platter with a wire whisk until stiff and dry. Beat in sugar. This dessert should be eaten warm.

Peach Snow Balls.

Four peaches, ¼ cup rice, 4 cups boiling salted water, 4 teaspoons red raspberry jam or preserves, sugar, butter.

Boil rice in water 20 minutes. Drain and dip in cold water. Drain. Pare peaches, cut in halves and remove stones. Fill the cavity made by the stone with jam or preserves. Cut four squares of cheese cloth, dip in hot water and spread with butter. Cover centre with a layer of rice about one-half inch thick.

Fit the peaches together, making whole peaches, roll in sugar and put in the centre of the rice. Pull up the corners of the cheese cloth and tie. Put in steamer and steam for 30 minutes. Remove from squares of cloth and serve with sugar and cream or raspberry sauce.

To make the sauce use two-thirds cup of sirup from preserves, add one-third cup water. Bring to the boiling point and stir in two teaspoons corn starch moistened with cold water. Add one teaspoon butter and cook, stirring constantly until thick.

Peach Dumplings.

One and one-half cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon lard or butter, milk or water to make a soft dough. Peaches, butter, sugar.

Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Rub in shortening with tips of fingers. Cut in liquid with knife. Turn onto a floured molding board and roll one-half inch thick. Cut with a large biscuit cutter. In the centre of each round put half a pared and stoned peach. Fill cavity with sugar and a bit of butter. Pull the edges of the dough over the peach. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. Baste with one-half cup boiling water, 1 tablespoon butter and 2 tablespoons sugar.

Peach Custard.

Four large peaches, 1 cup broken nut meats, 1½ cups boiled custard.

Pare and slice peaches and put in serving dish. Sprinkle with nuts, reserving a few for the top. Pour custard over nuts and peaches. Sprinkle with remaining nuts and put on ice to chill.

Custard.

One and ond-half cups milk, 2 eggs (yolks), 4 tablespoons sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla, 1 teaspoon flour.

Beat yolks slightly with flour, sugar and salt. Heat milk and beat into egg mixture. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and coats the spoon. Remove from heat and pour over peaches.

Peach Cup.

Four large perfectly ripe peaches, 1 pint orange ice, red raspberry sirup.

Pare peaches and cut in halves. Put a half a peach in each sherbet glass. Fill with orange ice and pour sirup over the whole.

Baked Peaches.

Pare and stone peaches. Bake and serve on rounds of plain sponge cake. The peaches will bake in 15 or 20 minutes.

CAMPBELL MORGAN

Mr. Campbell Morgan, being a public man, and a professed Bible student and preacher of the gospel, and refusing to answer the questions put to him through the columns of the Daily Examiner makes it look somewhat as if incompetence, indifference, sordid fear or some moral weakness hindered him. With all right thinking people it surely leaves him in an unenviable position.

The address also was very cheering.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Please allow me space in your paper to say that some miserably mean persons on McDonnel Street are putting out poison. I have had a valuable cat poisoned in the last week or so — a cat that scarcely ever left the premises. These parties had better be very careful in the future, as they will be punished.

A person who will deliberately come to your door and poison a neighbor's cat, is a person of a low mean disposition, and there is a law to punish them.

REPORTS FROM RHINELAND ARE VERY ALARMING

Separatists Showing Increased Activity, Looking Forward to Establishment of Republic.

SITUATION GRAVE

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—(Special.)—President Ebert to-day issued a proclamation to German people, saying that the struggle to support the financial strain of holding out in the Ruhr was too great and must be abandoned, but only without surrender of the slightest particle of German territory.

The proclamation, which is countersigned by all Cabinet Ministers, says: "It depends upon the Powers which invaded us, and their Allies, to restore peace to Germany by adhering to this conception, or by rejecting this peace, to bring about all results in relations between peoples which would proceed therefrom."

Alarming Reports.

Not the least of the German government's worries come from alarming reports from the Rhineland, where separatists are showing increasing activity. They have now created a "general directorate" which has convoked a grand rally to be held at Dueseldorf next Sunday for the purpose of proclaiming the Rhineland a republic.

The French regime is said to have agreed to place seventy railway trains at the disposal of the separatists. Secessionists have organized special police force, which is to be clothed in green uniforms, similar to those worn by the Prussian "green police."

The German press admits the gravity of the situation arising from secession sentiment and gives warning that the strength of the movement must not be under-estimated.

"Rhinelanders, be on your guard," admonishes the Cologne Gazette, in the caption of its leading editorial.

Grave Troubles.

Grave troubles are expected in Crefeld following cessation of passive resistance in the Ruhr, the Mayence correspondent of Le Journal telegraphed to-day.

A strong guard has been placed about the city hall. Groups of miners, armed with iron bars, are ravaging the countryside for food, following a lockout in the mines," the correspondent declared.

Discussed In Cabinet.

LONDON, Sept. 26.— (Canadian Press).— Germany's capitulation in Rhur and Great Britain's relationship to France on the reparation problem as modified by a recent interview between Prime Minister Baldwin and Premier Poincare in Paris, were chief topics of discussion at to-day's meeting of the British cabinet.

Mr. Baldwin acquainted his colleagues with all the facts of the much discussed Paris interview, but no hint regarding nature of conversations was allowed to escape from the cabinet council.

At one o'clock this afternoon, the ministers still in session and a group of newspapermen waited outside the old fashioned brick building at No. 10 Downing Street for some inkling as to what had transpired. There seems little likelihood that either Great Britain or France will make direct approaches to Germany in light of the changed situation in Rhineland for several weeks.

CONAN DOYLE DEALS WITH THE REPORTERS

They Are Not Men Whom He Would Care To Bamboozle.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's new book, "Our American Adventure," has a passage telling of Conan Doyle's meeting with the ship news reporters in New York. His description follows:

"And then next moment they were at close grips with me. A dozen rather keen-faced, alert young or middle-aged men, slouch-hatted, overcoated, rough and ready, had boarded our ship at the Narrows, as soon as quarantine was granted. They pinned me in a corner and were showering questions upon me. These eager men are not intruders. A private individual may resent their presence, but a man on public business has no right to do so. They are not there for their own pleasure. * * * Of course, they are human and they are out for copy. If they see a chink in your armor, they will thrust for it. * * * If you are perfectly frank, you are safe; but they are not men whom I would care to bamboozle."—The Trib.

NEW BANK RAID FAILS TO SHOW

Police in Toronto Took Elaborate Precautions But They Were Not Needed.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—Elaborate precautions were taken by the Toronto police and bank officials this morning, to safeguard against a repitition of the hold-up of bank messengers which occurred on July 24.

A warning had been sent out, according to local newspaper, that an attempt similar to the first one would be made to-day. Constables were placed at corners along the route taken by messengers, which was the one followed since the hold-up, along Yonge and King streets. In addition there were five constables at the clearing house and a mounted policeman followed the messengers when they came out. These policemen were in addition to the regular traffic men. Ten banks which were represented by messengers had a dozen guards at the clearing house, and there were altogether 26 messengers. Each bank also had guards at its doors.

The messengers came out of the clearing house in a body, and with the exception of two parties got into their cars, lined up at the sidewalk.

The parties which went on foot were made up of two messengers, a guard and two constables. The auto parties were composed of at least five messengers and guards. There was no sign of any trouble, however.

COVERING MOVEMENT IN INDUSTRIALS

Business News Caused an Excellent Response on Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26. — (United Press).—Stocks made an excellent response to the encouraging character of the business news overnight. The announcement was given out that the United States steel bookings in the first twenty-one days of September averages 31,491 tons daily, against 15,268 for the corresponding period of August.

This convincing demonstration that the fall demand was setting in satisfactorily brought a covering movement into the industrial group, causing a full point gain in American Can, and fractional advances in Baldwin Steel, American Locomotive and other speculative favorites.

The early gains were not sustained and renewed heaviness developed before the end of the first hour. Studebaker was depressed to a further new low for the year at 96¼ on President Erskine's statement that the company's capacity operations for the first nine months would be reduced somewhat in the last quarter because of the natural seasonal decline in the auto business. This statement was looked upon in bearish circles as confirmation of reports of a decreased demand in the motor field, and stocks of other representative producers were subjected to pressure. Tires were also freely offered. Kelly Springfield dropping to a new low for the week's movement at 26.

American Can showed a better tone, following its drop of nearly four points in the previous session, after the announcement that only the regular dividend was declared. Well-informed interests are not looking for an extra at this time, but they intimate a special disbursement may be authorized in December.

Corn products directors meet this week, and no extra dividend is anticipated. An extra cash dividend, it is said, will be declared in December.

Iron trade reviews says a slight quickening of interest in steel is shown this week, but in the main conditions remain unchanged as buyers pursue a waiting policy.

MEETING OF CARPENTERS LOCAL 219, LABOR HALL, ON THURSDAY, SEPT. 27, at 8 P. M.

WILL APPLY FOR REDUCED RATES LOCAL RAILWAY

Four Blue Tickets For 25c and Five Yellow Ones for 25c Committee's Objective.

ELECTRIC CARS

Council's Railways Committee last night decided to recommend that Council further urge Sir Henry Thornton that a gasoline-electric car service be established by the C.N.R. in this district; also to press the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario for reduced street railway rates when tickets are sold in strips. Improvements at Riverside Park and securing expert advice regarding the prevention of drowning accidents were among other items on a somewhat lengthy business slate disposed of in preparation for Monday's Council meeting.

Electric Cars.

Regarding gasoline-electric cars for Peterboro district, Sir Henry Thornton wrote that their operation would not be economical nor result in better service for patrons than they are already receiving from steam cars. The extension of the Toronto and Eastern electric line from Bowmanville to Peterboro, he said, was under consideration.

The Canadian National also intimated that if their pullman car service from Peterboro to Montreal is to be continued, the company shall expect some better division of passenger traffic, as up to the present time that service has not been a paying proposition.

Talking to these communications, Ald. Phelan thought the pullman car left too early in the evening — 9 o'clock—to convenience the average traveller to Montreal; and Chairman Ald. Turner stressed that an electric car service in this district is urged, not so much for present-day needs as to provide for future business. Ald. Phelan also pointed out that the carrying of motor cars on the C.N.R. ferry across the lake to and from Cobourg would mean a big thing for Peterboro, especially during the summer months.

Ald. Turner emphasized the need of an electric service from here to Port Hope, for connection with the main line, together with, perhaps, one or two cars running on Sundays. And he agreed with Ald. Meyers that the pullman car connection for Montreal had not been brought sufficiently before the public. Ald. Meyers adding that it takes time to work up any new business, railway or otherwise.

On motion by the Mayor and Ald. Phelan, the committee will recommend Council to again press Sir Henry Thornton for the operation of a gasoline-electric service in this district, especially between Peterboro and Port Hope, not so much for present accommodation as to take care of future business. And, further, to reiterate the need for passenger accommodation at Auburn and increased local freight shed convenience. Also, that the C.N.R.'s Lake Ontario ferries carry motor cars.

Cheaper Fares.

Raising the question of street railway fares, Ald. Turner said the public are dissatisfied with the present flat rate of seven cents, and complain that they are entitled to a reduction when buying tickets. Personally, he agreed with the public, and believed that some little concession would increase travel.

On motion by Ald. Stocker and Phelan, the Hydro-Electric Commission will be asked to make the concession of at least four blue tickets for 25c and five limited-hour tickets for 25c, the committee believing traffic will be increased by the change.

Improve Park.

Ald. Turner here advanced that now is the time to put Riverside Park in improved shape for next year's sport; and Ald. Maher and Fife moved that the matter of putting the north-east corner of the park in better condition be left with the chairman of this committee and the chairman of the Board of Works, with power to act. Carried.

On motion by Ald. Phelan and Stocker, the chairman was instructed to report on repairing and keeping in better condition the monument in Central Park.

Water Is Stale.

Discussing bathing beaches, Ald. Fife contended that the water at Lake Street was decidedly unfit for bathing in; and that is a matter which will have to be gone thoroughly into before next summer. The alderman qualified the water at this point as "stale."

Not a Competitor.

Regarding the Hydro-Electric Commission's objection to the operation of Mein's "tally-oh" 'bus, on motion by Ald. Maher and Morrison, the Commission will be informed that said 'bus is not operating in opposition to the street railway, but running from East City, which the railway does not serve, and to outside districts.

Safety First.

That it would be advisable to look into the Ontario Safety League's proposition for expert advice regarding prevention of drowning accidents, safety appliances, rescue facilities, modern precautions and regulations, was the committee's opinion; and, on motion by Ald. Morrison and Maher, the league will be asked what expense securing such advice and information will entail.

There were present Chairman Ald. Mel. Turner, Mayor Taylor, Ald. Phelan, Meyers, Maher, Morrison, stocker and Fife.

MAY HAVE YOUR WOOD MEASURED LOCAL MARKET

Council's Property Com. Decide This is Market Clerk's Duty When Requested By Purchaser.

OTHER BUSINESS

Discussion by Council's property committee, last night, elicited the information that when buying wood on the market, should a purchaser desire to have the load measured, it is the market clerk's duty to do so.

Chairman Ald. Malcolm McIntyre was also authorized to purchase a pair of table scales of 24 pounds capacity, at a cost of about $15, for use in the market hall. The scales are the product of B. S. & M. Limited, Hamilton, and accuracy is guaranteed. They are of just a nice size for weighing poultry, it was emphasized by some of the Aldermen.

Ald. Maher introduced the subject of wood measuring, contending that each load offered on the market for sale should be measured and its measurement plainly marked in protection of the public. A cord of wood comprises 128 cubic feet, but farmers habitually sell their wood by the load and not the cord. Ald. Maher pointed out that under the act the only wood permitted to be sold by the load is mill ends, buttings and edgings—not cordwood.

Ald. Fife replied that market clerk, Bullied, should not be expected to measure wood, unless it is conveniently piled for so doing.

Ald. Morrison wanted to know what course should be pursued when wood is sold, say in stove lengths, for a cord of four foot wood will not measure 128 cubic feet when cut.

Someone here suggested to throw in the sawdust.

Ald. Crowe here said Market Clerk Bullied is willing to measure all wood properly piled on a load.

Ald. Morrison thought Bullied was losing money now without undertaking to measure wood, which cannot be done by a boy. Then, in his opinion, measurement tickets would be needed as chalking on loads is not satisfactory. However, committee held that the chalking process obtains elsewhere to general satisfaction.

Ald. McIntyre did not seem to approve of farmers selling wood by the load of unknown measurement, while woodyards sell by the cord.

Ald. Fife proposed that the market clerk measure all wood when requested to do so and this was generally acquiesced in.

Sanitary Conveniences

The local board of health recommended installation by the city of sanitary conveniences in W. J. Jamieson's house, 211 Prince Street, cost of same to be paid for in equal yearly instalments extending over five years, at 6 per cent interest.

The chairman was authorized to have title investigated, and if satisfactory to authorize the work.

New Oil Warehouse

F. W. Case, for McColl Bros., Limited, Oil Company, Toronto, sought authority to erect a 30 x 40 feet warehouse and three 15,000 gallon storage tanks for gasoline, coal oil, etc., in East City. This site is situated on Hunter street, just opposite the Canadian Oil Co.'s premises.

On motion by Ald. Morrison and Fife, committee will recommend this request to Council Monday night.

Inspector A. G. Metheral's august report of inspections of plumbing was received as satisfactory.

There were present Chairman Ald. Malcolm McIntyre, Mayor W. H. Taylor, Aldermen J. O. Fife, Joseph Crowe, R. Morrison and Nagle Phelan.

LABOR SECTIONS AND THE TREATY OF PEACE

Conference at Ottawa with Hon. James Murdock as Chairman.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.— (Canadian Press).—The conference of representatives of the Dominion and Provincial governments, which opened yesterday for the consideration of the obligations of Canada arising under the Labor sections of the treaty of peace, was continued during the afternoon under the chairmanship of Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labour.

Consideration was given to the principle enunciated in the peace treaty for the avoidance of Labor unrest and to the question of legislative authority as between the Dominion parliament and the provincial legislatures todeal with the various proposals which have eminated from the international labour conference of the league of nations in the form of draft conventions and recommendations. Under the terms of the peace treaties representation was given in the international labor conference to the most representative organizations of Canadian employers and workers and delegates have attended the annual conferences since 1919 on behalf of the Canadian manufacturer' Association and the trades and labour congress of Canada, respecitvely.

YOUNG PEOPLE QUITTING CULT

Membership Drops From 1,000 to 700 Since State Began Attack on "King Ben."

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Sept 26.—Although a nation-wide search is being made for Benjamin Purnell, head of the House of David, and legal action has been started to break up the colony itself, the Benton Harbor holdings continue to return a neat income to members of the cult.

The colony this summer has been reaping the best harvest since it was established. Sunday, "Eden Springs," the House of David amusement park, was crowded with sightseers, some of whom had come miles for a glimpse of the grounds and buildings where King Benjamin, self-styled "Seventh Messenger," held sway until the state investigation forced him into hiding. Shiloh Benjamin's home, and the headquarters of the cult, and the scene of Benjamin's alleged misconduct with members of his cult, is not open to the public, but Eden Springs, where a charge is made for all forms of entertainment on Sundays and holidays all summer has had record crowds.

Despite the growing income of the colony, it is the general belief in Benton Harbor that members of the cult are leaving in increasing numbers. One of the older members admitted to-day that "quite a number" have broken away this year.

Young Members Leaving

"They were nearly all young folks," he said. "People who came here with the intention of leaving after a while." He added that the attacks on Purnell and Shiloh have made recruiting for the colony more difficult .The colony, according to estimates of members, now numbers about 700. Before the charges of misconduct on the part of Purnell and others were launched, the membership was said to be about 1,000.

Coy Purnell 40-year-old son of Benjamin, is virtually under guard. Although six years ago Coy disclaimed the faith his father preached, he is never allowed to get out of sight or ear-shot of members of the cult, who while they ostensibly accompany to provide him with "companionship and medical care," as one put it, seem nevertheless to keep him under relentless surveillance.

Coy's hut sets back some 50 feet from the road—La Salle avenue—in the center of a plot of land about half an acre in area. Surrounding it is a high wire fence. The hut, much like a box car in shape, but considerably smaller, is without opening of any kind, except a vine-porticoed door in the center.

Son Would Like to Talk

Coy Purnell neatly dressed in a dark blue suit, tan shoes and cap, stepped out of the hut for a few moments Sunday afternoon. He is of medium height, slim and of a nervous temperament. Those who have seen both say he resembles his father. To a reporter he returned a pleasant how-do-you-do. When he was told a few momenfs private conversation were wanted with him, he cast a furtive glance toward the door.

"I would like to talk," he said, "but—"

He was interrupted by the appearance in the doorway of a tall, heavily built Davidite.

"Coy has nothing to say," the newcomer asserted. Then, to Coy, "You had better go inside.'

Reluctantly, but with an obedient glance at the tall man, Coy went into the hut.

"I am Coy's doctor," the Davidite said, "what do you want?"

Doctor Squelches Coy

After being told an interview was wanted with Coy, the Davidite, who said he was Dr. Victor F. Larson, formerly of 15 Willis avenue east, Detroit, declared that his charge was in no condition to talk, and that it pained him particularly to discuss his father.

Larson, up to the time he joined the colony six years ago, was a physical culturist in Detroit.

The Davidite had no sooner stepped around the corner of the shack when Coy came out.

"Now, what was it you wanted " he asked.

"Your father provides for you here?"

"Yes, everything."

"When did you last hear from him?"

"The other——"

"Coy!"

It was Larson. Coy put his hand to his lips and hurried into the shack.

Larson was white with anger.

"I told you not ta talk to him," he said. "Now get out."

TAX RELIEF TO CAN. WOOLLENS NOT APPROVED

Council's Manufacturers' Com. Cannot See Way Clear To Recommend Company's Request.

SET PRECEDENT

With reference to the application of the Canadian Woollens, Limited, for a further concession in taxes, in view of the fact that there is no reason given for the request, that would not apply to other manufacturing industries, and that to grant the request would form a precedent that could not be followed, this committee cannot see its way clear to recommend that the request be granted.

The foregoing is a resolution passed by Council's Manufacturers' Committee last night, after debating the Canadian Woollen's application for a fixed assessment on the whole of their property.

This action will be reported to Council, Monday evening, when the question may be opened up again. In all cases where fixed assessment is granted, the proposition must be first approved of by the people at the polls.

The resolution was fathered by Ald. Maher, seconded by the Mayor, both of whom spoke strongly in opposition to the company's request.

Talking to the request, his Worship remarked that were Council to relieve all industries by a fixed assessment the taxes thus lost would have to be made good by the ratepayers generally. Canadian Woollens, he pointed out, are already enjoying fixed assessment on their new spinning mill.

Exemptions Elsewhere

Registering respectful disapproval of any further concession to the firm in question, Ald. Maher contended that the fixed assessment granted the De Laval Co. last year cost the ratepayers some $2,900 in added taxes, but the industry erected a new building for expansion. Referring to tax concessions extended to local industries, Ald. Maher gave comparative figures of exemptions enjoyed in other cities in Peterborough's class. Exemptions to industries here in 1922, he said, amounted to $4,030,515, in Brantford and Kitchener there were none, in St. Catharines exemptions totalled $230,900, in Guelph $590,000, Stratford $49,200, St. Thomas $143,500, and in Belleville $273,000. He urged that Peterborough should weigh carefully all further requests for exemptions.

Feeling inclined to grant certain concessions to Canadian Woollens, Ald. Morrison pointed out that in the case of the De Laval Co. and other industries the people themselves voted fixed assessment, and any measure of relief proposed now would have to go to the ratepayers.

Up Against It!

Ald. Meyers remarked that all big industries were more or less up against it this year, and wanted to know if the request before Council was granted, where the matter would end. He did not like setting such a precedent of relief. And in this sentiment Ald. Meyers concurred.

Not Done Badly.

Ald. Maher did not think the Woollen industry had done badly the last few years, or that the 2½ p.c. change in tariff had affected them to any great extent. The smaller ratepayers, he asserted, are also laboring to make ends meet this year. In conclusion, Ald. Maher, referring to extension of fixed assessment to the C. G. E. when they erected new, large buildings, stated that shortly after getting concessions from the city they removed one of their best departments to Toronto. And to-day this city is in no fit condition, financially, to afford industrial relief from taxation.

According to a statement prepared of assessment, and taxes paid, by the Canadian Woollens on their plants, by fixed assessment on the new buildings, the company saves $1,339.29 in taxes.

In asking for tax concession on the whole of their buildings, the company do not propose building expansion.

There were present, Chairman Ald. Meyers, Mayor Taylor, Ald. McIntyre, Turner, Fife, Morrison and Maher.

Three Men Dead in Hydroplane Crash

QUEBEC, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Three men were killed in a hydroplane crash at Roberval, Que., this morning. Their names are Alphonse Landry, observer, Kamouraska, B. de Salaberry, pilot, Ottawa, and E. Deguise surveyor residence unknown.

The tragedy occurred about eight o'clock and was witnessed by a number of people around the hydroplane station at Roberval. Just how the accident happened has not yet been established, but spectators were horrified to see the plane nose dive towards Lake St. John. When rescuers arrived on the scene they found the plane fifteen feet under the water. Owing to tangled wreckage it was impossible to retrieve bodies immediately and they were still emersed at noon despite the efforts of rescue party, who were operating from fleet of small boats.

FIFTY YEARS MARRIED LIFE

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Weese Celebrate Golden Anniversary of Their Wedding Day.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Weese, 477 McDonnel Street, yesterday celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding day. They were married fifty years ago in Seymour, Prince Edward County, in which district both were born, living for about nine years thereafter in Millbrook, two years in Toronto, and for the last thirty-nine years in Peterborough, where Mr. Weese was employed for twenty-four years with the William Hamilton Company, and for twelve years on the Canal. Mr. Weese is seventy-three years of age, and his wife is seventy. Both are members of the Free Methodist Church. Mr. Weese walks the three miles to his work and back every day.

Of twelve children born to Mr. and Mrs. Weese, eight are living, and fifteen grandchildren. Two sons, Walter of Detroit and George of Winnipeg, and one daughter, Mrs. George Foebner of Cleveland, were absent from yesterday's gathering, which took place at 477 McDonnel Street, where Mr. and Mrs. Weese have lived for the past twenty-three years. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Rosentreter, of Rochester, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cox, of Rochester, N.Y., both ladies daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Weese, and three sons, with their wives; Will Weese, Sr., of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Weese, and Mr. and Mrs. Bryden Weese of Peterboro; also Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Weese of Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. R. Sewell of Rochester, grandson and grand-daughter respectively, and children of the various families: Will Weese, Jr., of Hamilton; Harold Rosentreter, of Rochester; George Weese, Wilfred, Florence, Olive, Dorothy and Donald Weese, of Peterboro.

The table, decorated with asters and zinnias, was headed with a three-tiered bride cake. During the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Weese were presented with gold pieces by their children.

FIELDING IS WELL PLEASED WITH LOAN

Proves the Faith of Canadians in Their Own Country.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.— (Canadian Press.)—Right Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance and Acting Premier of Canada in a statement made public last night, expresses satisfaction at the news of the success which promises to attend the issue of the new Canadian government refunding loan. The Canadian people have always responded to every call made upon them for subscriptions to the government loans. The government are now offering an issue of bonds under conditions which permit investors to obtain securities backed by the entire resources of the Dominion, yielding an income return which places them in a class by themselves among bonds of stable countries.

"The subscribers will give the Dominion the deserved financial support and at the same time make a profitable investment. I cordially recommend to the public the offering of the purchasing syndicate with full confidence that the response will once more prove the faith of Canadians in their own country."

GOD GIVES ALL THE CAPACITY OF TRUE LOVE

Abusing that Gift Results, As In Olden Days In Abomination to the Lord.

REV. F. H. HARTLEY

At the public meeting held last night in All Saints' Church, in connection with the meeting of the Rural Deanery of Peterborough, Rev. F. H. Hartley, rector of St. Mathias church, Toronto, was the preacher. Taking his text from Genesis, 5:24; "And Enoch walked with God; and he was not; for God took him," and from Genesis 6: 8 and 9; "But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God," Rev. Mr. Hartley spoke of the manner of life in the olden days, when a super-abundance of all good things was provided for the sons of men, when the descendants of Cain, growing without knowledge of God, were called the sons of men, and the descendants of Seth, God-fearing, were called the sons of God, when the sons of Laban turned their hands to the herding of their flocks and the making of sweet musical instruments to beguile the time, and when Tubal-Cain lent his wits to the fashioning of weapons of warfare, when the sons of the righteous strove with the sons of the irreligous.

"And the sons of Seth married the daughters of Cain, and the result was worse than in the beginning. Do not three-quarters of the troubles of man kind in the present day come from a wrong idea of the relations between man and women. God has given to everyone the capacity of true love, and when this capacity is abused, it results, as in those olden days, in an abomination in the sight of the Lord. Holy matrimony, one of the most important steps which a man or a woman can take, is made the subject of obscene jokes, of frivolous and wicked conversation."

Walking With God

"What was this walking with God in the two cases? The three-fold purpose for which God made man is to love Him, and to worship Him, and to serve Him, and walking with God means just that. Now, as in those days it means that the man who walks with God will be ready to sacrifice human pleasure, for the far greater pleasures of the spiritual life. When anything happens to sever this relationship with God, there is a sense of loneliness, if sin mars the soul, it knows no peace until it has made friends again with its Creator. Noah walked with God. When he was seen making the Ark, his companions laughed and ridiculed him. Down through the ages we have examples of the two frames of mind; the religious and the irreligious. God has placed in this world everything needed for man's welfare and has told him to till the earth and to find out its secrets. There are in the world three classes of people; those who know God and sympathize with His plans, those who do not know God, but would be glad to serve Him if they could and the proud arrogant self-sufficient type of person, full of worldly wisdom who leave God, no place in their lives."

The Personal Devil

"Lucifer was cast down from heaven because he wanted to cut Almighty God from His throne and rule there instead of Him. When Jesus came into the world the same enemy of souls tried unceasingly to frustrate all His designs. It was the devil that instigated the Jews to crucify Jesus and put Him to death. He is the great enemy of souls. I know there are people who declare that there is no devil, but I believe in him. The same devil that persecuted Christ and dogged His footsteps and twisted His words is alive in the world to-day. But Christ came down on this great adventure to the earth. He was the magnet which was to lift souls to heaven. He said "But I, if I be lifted up, I will draw all things unto Me." He left His commands for us and dear brethren, He wants us to share in this great adventure and to win souls for Him and his cause. The condition of the world to-day is almost identical with the condition of affairs before the Flood. There is a godless tone of mind, not necessarily against God, but without God. Every man is concerned mainly with the idea to "make a living first." Men are using every thing that God gives them upon their own pleasure and comfort.

Leave God Out

"Did you ever hear of any body of men gathered together for the consideration of grave problems of everyday life speaking of God? Did you ever hear of politicans or statesmen after the war giving thanks to

FAIR TEST OF ALBERTA COAL

Peterborough Consumers Have Already Ordered Four Hundred Tons.

Twenty-three carloads, or approximately 800 tons is Peterboro's apportionment of the new allotment of 10,000 tons of Alberta coal which is being shipped in to Ontario from the West at the special freight rate of $7 per ton, of the 800 tons in the hands of a local distributor, about half has already been ordered, proving the popular desire to give this product a fair test.

A folder entitled "Coal Truth," whose cover bears the imprint of a sizable chunk of coal labelled "Stored Alberta Sunshine," and which is issued "With the compliments of the Province of Alberta," explains at some length the differing properties of anthracite and bituminous coal, as follows:

It has been established by Custom in this country to call anthracite hard coal, on account of the fact that it is hard in structure.

Then, also by custom, any coal which was not anthracite hard coal was named soft coal.

Custom established the hard coal for domestic heating and soft coal for steam and other purposes.

Hard coal contains very little combustible gas, or oily volatile, and is composed of almost entirely carbon and ash. The heat value varies with the quantity of ash which it contains. In burning hard coal in the common type of domestic heating equipment, practically all the heat is obtained in the house is obtained by the heat rays radiated off the hot fuel.

In the hot fuel bed the carbon is changed by the intense heat from a solid to a gas. This gas, as it leaves the fire, is transparent and contains half the heat value of the coal. The gas burns with a blue flame. But, as it requires that the gas be brought to a very high temperature to ignite, it is only when the furnace is operating at a very high rating that this gas will be burned. Consequently the waste or heat loss must of necessity be high. Scientific experiments show the loss to be between 55 and 75 per cent.

Also note, that hard coal must be made red hot before it will begin to change from a solid to a gas, so that heat will be obtained from it. This accounts for the fact that with a thin fire you must have a heavy draft in order to keep it alight. When you have a low draft you must have a thick fuel bed so that each piece will help to keep the next piece warm.

If in either of the above cases you reduce the draft low enough, the coal cools off and the fire goes out, resulting in good fuel wasted in the ash pit.

Steam soft coals have in addition to their carbon content, a considerable proportion of oily matter which is driven out of the fuel in the form of a gas before the coal becomes hot enough for the carbon to burn. If this oily matter is driven out slowly as in the domestic equipment) it will burn with a short white flame having a smoky tip which, if allowed to come into contact with the heating surfaces, will form soot and tar.

When the oily matter has been driven out, the same draft conditions as with hard coal are required. If the draft is reduced low enough, the coke will die out and unburned cinders will be the result in the ashes and waste of fuel.

Although these steam soft coals are higher in heat value than hard coal, it requires very high draft, a continual variation of the regulation of the dampers, and firing at very frequent intervals in order to obtain this increased heat value.

To all intents this is practically an impossible requiremnt for the house holder, and proves that when considering the heat value of a coal, that it is not the amount of heat units or B.T.U.'s it contains that is of value to the user but it is what he gets out of it.

Consider the B.T.U.'s in the coal as the "eggs," the "bugs" which you hatch in your equipment as your 'chickens'; your furnace as the incubator', and that some eggs are more easily "hatched" than others.

Alberta is fortunate in having coal which contains "eggs" which are more easily "hatched" than those in other coals, particularly under the conditions which apply to domestic heating. They are not "hard coals" nor "hard to ignite." As they are different to "steam soft coal" in characteristics, and the word "soft," having no intelligent meaning, they have been classed as "domestic coals." There is no country in the world that has such an abundance of similar coals.

The Alberta Government, realizing that there is an enormous waste of the world's fuel resources and the individual's money in the lack of education provided to train the individual in the proper method of extracting the greatest amount of heat from coal, realizing also that as the average householder uses no skill in firing, (particularly as with hard coal the waste can not be seen in the invisible gases), and that the Alberta Domestic Coal is different in that the color of the gas or smoke could be seen, it was necessary to educate the user when making the change over particularly so if the same draft was used as with hard coal that waste and money loss would be the result.

The Alberta Domestic Coals differ to both hard and steam soft coal in that they are free burning, meaning that they ignite easily and continue to burn under very low draft. If too much draft is applied they are very "fast." Owing to this difference and in order to distinguish them from other coals in the Province and elsewhere they have been dismissed as "Domestic Coals."

In districts where they have become the Standard fuel it is the general practice to place them in the fire in such a manner that the combustible gaseous matter is driven out slowly, so that they do their half of the heating. When these gases are burned out the red hot coke remains to do its half of the heating. This coke differs from the red coke of hard coal or steam soft coal in that it will not dig out. It does not cake into a mass nor do the ashes contain good fuel.

As it requires very low draft it has also become the general practice to place a 25 cent shut-off damper in the smoke pipe between the check and the furnace. If this is not in place it requires more skill in handling the fire during extremely cold weather.

As the coal is so free burning or "fast" the grates must not be shaken vigorously. Allow some ash to remain on the grate as a further check to prevent the fuel from burning too quickly.

On account of the fact that the coal does not coke nor pack, an 8 to 12 hour supply may be put on at one firing and left for a long period without attention.

As the gases are ignited at such a low temperature, more heat is obtained from a given weight of coal than would be the case with a fuel which required a high temperature to ignite the gas, thus permitting a higher efficiency than with other coals. They also have the advantage that an intense fire may be obtained from a cold heater in a few minutes.

It has been established to the satisfaction of the household user in the West by demonstration in his own equipment, without any change to the equipment that the Alberta Domestic Coals are more economical and more suitable for the existing types of furnace installations than any other coals.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT SUPPORTED BY MOST POLITICAL PARTIES

Expected to Carry the Majority in Reichstag When Ruhr Policy Is Formally Declared on Thursday.

PREMIERS AGREE.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Support for Chancellor Stresemann in his efforts to bring about a speedy termination of the Ruhr and Rhineland conflict has sufficiently crystallized to warrant the prediction that the Government will command more than a comfortable majority in approval of its formal declaration to the Reichstag Thursday. So far the Government has been vouchsafed the support of the Ruhr and the Rhineland, as voiced by its authorized spokesman at Monday's prolonged conference, support which, it is emphasized, adequately reflects the immediate sentiment of the peoples of the occupied areas.

Conference Representative.

The charge that this conference was not representative is countered by the Government with the statement that the men whom the Chancellor summoned to Berlin yesterday constituted the same group as recommended resistance to Chancellor Cuno.

The Chancellor's conference today with the Premiers of the Federated States and members of the Federal Council was also in complete accord with the Cabinet's procedure even the redoubtable Dr. Von Knilling admitting the inevitable necessity of scrapping resistance in the face of overwhelming financial, economic and social odds. The Bavarian Premier, proved surprisingly docile.

Points of Honour.

After conferring with the visiting Premiers, the Chancellor received delegations representing the Reichstag parties, of which the German Nationals alone assume an oppositional atitude. The reactionaries demanded nothing short of an ultimatum to France and a breach of relations unless the occupying powers immediately conceded the points of honor which Stresemann sought to make prior condition to his surrender of passive resistance.

The United Socialists, Clericals, Democrats and the Chancellor's own party, the German People's Party, sanctioned the Government's action, and while there was scattering opposition, this was viewed as being prompted chiefly by reasons or personal prestige.

Bavarian Attitude.

Active opposition from the Bavarian People's Party, which nominally votes with the Clericals, is not anticipated and if the Bavarians conclude to withould their support in the Reichstag, it is believed their opposition will be of a negative character.

Chancellor Stresemann's most convincing argument throughout his extended conversations during the past 48 hours proved to be the official admission that passive resistance had been costing Germany eight quadrillion marks weekly towards th end. The mention of this promptly mellowed the wavering doubters, but the reactionaries preferred to make an issue of the nation's "honor and dignity."

Empty Safes Fool Bandits

SASKATOON, Sask., September 26 (Canadian Press). — To guard against a recurrence of the huge loss suffered by farmers through a series of burglaries last fall, safes in the stores and elevators at Mennon, Sask., have been emptied of their contents, and farmers are now obliged to cash all grain cheques at the bank.

Mennon farmers are threshing big crops. Had wheat been a dollar a bushel many claim they would have been able to discharge all their financial obligations this fall.

BELGIANS WIN BALLOON RACE

One Bag Covered 500 Miles, Other Missing — Snow Dropped Frenchman.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press)—Belgium appears to have won the International Balloon Race for the Gordon Bennett Cup again this year, either with DeMuyter, the landing of whose balloon Belgic at one o'clock Monday about the center of Sweden, gives him a distance of about 500 miles, or with Veenstra, piloting the Prince Leopold, whose fate at the moment is still unknown.

DeMuyter's distance last year, when he won the trophy, was 875 miles, and his time then was 23 hours, as compared with 21 hours this year.

The tragic race which started Sunday from the broad plain of Solbosch, outside of Brussels, caused the death of five pilots or aides, the grave injury of one, and less serious injuries to four others, the destruction of several of the balloons and the fall of two of them into the sea—all of which may lead to the race rules being changed for future contests.

Dubois, who had a miraculous escape when the French balloon Savoie fell, when the snow collected on it, wants the race in June or July. Others are strongly of the opinion that a more favorable season of the year for the contest would mean less danger of the lives of the contestants.

President Jacobs of the Belgian Aero Club is against changing the regulations so far as concerns postponing the start. The date was chosen, he says, because cyclonic conditions existed which were necessary for distance and desired by the pilots; anti-cyclonic conditions would give no interesting results. The equinotial period was chosen because then the ruling winds in Belgium carry the balloons toward Central and Southern Europe, not towards England and the ocean. The Gordon Bennett Cup, he added, was always competed for at this time of the year.

THRESHING FIRE DESTROYED BARN

Contents Complete Loss With New Threshing Engine.

LINDSAY, Sept. 26.—Another serious fire during threshing operations has occurred in Victoria County. A few days ago the fine, large, well equipped barn on the farm of Mr. J. J. McFadden, of Portage Road, was totally destroyed together with contents. A hog pen adjoining was also burned, together with a new threshing machine, the property of Mr. Roy Teals. The house and driving shed was saved after a hard fight.

REVISE OPINIONS.

MOONBEAM, Ont., Sept. 25.—A wire from Moonbeam delayed in transmission, says that the Lieutenant-Governor and the Premier have not yet arrived from Moose Factory.

Some of the party came out ahead of the others yesterday by aeroplane and before leaving for home said that the journey to Be Bay had been accomplished safely but that the portaging and the rapids had proved strenuous work. Opportunities were availed of to test the accuracy of various reports about the resources of the country by personal observation in the spot the railway right of way the Hollinger development work.

The potential water powers at Lobstick Burntwood, the great cataract, the Otter Sextant and Coral Rapids were examined and considerable time given to the study of the official plans and reports as to the power capacity on the great waterways. Forest resources were observed and the extent of the wide areas of coastal plane were to some extent visualized. It is possible that as a result some accepted opinions will have to be revised.

One result of the trip has been a fuller realization that heretofore of the difficulties of communication as at present within the territory travelled at Moose Factory. A popular demonstration was waiting the visitors. The party was received with due formalities, cannons were fired, complimentary addresses were presented and a holiday had been declared. In the evening divine service was held, at which Dr. Cody preached at an Indian fete of honour. Later on the Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. Ferguson and Canon Cody were made Chiefs of the Cree tribe. Next day flying visits were made out into James Bay and later on the exports and imports of the port were furnished to show that a valuable trade existed with possibilities of expansion were facilities provided. The fishery resources received special attention and on this subject it is likely more will be heard in the near future. As a result of the visit, many suggestions were made to Mr. Ferguson as to meeting the needs of the district, especially in the matter of education, health, improved communication and trade, as to which he expressed sympathy and promised consideration. A different route has been taken on the outcoming journey which is being taken by way of the Mattagami river and its tributaries.

CELEBRATED THEIR SILVER WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. L. Clancey of Otonabee at Home to Friends.

A most pleasing and sociable event took place at the home of Mr. Leonard Clancey, Otonabee on Thursday Sept. 13, when over one hundred invited guests assembled. The occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Clancey's wedding.

Sumptuous was the wedding dinner, which was served at five o'clock to their many old acquaintances, friends and neighbors from far and near.

Mrs. W. J. Houlihan, Mrs. F. Crowley and Mrs. J. Crowley presided over the prettily decorated tables which were centered with large baskets of asters and sweet-peas. The ladies who assisted in serving were Misses L. Fitzgerald, E. Clancey, E. O'Connor, E. Jackson and H. Slattery.

The respective speakers of the evening were Rev. Dean McColl, Rev. Fathers, O'Brien, McAuley, and Butler and Messrs. J. Smithson and T. Weir all paying beautiful tributes to both Mr. and Mrs. Clancey and speaking eloquently of their sterling qualities, their charity and kindness to their neighbors, their willingness ever and always to help those in need. Rev. Dean McColl also referred to the "youth" Mr. and Mrs. Clancey retain although they are the proud parents of eleven children, ten sons and one daughter. Still they are youthful and young enough to act as companions to their family as well as father and mother.

Music was furnished by Mrs. D. Crough, Ennismore, and Mr. E. Kelly, Oshawa. Rev. Father McAuley entertained in his usual good style with a number of his selected songs.

FRANCE REASONABLE IF GERMAN HEART HAS REALLY BEEN CHANGED

Prepared to Remove Iron Fist and Leave Industry in Occupied Territory to the Germans Themselves

PARIS IS ANXIOUS.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press).—The political situation in Germany as the aftermath of the decision to abandon the passive resistance in the Ruhr is being watched by the French Government with some anxiety in view of the possibilities of a Nationalist movement, such as one tending to separate Bavaria from the Reich, the outbreak of mild Bolshevism in Prussia, and fresh impetus to the Separatist movement in the Rhineland. Should serious disturbances of any sort arise in the rest of Germany, it is thought they would most certainly have the result of increasing the number of Rhinelanders desiring to assure continuation of their tranquility by separation.

The Allied troops, it is asserted in official circles, will not be allowed to take sides in any conflict, as in the absence of other military force responsibility rests upon them for the maintenance of order in the occupied territory. There is good reason for the conclusion that the French attribute little importance to the Separatist movement thus far, but that will not intervene to prevent the inhabitants from taking any action they see fit, so long as order is not disturbed.

Require New Regime.

In the event the cessation of passive resistance is not attended by violent outbreaks, the Allies will, it is assumed here, be faced at once with the necessity of providing for a new regime of occupation. The hypothesis is that the industrial leaders of the Ruhr, freed from the restrictive decrees of the Berlin Government, will repeat the promises made after the beginning of the occupation, to pay the coal tax demanded by the occupation authorities and to keep with them.

It is anticipated that the German Government, pending final settlement of the new terms for the payment of reparations, will ask that the expelled functionaries be allowed to return to the Ruhr, that the imprisoned industrial magnates, including Dr. Krupp von Bohlen, be released, and that the rigors of the occupation be lessened.

Information gleaned from official circles here indicates there will be no stout objection to a change in the occupational regime, and that the French Government is quite willing to rid it as far as possible of its disagreeable features. The return of the German functionaries however, is a more serious matter, since most of them are Prussians and, it is feared by the Allies, are likely to raise new forms of obstruction. Clemency toward those Germans imprisoned is regarded as certain to follow a show of good-will on the part of the German Government in execution of its obligations and a disposition on the part of the industrial leaders to co-operate with the Allies.

The difficulties before the Allies under a new regime in the Ruhr, which are being dwelt on here, are the necessity of keeping the district supplied with food and in finding markets for the exports, which latter task is complicated by the fact that the cost of production in Germany now equals the cost elsewhere, while the stocks of raw materials and accumulations of fuel are exhausted. It is remarked in French

Friction with the organist and members of the choir was the reason.

The Session has refused to reinstate Mr. Mitchell, and the church is now trying to recruit a new choir.

LEAGUE SEEKS COURT OPINION

Question of Its Own Competency Being Referred to International Court.

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press)—That speed is the guiding principle in the League of Nations' determination to have its covenant subjected to juridical interpretation was evidenced tonight by the fact that the special committee of legal experts has already framed its preliminary report. This examination was decided upon because of Italy's refusal to admit the competency of the convenant with respect to her recent disputes with Greece.

The League Council met tonight and received the report of the experts, who were appointed to frame suitable questions on which the convenant could be judged, the idea being to submit them to the Permanent Court of International Justice for an advisory opinion and to secure illuminating resolutions which will serve as a base for future action. Just what the convenant means is the general end which the League seeks to attain.

There will be no abatement of the question, apparently, because the Council plans to make a full report to the Assembly before that body adjourns next Saturday, and allow no suspicion to linger in the mind of any delegate that the grave question of the convenant interpretation has been thrown aside.

The Council reported that they had drawn up five questions. These have not been made public, it is reported that three of them directly concern the League's competency. One refers to the responsibility of States for political crimes committed within their borders.

Multitudinous questions occupied five of the League's commissions today. They sat simultaneously at the League's headquarters, but the most troublesome question of all was that definitely fixing the method whereby non-permanent members of the Council shall be elected.

HOME BANK HAD C.N.R. FUNDS FOR JUST ONE WEEK

Million Was Withdrawn Because R. P. Gough Was Director of Bank and Railway.

DENIAL TO RUMOR.

MONTREAL, Sept. 26. — The Canadian National Railways deposited $1,000,000 of surplus funds in the Home Bank of Canada on May 28 and withdrew it about June 2.

The financial department of the National Railways in explaining the situation declared that the transaction was in the ordinary course of business and the $1,000,000 deposited "about the latter part of May" was withdrawn when "it came to our notice that Mr. R. P. Cough, one of the directors of the Canadian National Railways was also vice-president of the Home Bank."

C. N. R. Statement.

In its formal statement covering the transaction the financial department of the Canadian National Railways said:

"The financial department of the Canadian National Railways to-day made the following statement regarding the article published in the Detroit Free Press last week.

"It is the custom of the financial department of the Canadian National Railways to distribute its funds by depositing them in banks which best suit its purpose. The railway uses fourteen banks at the present time. About the latter part of May 1923 the financial department of the system deposited in the Home Bank at Montreal $1,000,000 of surplus funds. Shortly after depositing these funds with the Home Bank it came to our notice that Mr. R. P. Gough, one of the directors of the Canadian National Railways was also vice-president of the Home Bank and to avoid any possibility of criticism the funds were promptly withdrawn.

The deposit had no unusual features and it was effected in the ordinary course of the affairs of this department."

Detroit Story.

The article which appeared in last Saturday's Detroit Free Press and which was dated from Ottawa read as follows:

"People are anxiously awaiting the curator's report on the Home Bank. In the meantime there are alarming rumors that Canadian National Railway money was deposited in that bank just previous to the monthly statement to the government and withdrawn a few days after the first of the succeeding month.

"The amount mentioned is $1,000,000 which would be quite an assistance to a small bank like the Home in producing a passable statement for the federal finance department. If this is true, and responsible men declare it to be, then there will have to be a definite explanation from the Canadian National management.

Gough Vice-President.

"R. P. Gough, Toronto, is vice-president of the Home Bank and also a director of the Canadian National Railways. Why a deposit and of such magnitude should have been made by the Government Railways in the Home Bank is a mystery as that institution had no Canadian National Railway account, nor was it supposed to be financially associated in any way.

"Each bank makes a statement to the government about the twenty second of each month of its loans, deposits, etc., on the yast day of the preceeding month. It is by this statement that the finance department judges of its prosperity and solvency. If it is found (and apparently there is some foundation for the persistent romor) that the Government Railways made this remarkable deposit at the time mentioned only to withdraw it after the statement had gone forth, then there is trouble ahead for some people in the bank and in the railway."

ROVING MEXICANS READ.

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 26.—(Associated)—The department of education of the Mexican government has sent 200 books to the Smelter branch of the Y.M.C.A. here. This branch is patronized by about 300 Mexicans who were without books in Spanish until those from Mexico City arrived

The department is sending small libraries of books written in Spanish to her places in the United States where there is a Mexican population without reading matter.

HON. MR. OLIVER'S APPOINTMENT.

The appointment of Hon. Frank Oliver to the Board of Railway Commissioners supplies that body with a member who is thoroughly acquainted with Western problems and whose knowledge of the conditions in that part of Canada should be of more than usual value.

Hon. Mr. Oliver was Minister of the Interior in the Laurier Cabinet, and he is for that reason and because of his long residence in the West particularly fitted to deal intelligently and sympathetically with the various questions in connection with Western freight rates and similar problems that are continually being dealt with by the Railway Commissioners.

The announcement that the vacancy on the board is to be filled by Hon. Mr. Oliver will be accepted with satisfaction in the West particularly and by Canadians generally as strengthening the personnel of the Board of Commissioners.

There is much good work in the public interest that can be performed as a member of that body, and the vigour and ability shown by the new Commissioner throughout his crowded life augur favourably for useful service in his new capacity.

To him will the people of the West look for sympathetic attention to their problems.

AN UNIQUE EXPEDITION.

The visit of Lieut.-Governor Cockshutt and his party, including Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, to Hudson's Bay and their long trip through the Northland should result in a much more complete understanding at Toronto of the conditions and problems of the northern part of the Province.

It has been an unique expedition, and in planning it Hon. Mr. Cockshutt has once more given a demonstration of the fact that he believes that the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario should be something more than a figure-head.

He has lost no opportunity to be of public service, not only at Government House, which has been a rallying point for representatives of every phase of life in the Province, but anywhere else where his presence has been desired.

In the trip, which is now being concluded, the Lieutenant-Governor did well to include the Premier in his party.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson should come back with a new appreciation of the Northland and a fresh viewpoint in regard to what is necessary for its development.

Two little has been contributed in the past towards the progress of the Northland, and the Examiner hopes that an inspection at first hand by the head of the Government will lead to the formation of a more ambitious and a wiser policy in regard to that comparatively little known portion of Ontario.

WHAT NEW YORK MERCHANTS LEARNED.

New York is a big city; a city of millions; a place where there are 100,000 transients every day, says the London Advertiser. Surely in all this multitude there would be enough people to keep the stores busy all the time. They would have to buy a lot of material and eatables, and the transients would always be on the lookout for things to take home.

But the merchants of New York say in no uncertain way that trade is very bad and that each succeeding day makes it worse.

Why? Simply because there have been no newspapers in New York. What abbreviated papers there have been have left out the advertising; simply giving as much news as possible.

The merchants have had no way to talk to the people of New York; they have had no chance to tell them what they have to offer. They have lost their contact with the public, and the effect on sales has been nothing short of disastrous.

Well-prepared advertising notices that tell people facts and prices are more closely read than ever before, and the public will respond to such invitations on the part of the stores.

The New York merchants have been forced to experiment, and they have found that doing business without the aid of the newspapers is a hard and a losing battle.

THE PUBLIC SHOULD HELP.

Following the public announcement of the Rotarian plan to take care of the crippled children in Peterborough, details of which were published in the Examiner, will shortly come a survey of the city, a house-to-house canvass for the purpose of ascertaining the number of such children there are in Peterborough and of gaining the information upon which future action will be based.

The citizens generally will be expected to cheerfully co-operate with the workers in making this survey as accurate and complete as possible by giving the data that will be asked for by the committee.

It should be understood that the canvass is not being taken to gratify idle curiosity or to give an opportunity to pry into the business of others.

It is a humanitarian effort to give a better chance in life to scores of youngsters who at present are facing a future darkened by the knowledge of physical infirmities or other defects.

The information will not be paraded for general consumption, nor need it cause embarrassment to any individual or any family.

It is being sought merely because that before a definite plan of action can be decided upon it is necessary to know just how many children in Peterborough are handicapped by defects and the circumstances under which they are situated.

Every family in Peterborough should do its share by welcoming the canvassing committee and answering the few important questions that will be asked.

THE GASOLINE FISHERMAN.

During the last few seasons the practice of trawling from motor boats has developed to such an extent, not only on the Otonabee and Rice Lake, but at Chemong and Stoney Lakes, that the fishing in all these waters is becoming depleted.

Sportsmen who have been studying the effect of this method of fishing for some time have at last decided that the time for action has arrived, and petitions are being circulated at Stoney Lake asking the Ontario Government to make angling from power craft illegal.

The movement should be supported by all real anglers.

The motor boat fisherman is a wholesaler. He sits in his gasoline propelled boat for hours at a time, covers much more territory than is possible to be reached by the man in the canoe or skiff and naturally his take of fish is correspondingly large.

In fact, one of those persistent gasoline anglers usually lands as many 'lunge in a week as the ordinary fisherman is able to secure in a season.

It stands to reason that the method cannot be permitted to grow general without making such serious inroads on the fish that the depletion of the district waters is threatened.

That situation seems to have arrived now, and the Government will be urged to take steps to stop the wholesaler.

At best, it is a lazy way to fish, it brings the angler no dividends in the shape of healthful exercise or developed muscles, and it puts the man who likes to paddle after his piscatorial prey at a great disadvantage.

The practice should be stamped out—and must be if 'lunge are not to become as scarce around Peterborough as the great auk.

CANADA AND THE CONFERENCES.

Correspondents of British journals seem to be disturbed over the future of Canada and its position in the Empire. The action of the Dominion in the war should be an answer to the pessimists. It was inevitable and desirable that there should be a growth of national spirit in Canada. But it is idle to suggest that there is any serious or general feeling among any element of the Canadian people in favor of separation from the Mother Country.

There are differences of opinion as to the degree of obligation we should assume for defence and whether or not we should accept responsibility for British foreign policy. There are those who demand from the Imperial Parliament a definite reconstruction of the equal status of the Dominion in the Empire and those who believe that in the colonial relation there is a sense of dependence incompatible with a true national spirit and adequate national dignity. But over none of these questions are the masses of the people excited nor is there any evidence that British statesmen desire to check the growth of Canadian national sentiment.

Under a Liberal Government Canadian contingents were despatched to South Africa and the organization of a Canadian navy was sanctioned by Parliament. Under a Conservative Government, with the unanimous assent of Parliament, a great army was sent to Europe at immense cost to the Canadian Treasury. Constitutional theorists may fret and autonomists and Imperialists disagree, but when duty calls or danger threatens the people are the masters and Parliament obeys.

The whole lesson of Canadian history is that British sentiment is the most virile force in the Dominion and that from decade to decade the devotion of Canada to British ideals and British institutions deepens and strengthens. In their day Sir John Macdonald and Sir Charles Tupper held that Canada should not be involved in the wars of the Empire. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was amazed at the strength of the general demand for Canadian participation in the struggle in South Africa. The sentiment was in the people and it could not be resisted. So it was in the Great War and so it will be in the crises of the future.

The Union of the Canadian Provinces was not so much a result of the long and deliberate planning of statesmen as the natural outcome of a continuous growth of public sentiment. The British Empire is in the hearts of the British people rather than in political compacts or constitutional agreements. Its cornerstone is in the fact of freedom, in traditions which have come down through the centuries, and in services of inestimable value to mankind.

If we think of a world without the British Empire we will better realize the significance and the dignity of British citizenship. And in proportion as we realize its significance and dignity we will endeavor to achieve for Canada a position of increasing honor and influence in the British Commonwealth. The future of Canada does not depend so much upon Imperial Conferences as upon the manner in which we govern ourselves and meet our national responsibilities. We will have strength in the Empire if we are solvent, thrifty in administration and wise in legislation. There is a point at which public debt becomes a danger as well as a burden. Governmental extravagance impoverishes at home and discredits abroad. A good reputation in the British money market is a great asset to any nation. Immigrants come less freely to a country where the load of taxation is excessive. Both industry and agriculture suffer where taxes take the margin of profit. There would be grave danger to Canada if the scale of taxation should be generally above that which prevails in the United States, for we cannot escape the economic competition of the neighboring country.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The attendance at the Lindsay Fair Saturday has now grown to 30,000. There must have been some belated returns from polls in the far north.

Winning baseball teams offer a cheap and sure way of advertising a city as a live community. Peterborough clubs are doing more than their share in this respect.

With weather like that of the last few days a certainty each year there would be little trouble in booming the lake resorts during September.

From the frequency with which their names are seen in the newspapers, it is naturally assumed that some of those famous American amateur golfers do little else the year round but play golf.

By the London Free Press the Senate is described as "a sort of political alumini," which comes the nearest to a compliment of anything said about the Upper Chamber in many a year.

Chicago prohibition agents have seized eight carloads of hair tonic, which they declare to be almost pure alcohol. There would be a startling epidemic of falling hair if that cargo were turned loose for general use.

WINNIPEG CATTLE.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press)—Receipts 2,280 cattle and calves, 180 hogs and 15 sheep and lambs.

Trading generally continued slow on the cattle market this morning. The better grades of butchers met a fair request around steady prices but the in-between offerings were draggy and showed a weaker tendency. Stockers and feeders were dull. The hog market was steady. Thick smooths changed hands at $10.50 and select bacons at $11.55.

The few good lambs which changed hands this morning sold about steady around $11.00.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, September 26. — Trade was very slow yesterday. At present it looks as if the commission men have their work cut out to effect a clean-up this week of the heavy runs of cattle pouring into the market. Of twenty cars of Western cattle, fourteen cars have been sent direct through to Lancaster, Penn., as it was felt there was little use holding them here in an already overstocked market.

Export cattle are a good 50c lower than last week.

Butcher cattle prices yesterday were holding steady at the 25c decline of yesterday, but the medium and common butcher stuff was down another 25c below yesterday's decline, making a 50c to 75c decline in this particular class in the two days.

There is a little movement in the stockers' and feeders' class at the lower prices this week, but the trade is slow.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, September 26 (Canadian Press). — Although ending of Germany's passive resistance gave a lift to wheat prices yesterday, the effect was afterward more than offset by heavy sales to realise profits.

Closing quotations were unsettled at the same as Monday's finish to 1-2 cent lower.

Corn finished unchanged at 1 1-8c higher, oats a shade to 3-8c up, and provisions varying from 2c to 20c gains.

On the news that Germany had officially surrendered in her economic struggle against France, the wheat market took a decided upward swing during the first hour of trading. Removal of hedges on 1,500,000 bushels, chiefly Canadian wheat taken for Europe, tended further to hoist values.

However after the December delivery had risen more than 4 cents above its recent low point, and had virtually overcome all the loss occasioned by recent big Canadian crop estimates, profit-taking sales reached such volume that a downturn in the prices ensued.

All months dropped below yesterday's finish, but something of a rally was again in progress as the day drew to an end.

Bears in the wheat put stress mainly on the more liberal receipts at Winnipeg, and the fact that cash premiums there were lower. Besides, more hedging pressure was noted at Minneapolis than for some time, and in this connection it was said Canadian wheat was nearly at a price basis for import into the United States. The fact that the Cabinet at Washington yesterday considered raising the tariff on wheat was practically unknown here until the market had closed.

Corn and oats were dominated as heretofore by frost damage and corn scarcity. New high prices recorded for the season resulted both in the corn and oats.

Provisions improved on the better outlook.

GRAIN MOVEMENT THROUGH LINDSAY

Peterboro Route will Soon Be Operating at High Pressure.

LINDSAY, Sept. 26.—The movement in western grain over the C.N.R. and C.P.R. through Lindsay and Peterborough has commenced, and the shipments expect to reach the high water mark before the lake ports freeze up. The C.N.R. has made special arrangements for handling this year's grain. High power engines have been put into service, which means larger hauls from Midland. Increased trackage at Lindsay has also been provided, and railway officials are prepared for the busiest season in the history of the line.

According to reports from Port McNicholl, a regular fleet of freighters is in front of the big elevator waiting to unload grain, with more on the way. The big grain trains have already started to move through Lindsay, and there promises to be no let-up for some months.

A new record in grain shipments was established at Midland a few days ago when the first cargo of new Western wheat arrived and was loaded from the boat into the C. N. R. cars. Twenty-seven hours later the grain was in Montreal, having covered the 400 miles in five hours less than previous record.

Be very careful while inheriting a fortune. A Paris ragpicker dil it and dropped dead.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

A Number of Delegates to the Rural Deanery Meeting—Personals.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 26.—Mrs. (Canon) Allen, Mrs. E. J. Whyte, Mrs. C. McNeil, Mrs. H. Mulligan, Mrs. H. Weeks, and Miss Gertrude Fitzgerald, representing the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Thomas Church, Millbrook with about eighteen members from St. John's church, Ida, attended the Rural Deanery W. A. at Omemee on Wednesday. A large number of delegates from the Auxiliaries of the deanery took communion at the morning session, Rev. Mr. Weir officiating. Miss Summerhayes, Diocesan corresponding secretary, and Miss Kingston, representing the Social Service Department, were among the speakers at the gathering which was marked by deep interest and a keen desire for information re "ways of working that work" throughout the entire day's sessions. This was the first W. A. convention since the new deanery, which extends as far north as Bobcaygeon with Millbrook as its most southerly point, was organized last year. Port Hope, where the gathering was usually held, now belongs to another deanery to which Millbrook is no longer attached.

Woman's Auxiliary

The opening meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Thomas church, after the holiday season, was held at the home of Mrs. H. J. Grassett on Monday evening, a good attendance of members being present. The President, Mrs. (Canon) Allen, occupied the chair, and a splendid spirit of enthusiasm and helpfulness prevailed. After the opening worship period the new study book, "Japan in Transition," was discussed and arrangements made to meet on the second and fourth Mondays each month when the consecutive study will be taken up. Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Mulligan will take up the first chapter on Monday, October 1st., the gathering to be held at the home of Mrs. E. Mulligan.

Business items were disposed of and at the conclusion of the meeting Mrs. Grassett and her mother, Mrs. Whitten served delicious refreshments and a most enjoyable social hour was spent before the gathering dispersed.

Special Music

A very welcome addition to the music, and general attractiveness of the session in the Methodist Sunday School was provided on Sunday afternoon by the attendance, after more than a year's absence, of the S. S. orchestra which played while the school was gathering and again during dismissal, besides leading in the singing of the hymns. Miss Ella Elson presided at the piano the other members being: Messrs. G. E. Burnham, J. Isbister, J. L. Byam A. C. Richards, Miss May Byam and Billy Byam.

The orchestra will be in attendance next Sunday, September 30th., which is observed as Rally Day throughout the Dominion, and the special programme on "Growth" issued from headquarters in Toronto for use in all Protestant Schools, will be carried out. By request the Canadian Girls in Training group will repeat the "Rainbow Bible Drill" which they gave last June. All teachers are urged to have a full attendance of their scholars out on Sunday that a good beginning may be made for the fall and winter work.

CONDUCTOR BACKED UP TRAIN FOUR MILES TO RECOVER TICKET PUNCH

Janetville Story of Slight Delay in Trip to Lindsay Fair — School Fairs Feature of School Work.

Church Anniversary.

JANETVILLE, Sept. 26.—On Saturday last a train was going north on one of the branch lines. A large number of passengers were on board going to Lindsay Fair. The train had travelled about four miles when it slowed up to a standstill. Then it began to go back. On it went for about two miles. The passengers became bewildered and excited. One young man was heard to exclaim, "Oh she's going back to get a good start." By and by the train stopped. What happened? The conductor had dropped his ticket punch and took the train back to look for the article. Yes, it was found. But everybody was in good humor, for they were all going to the fair.

The Crops.

The recent rains have contributed much to the development of the late crops, but the frost has been on the job. The corn generally is good, but some of the farmers forgot to harvest it in time, and the frost has worked ruin. The farmers who cut their corn crop on the 12th or 13th of September saved it, as far as this locality is concerned. Since one acre of well saved corn is worth five of wonder that able farmers run such risk? Never let the frost ripen the corn.

The late potatoes in this section will be good and the gardens look well. The buckwheat is excellent, but some of it was touched with the frost.

Rev. and Mrs. Ross returned home on Saturday by noon train, after having spent a delightful week in Peterboro attending the Dr. Campbell Morgan meetings. While in Peterboro they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Zealand and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jones of Maitland avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Ward Gamble of East City and other friends.

Anniversary Services.

The Presbyterian anniversary held last Sunday was an unqualified success. The services were held in the Presbyterian church in the afternoon and in the Methodist church at night, the pastor and officials of the Methodist church giving their building for the evening meeting.

The preacher of the day was Rev. Mr. Gervin of Millbrook, who made a fine impression.

The choir of the Fleetwood Methodist church furnished music at both services, and their effort was well received.

The bazaar on Monday afternoon was also successful, and the concert at night was very well attended.

Methodist Church.

The congregations are gradually increasing in numbers, and there is a splendid addition to the choir. Four school teachers have joined the choir at Janetville, and excellent results are looked for. Next Friday evening, at the request of the pastor, all the young people, C.G.I.T., Tuxis Boys, Trail Rangers and Y.P.S. will meet for reorganization.

A prayer meeting has been opened up, with about twenty in attendance. Next Sabbath at 11 a.m. there will be at great Sunday School Rally at which the pastor has been requested to address the gathering, and has decided to address the boys and girls.

Public School Fairs.

The Public School Fairs have become the most exciting element in the school life. It is a question whether this is gratifying to the teachers or not. It seems to break in upon the school activities, just at a time when the teacher is planning for the autumn work. Some parents complain of the amount of home work given to the children, but they seem to forget that the time spent in preparing for the School Fair may be a very great inconvenience to the teacher, and a hinderance to his plans in the interest of his school.

However, Cartwright and Manvers townships have been in a flurry of excitement ever since the beginning of the school term, and now since the fairs are over, they have been pronounced most successful.

FUNERAL OF JOHN DOUGLAS IN CAVAN

Last of Family of Eight Children Was Old Resident of the Township.

MILLBROOK, July 26.—The late Hugh Douglas, who passed away on Wednesday, September 19th, at the residence of his son, Mr. John Douglas, Water street, Peterborough, was one of a family of eight children, four sons and four daughters, none of whom now survive. The parents of the deceased were pioneers who came to Canada from the old country over one hundred years ago and settled near Zion, in Hope township, where several members of their family were born, the birthday of the late Mr. H. Douglas occurring ninety-three years ago the eleventh of last July.

Deceased was one of the oldest residents of Cavan township, having lived in this vicinity for over fifty years, during which time he won the affection and respect of all who came into association with him, though of late years, owing to the infirmities which nturally accompany extreme age he was seldom able to leave his home. An attack of influenza last February left behind, as it often does, a serious weakness, from which Mr. Douglas never fully recovered. With the hope that a change might be beneficial, in May he went for a visit to the home of his son, Mr. John Douglas, Peterborough, intending to be absent only a few weeks, but failing to regain a sufficient measure of health and strength, he remained until the time of his death, which sad event occurred unexpectedly last week.

Of a deeply religious nature, deceased had a warm affection for the church and its services and as long as health permitted delighted to worship with the Methodist congregation, the latter being the denomination to which he was attached by membership. His wife, whose maiden name was Susan Pritchard, predeceased him twelve years ago, her death, in her seventy-seventh year, occurring on February 3rd, 1912.

The immediate surviving relatives are two daughters, Mrs. George Paterson, of Jeddo, Mich., and Mrs. S. R. Carveth of Cavan, and three sons, John of Peterborough, William and Thomas of Cavan, with the last named deceased had for some years made his home. The death of one daughter, Mrs. Marshal Willan, of Otonabee, made the first break in the family circle, after the mother's decease. Eight grandchildren, Nellie, Douglas of Peterborough, and Marie of Cavan, Thomas, Douglas and Betty Paterson of Jeddo, Michigan, Thomas, Norman and John Willan of Otonabee, are also amongst those who recognize a vacant chair and a loving, cheerful presence gone.

The funeral took place from the residence of his son, Mr. Thomas Douglas, 7th concession, Cavan, on Saturday, September 22nd, a large number of relatives and friends gathering at the house for the service which was in charge of Rev. S. T. Tucker, of Millbrook. The pall-bearers were the three sons, Messrs. John, William and Thomas Douglas, J. Pritchard, L. Bebee and J. Irwin, of Hope township. Beautiful floral tributes were laid upon the casket in loving memory of one who had "passed before to our Father's House."

FRANCE REASONABLE

circles, however, that the idea is not to take over the task of exploitation, but, on the contrary, since the passive resistance is ending, to leave it in the hands of the Germans.

Arrange Own Finances.

Premier Poincare, it is understood, will also favor leaving it to the Germans to decide what reforms are required to put their finances in order and how to make ready to pay reparations, reserving it to the Reparation Commission simply to supervise the working of those reforms and report whether they are sufficient to accomplish the end in view.

Until the character of the German financial reforms is known, the French Government will maintain an expectative attitude, reserving its appreciation of the events now passing in Germany until it appears clearly whether there is a real "change of heart," on the part of the Germans regarding the execution of their obligations. If such change has taken place, then it is thought here the other steps toward a reasonable settlement of the reparation question will be comparatively easy.

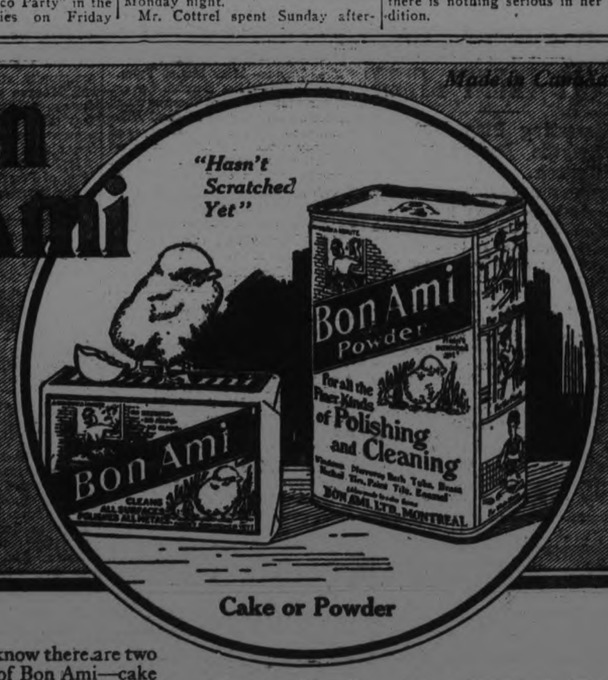
Bon Ami

"Hasn't Scratched Yet"



Cake or Powder

DO you know there are two kinds of Bon Ami—cake and powder? Both are made from the same ingredients—both are equally good.

It's a matter of taste which you use. Many women prefer the powder in its handy sprinkler-top tin—it's so easy to shake the powder on a damp cloth.

Others prefer the solid cake—that's rubbed on the cloth like ordinary soap.

Many women keep both kinds on hand—they prefer the cake for some uses, the powder for others. It's a splendid idea to keep both—why not try it?

Are you familiar with the principal uses of Bon Ami—they're listed at the right?

SCOTTISH DRYS WAR ON LIQUOR

Peculiar Application of Law Adds Interest to Conflict Late This Year.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Scotland is in the throes of a determined prohibition struggle. Prohibitionists, though they are reluctant to admit the fact, received a severe set-back three years ago in the last poll under the Scottish Temperance Act. How they will fare on this occasion will not be apparent till late in the year.

It is possible that anomalous situations may arise. Ground they gained on the last occasion they may lose now, but undoubtedly they will register success in other areas. The Scottish Temperance Act gives definite powers for enforcing partial prohibition in the form of local option, or complete, but an essential preliminary to a poll or vote in any of the scheduled areas, is that at least 10 per cent. of the electors shall demand it. The forms have long since been issued and returned, and as 10 per cent. is a very small margin it will readily be conceived that Prohibitionists have succeeded in the first round—in obtaining the taking of a large number of polls.

Results Last Time.

In 1920, the last vote, there were 1,214 areas specified under the act, and the results of the struggle are as follows:

	Rural Areas	Burghal Areas
No poll demanded	300	85
Contests	261	311
Prohibition imposed .	14	28
Limitations demanded	9	26
No change	238	257

Out of the total areas, 808 are rural parishes and in respect of 300 a poll is useless by reason of the fact that because of restrictive conditions imposed by the estate proprietors no licenses of any sort are issued. They are dry, like many similar small estates in England are dry, because the landowners regard the existence of licensed houses as depreciatory. The outcome of the poll therefore was that approximately 450 licensed houses in Scotland were liable to be extinguished, but these figures were reduced by actions in the Court of Sessions on legal points. For instance, in Glasgow there were four wards which voted "No license," out of 37 wards, but the subsequent legal action reduced that figure to two, and it will be impossible in respect of these wards for the people to declare their will again on the point until next year. On the other hand, nine wards, which of course are the statutory areas, gave majorities for limitations, and limitations have been enforced.

Three Questions Rise.

The main act also defines the issues on which the polling may now proceed and, under the limitations imposed, areas which have been previously unpolled or have declared a "no charge" verdict, will have just three questions to answer: prohibition, limitation, or no change.

In the areas going dry three years ago, only one alternative is offered; it is, absolute repeal of all dry regulations.

Thus they will be called on to choose either continuance of prohibition or vote wet. Having had a taste of dry, there is no happy medium available. It is "whole hog or none," and in some of these areas the outcome of this occasion offers distinct uncertainty. Experiences of the last three years of being without, while immediately adjacent areas in the same town have enjoyed to the full, may possibly have roused the voters; 30, 40 and 50 per cent. of the electorate deemed the issue three years ago one not worth worrying about in view of the fact that they did not dream the Prohibitionists were so strong.

EVACUATING CORFU.

ATHENS, Sept. 26. — (Canadian Press).—The Italian Legation yesterday informed the Greek Foreign Minister that the evacuation of Corfu would be completed to-day and that Corfu would be turned over to the Greeks to-morrow.

CROP REPORTS

The following is a summary of returns made by the agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Most of the barns are well filled this year as the crop of hay was one of the best for many seasons, and the yields of grain have been on the whole satisfactory.

Some anxiety was expressed as to the results of the frosts that prevailed in many parts of the Province a week or so ago, but the more recent summer-like weather has had a much more cheerful effect upon those who are clearing up their fall fields.

Fall wheat recently sown has found an excellent seed bed, and is looking promising. Much remains to be sown. A fair total acreage is expected this season.

The land is now in good shape for fall plowing, and those who can find time from silo filling and threshing are making most of conditions.

The milk flow has been very encouraging of late owing to the much improved pastures.

Labor is still scarce in most quarters with corresponding good pay for workers.

Brant: Apples are quite free of fungus this season, but there is considerable side work. Many orchards in the Paris district are sold at prices ranging from $3 on the tree per barrel to $5.50 f.o.b.

Lincoln: Peach harvesting is progressing rapidly, and many orchards are already cleared up. The pear crop is moving, but the yield is very light. Very few are moving at the present time. The fall variety is light in yield, and the winter varieties are ready to pick.

Kent: All fall crops have been later than usual this fall, and as a result considerable damage has been done by the frost. This has especially affected tobacco, as only a very small percentage of the tobacco had been harvested before the first severe frost. Thousands of dollars damage has been done to the tobacco crop in the county alone. The corn fodder has also been damaged by the frost, but the seed in most cases is unharmed.

Timiskaming: In speaking with Mr. Brown, of Thornloe, about the production of vegetables, he stated that he found a very ready market in Cobalt for all the cauliflowers he could produce. He has little or no opposition in this line, apparently, and as a result of his success of this year, he is preparing to raise quite a large acreage of cauliflowers next year.

Victoria: A considerable amount of buckwheat is grown in this county and at the present time is being harvested. Rather a light crop is reported, due to the dry summer and the early frost.

Wellington: All the red clover fields that were cut early before the seventh of July are making a splendid showing, practically every field is full of seed. Six years ago it was considered by most of the farmers that red clover could not be grown successfully in this district, but they are gradually learning that red clover must be sown more heavily than they had been sowing it in order to get a crop at all. Many of them have only been sowing one or two pounds to the acre, but since they are putting it on thicker they are getting better results. Last year quite a number of the men discovered that they could not only grow red clover well but they could produce seed.

Elgin: A number of farmers are inquiring about pure-bred sheep and are considering going more heavily into this line of farming instead of cattle.

Lincoln: Live stock generally are improving in flesh, due to the better pasture following the recent rains. The hog population seems to be about normal in this district at present. Prices have decreased a little for them, and there is rather a heavy mortality among young pigs born the last three weeks.

Lennox and Addington: All classes of live stock are in fair condition. Prices offered for fat cattle are very low, from $25 to $35 per head. Bacon hogs are selling at $9 per cwt. Little pigs $5 to $7 per pair.

Kent: The condition of live stock has been improved in the last two weeks owing to the improved condition of the pasture. Several carloads of hogs were shipped out last week at 9c and 9¼c per lb. Drovers are contracting with farmers to feed steers on the same basis as last year.

Middlesex: Live stock has not been selling very well. At auction sales choice dairy cows are bringing from $60 to $80. Farm horses have sold at from $60 to $100. Small pigs are selling at from $8 to $12 per pair.

Lennox and Addington: The milk supply is holding up fairly well for the season of the year. The Farmers' Dairy are paying $1.75 for 3.3 milk. They are receiving about 90,000 lbs. daily. Cheese factories are paying $1.58 for milk testing 3.4 per cent. Cheese is selling at 23¼c.

RUSH TO SUBSCRIBE TO NEW GOVT. LOAN

Applications for $56,000,000 Were Received from Investors in First 36 Hours.

The volume of applications received for the new Dominion of Canada refunding loan in the days preceding the public offering furnishes a striking example of public desire to participate again in the premier security that Canada can offer—a bond with the entire resources of the Dominion behind it, and carrying a much higher rate of interest than United States citizens, for example, can secure in corresponding investments in their own bonds.

Within thirty-six hours of the time the Minister of Finance first announced the issue the selling syndicate had received orders in excess of the entire preliminary offering of $50,000,000. The objective of the present loan is $172,000,000, and from the number of early applications from private investors it looks as if this first big peace-time loan would go "over the top" in the same sweeping manner that was in evidence during the Victory loan campaigns.

Inquiring From States.

Not only are Canadians coming forward with a rush to demonstrate their faith in the Dominion, but outsiders, particularly United States institutions, which have been keeping a close watch on Canada of late, are taking big blocks of this Canadian loan, showing their faith in the future of Canada and the Canadian dollar by buying a Dominion domestic bond payable in Canada. Millions of dollars of United States money have already come into Canada for investment in the new loan.

Big United States corporations and institutions do not invest their money without the closest scrutiny of the security behind it. They have probed deep into the resources of Canada, and found that it offers as attractive and sound a field for investment as exists today. The West will have a record harvest this year, the steel industry is running at almost its highest post-war peak, the nickel mines are up to war-time production again, and the output of gold will be almost double that of last year. Furthermore, United States investors are anxious for Canadian securities, realizing that year by year their country will be more and more dependent upon Canadian products.

Interest Rate Is High.

Canadian subscriptions to the new loan already indicate popular appreciation of the decision of the Minister of Finance to ask the people of Canada for the money he needs, rather than going to a foreign country for it. Mr. Fielding is offering Canadians the best business proposition of the year in a bond which is paying well over 5 per cent. and ranks equally with all the Victory loans and similar issues outstanding.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

YOUR OXYGEN RATION

So many conditions of bodily health depend on your daily oxygen "diet" that it is hard to estimate the loss when one withholds it from its proper part in his daily program.

Housekeepers who claim they have no time for such nonsense, storekeepers who neglect to take time, rich folks who have automobile trouble and can't walk, and poor folks who won't walk because they can't ride, are among the number who suffer great loss in bodily upkeep from lack of exercise and oxygen.

In ordinary every day breathing, not more than 10 per cent. of your lung capacity is changed at each breath. Deep breathing brings into play the whole lung power and increases the circulation in the abdominal organs to a marked degree. Where there is nervous or emotional stress, the blood pressure is aided greatly. Sedentary people often talk about uric acid. It is easy to explain—lack of oxygen and incomplete combustion.

The carbohydrates (starch and sugar) are fuel foods. When the oxidation of sugar, through muscular action, is complete, the product is water and carbon dioxide. Incomplete oxidation produces another body poison, lactic acid.

The increased output of the adrenal glands, which occurs under the stimulus of exercise and complete body action supplies the cell with the growth they demand by furnishing the required oxidation. Breathe it in—expel it—breathe in some more.

When you sit around the house or office and stretch and yawn—your oxygen ration has been sadly neglected. Take a hike.

KIDNAPPERS ACTIVE IN EASTERN CANADA

SAINT CELESTIN, Que., Sept. 26.— (Canadian Press.)— Two attempts at kidnapping of children here recently have caused considerable excitement. The first occurred when the little son of a resident, M. P. Gavette, was asked to take a seat in an automobile carrying three women and a man, in order to show the party the location of a farmer's house. When the house was reached the car put on speed. The child only escaped by a trick. He told the chauffeur that the road in front was bad and as the car slowed up, leaped from the automobile and escaped across the fields.

The second ataempt was on a 12-year old girl, a pupil of the Sisters of the Assumption, who was going home from lessons. An unknown man in a car seized her and thrust her down in the car. The girl cried loudly for help and the automobilist, seeing another car approach, let her go.

WILL CONTINUE BRIQUET PLANT

Three Months' Operations in Saskatchewan Utilizing Lignite Coal.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26. — (Canadian Press). — The briquetting plant at Bienfait, Sask., is to be continued in operation for the next three months, it was stated this afternoon by Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Highways of the province of Saskatchewan, who has been in consultation here with the federal department of the interior with regard to the matter. As the result of investigations carried on during the past weeks by engineers representing the two governments, said Mr Gardiner, it was hoped to be able to develop during the three months period a process of briquetting which would justify the camparatively large expenditure already made.

The Bienfait plant which has for some time past been engaged in experimental work in the matter of manufacturing briquettes from Saskatchewan lignite coal will continue operations under the lignite utilization board. Mr. Gardiner stated that the board had more than enough money on hand, voted by the federal and the Saskatchewan government's respectively to take care of the three month's work. Mr. Gardiner is still conferring with Hon. Charles Stewart, federal minister of the Interior with a view of deciding the scope of the work to be undertaken.

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

MORE FAME TO BIG PLANT OF QUAKER OATS

Company Has Perfected Another New Product With a Delightfully Exclusive Malt Flavor.

MUCH IN DEMAND

The Quakers Oats Company has perfected another product that will bring more fame to their mammoth plant in this city, and to Peterboro as an industrial centre. The new product is Quaker Corn Flakes, and it is the result of a long period of experimentation which now enables the company to produce an exceedingly thin crisp flake with an exclusive malt flavour. The sealed cartons in which Quaker Corn Flakes are packed protect the product from air and dampness, thus preserving its crispness and its flavour. Already a wide sale has been secured.

Citizens of Peterborough, who see the huge mill frequently have very little idea of its extent, or of the variety of products which it mills. To travel through its different departments means a journey of many miles. It is the largest and most modern mill in the Empire.

Besides Quaker Oats from which the Company takes its name, the products comprise Quaker Corn Flakes, Quaker Puffed Wheat, Quaker Puffed Rice, Tillson's Health Bran, Quaker Flour, Schumacher Stock Feed, Ful-O-Pep Poultry Feed and a considerable number of lesser known products.

Journey of Kernel.

The journey of a kernel of corn through the Quaker Oats mill starts when the germ is removed. This germ contains corn oil which would cause the corn flakes to turn rancid. The oil itself has a ready market for many manufacturers of soaps and cooking oils.

The germ itself produces hominy grits; the balance of the kernel is used in making the Corn Flakes. They are placed between steel cylinders which roll them out in the form of thin flakes. The flakes are then toasted and flavored, and as they leave the toasters on broad belts, the slowly moving stream is inspected at a number of points for imperfect or burnt flakes.

The puffing of rice and wheat is an interesting process. The long black guns are loaded with 80 pounds of grain and then sealed. The guns move on their carriages into oil furnaces which treat them to a heat of 500 degrees. All the moisture in the grain is turned to steam. Additional live steam is added, and when the gun is discharged into a huge wired enclosure, it explodes like a small cannon, scattering whirring grains for many yards about it.

This steam explosion breaks down every starch cell in the grains, but some, of course, explode more completely than others, and here again, a carfull selection is made of only the most perfect grains, while the imperfect grains go off in chutes to the feed mills.

Not Touched By Hand.

While mechanical methods are adopted for many operations, a small army of Peterborough people is employed in the Quaker Oats Mill. The most perfect milling and packing appliances leave much for the human hands to do, yet no product of the Quaker Mills is touched by human process commences.

Neatness and cleanliness are the rule thoughout the whole plant. All the flavor and purity of the grains are preserved for users of Quaker products in Canada and foreign lands.

GOD GIVES ALL

Almighty God or Jesus Christ? Not one word. They were harping continually during the war on the duty of the church in trying to bring it to an end, but afterwards, did they turn to God in thanksgiving for His mercy?

"We have the same three classes in the church itself. There are church-people who never say their prayers and never kneel down in worship of their Crator. They have the proud, arrogant tone of mind that will not bring them to their knees before their Maker. There is the awful spirit, too, that creeps into churches and paralyzes them, the spirit of whispering and calumny against a fellow-creature. When a young man sins in some way, they turn from him. And there is the spirit in the churches which makes a big thing of some small happening, that is constantly on the lookout for what they term "high church" practices." The speaker referred to the action of a certain village congregation in condemning as 'high church' the action of a young penitent man in kneeling before the table before service, and the condemnation of a minister by his congregation for deviating toward 'high church' ways.

The sermon concluded with an admonition to clergy and congregation alike, to do their utmost to make the church 'spotless, pure and righteous.'

Better Health for Women

Any woman who will stop and consider the result of a questionnaire recently sent out by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Cobourg, Ont., will in all fairness admit the value of this old-fashioned root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Fifty thousand replies were received, and 98 out of every 100 women stated they had been benefited or restored to health by its use. This means better health for women in America. It will surely pay any woman who suffers from any ailment or weakness peculiar to her sex to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

DOESN'T WANT TO BE LIKE "OTHER GIRLS"

ROSALIE BIMBO, GIPSY PRINCESS.

BY GEORGE BRITT.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26. — "The gipsy life is the life for me," sings Rosalie, flapper daughter of King Tiny Bimbo, sovereign of a populous tribe of gipsies.

A taste of homesickness and three days' withdrawal from the freedom of the open road cured the desire in the heart of this 16-year-old princess to 'be like American girls."

"I want my hair in braids beside my head and not bobbed," announces Rosalie after her trial of conventional ways.

Likes School.

"I want to eat with my fingers around campfire and not with a knife and fork. I like my purple flowered skirt with its yards and yards of cloth, instead of the skimpy skirts other girls wear.

"I want to go to school, yes, and my father has promised that I may little baby sister. And then I get to our camp and take care of my littel babyq siste. And when I get get married, I want a gipsy 'rom' and not an American man."

Which attitude of Rosalie's, although it may be abhorrent to the missionaries of culture, solves the problem for the juvenile court authorities here. The girl came voluntarily to them, renounced fortune telling and all the other arts of Romany and said she wished to live as an American.

Changes Mind.

What to do When her father stormed into court to demand her back again, Rosalie summoned up all her persuasiveness, winking her brown eyes and smiling appealingly at the judge himself. She didn't want to go home not then.

There remained the possibilities of sending her to boarding school and of finding a place for her in some private home. Neither seemed practicable. Rosalie waited and changed her mind.

So returns the first rebel in King Bimbo's tribe. His women he has kept uneducated and sternly disciplined. Rosalie won her concessions and is on the way to overriding both of his fundamental principles. But she has tried the ways of America civilization and wants them no more.

"That check apron the juvenile court gave me to wear—didn't suit me; I fit into gipsy clothes," she says. "It is just like that with other American ways. I belong with our gipsies."

FLOSSMOOR LINKS GREAT TEST FOR AMATEUR CROWN.

Golf Championship Will Be Decided During Eight Days, Commencing on Sept. 15.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26 (Associated Press).—Over nearly four miles of velvety turf at the Flossmoor Country Club, the national amateur golf championship will be decided during the eight days beginning September 15, and Jess Sweetser of New York, who won the title last year, will be there to defend his honors against a number of former champions and several score sterling golfers who have yet to feel the crown on their brow.

The Flossmoor links is one of the greatest tests of golf in the world, according to experts, having a par of 74, for its regular length of 6,508 yards. Several of the holes will use new tees far enough back of the regular driving places to make the distance nearly 7,000 yards, although par will remain the same. Seldom does a good golfer break through perfect figures on the difficult course, and only once in competition has anyone broken 70.

The course lies 25 miles south of Chicago's business centre, and is laid out over rolling ground, bedecked on several holes by trees and broken on four holes by rather precipitous hills of moderate height. Butterfield creek threatens to engulf misplayed shots on five fairways, and one hole claims as its only fairway a pond that reaches from tree to green, the ensemble all but canopied by trees.

The grass is verdant and even, making the lies on the fairways perfect, while the putting greens are as true as carpet, despite their undulations, which test the skill of the putter.

Saturday will be devoted to elimination of supernumerary players. Sunday will be given over to practice and driving contests, and on Monday the qualification will decide which 32 players are best fitted to play off the 36-hole matches for the title.

While Sweetser will be a favorite of many, the almost impossible task of repeating two years in succession will lead others to favor Bobby Jones of Atlanta, national open champion, who has averaged close to 70 for all rounds played thus far this year; Chick Evans of Chicago who lost the finals to Sweetser last year, or some of the other stars who have been playing good golf this season.

The Flossmoor links, without counting the extra distances from the back tees, opens with a 512 yard hole, whose fairway bends to the right, with a fade-away green, but ar[illegible] 5 [illegible]ners are avoided by placement. Then follows a short hole of 175 yards, whose main difficulty consists of bunkers around the green, which, however, opens safely to the tee. This will be lengthened about 50 yards.

The real difficulty begins at the third hole, 550 yards regularly, but nearly 600 yards for the tournament, where even the finest pair of shots can scarcely hope to get home to the uphill green, for the creek runs along the bottom of the slope leading to the flag. Most golfers are pleased to get a par 5 on this brassie challenger.

While the 4th hole, 333 yards, is a par 4, Ned Allis of Milwaukee, once made it when slightly shorter, in one stroke, setting what has been taken as a world's record cuckoo, considering the distance, and the fact that the fairway drops off into a deep valley, 175 yards from the tee and rises sharply between Scylla and Charybdis bunkers to the hillside green.

It is no easy matter to reach the 447 yard 5th green in 2, for, if one commands the distance, the pear-shaped carpet is difficult to land on, for it is beset by yawning traps, and it lacks only 4 yards of being a par 5 hole. The 6th hole is 415 yards, but can provide varied entertainment for the unwary player as it curls around a corpse to the right, and an overapproach will find the pond.

Then comes the gem of the course, the 126 yard 7th, furnishing 126 compellers to perfect golf to make the par 3. The circular pond laps the tee and leaves the near edge of the green, set among great trees, whose branches fairly reach over its meagre proportions and whose roots form the bottom of surrounding sand traps.

The 330-yard fairway of the 330-yard 8th, ambles through the woods, and if the wary golfer escapes the trees, he must approach exactly over a maze of bunkers to the half hidden green to win his par 4. The 9th hole is up-hill, with a deflection to the left near the green, 382 yards from the tee, but the par 4 is comparatively easy. The perfect player will have accumulated 36 strokes to this point for the 3,270 yards of the first half, measuring only from the forward tees.

Homeward bound, the golfer must evade many bunkers on the down hill fairway of the 483-yard 10th hole, whose green is hidden in a valley, coming into view only when the playe, is at the edge of a plateau that forms its approach. Then the contestant shoots from the valley over a yawning sand pit of wide extent to the plateau green, normally 138 yards away, but nearly 200 from the new rear tee. Owing to the high trajectory required to gain the elevated green, the shot must be the equivalent of 220 yards on the level, and the ball must stick when it lands, for the green is in a circle of traps.

The 447-yard 12th crosses the creek vallev, the drive being from the plateau of the 11th green to a hogback hill, 300 yards out. To carry the burn calls for a whale of a drive, but unless the tee shot carries the brook, 250 yards, the brassie cannot get home to the blind green over the high hill.

This long hole is followed by the baby 13th, only 109 yards, but one of the greatest trouble makers in golfdom. The tee is among the trees on a hill, and the short fairway is lined with oaks, while the sloping green is terraced into the hillside 25 feet below the tee level, with traps all around. It is an easy 3, but may be a hard 4.

The 14th, 296 yards from the regular tee, has been the easiest hole on the course, but the tee has been moved back about 100 yards, so that it is a dogleg to the right through big trees and up-grade, and the par 4 will not be easy. But the par 4 on the 434-yard 15th will be harder, for the second shot must carry the rivulet that runs along the near edge of the green.

This brings the golfer to three of the hardest finishing holes in the world, according to leading golfers who have played them. The 350-yard 16th, is known as Port Arthur, because of its seemingly embattled green, which lies in the side of a steep hill. Sand streams seem to trickle down the embankment below the green, and traps are on the other sides. Despite the warlike aspect of the hole, it looks easy, and that is where the fun begins.

If the player gets his par 4 on the 16th, he cannot say that the 461-yard 17th looks easy, for after driving from the hillside tee, over a 300-yard moor, he finds himself compelled not only to carry the creek, but to reach the hog-back green on top of a high bluff, and while the length of the hole is only 11 yards over a par 4, many a sterling golfer has taken 6 on the hole, and even more.

Then the 490-yard 18th, a boomerang to the right, furnishes as deterrents a willow banked brook 175 yards out from the high tee, woods to the left, rough to the right and traps everywhere for the drive. And if the tee shot is made well, the struggler after a birdie 4, must lay on mightily to fetch the green in 2, for it is not only on a hill, but has a world of undulations to trickle the ball away from the coveted spot unless nicely placed and sharply cut.

The inward journey from regular tees covers 3,238 yards, but the back tees add some 200 more yards, leaving the par, however, at 38 for a total of 74.

FOOD VALUE OF BEER

Sir Sydney Russell Wells, the British physician, who is a Member of Parliament for London University, has thrown a bomb among the prohibitionists in Great Britain by publishing the subjoined dissertation upon the merits and demerits of tea and beer:

"We have heard of the extreme iniquity of taxing sugar and tea, and also of the iniquity of the man who drinks beer. Let us examine these statements in the light of cold facts. Tea is an article of inestimable value to men and women, and it is argued that it should never be taxed because it is a food. On the other hand, it is said that beer is not food.

"What are the real facts? Tea is a pure drug without the slightest food value of any sort or character. It is a drug pure and simple. Beer, on the other hand, while it contains alcohol, also contains food, and the amount of nutriment in a glass of beer is very considerable. It is not in the alcohol, it is in the other substances of which the beer is composed.

"The man who drinks a cup of tea is taking a drug pure and simple. The man who drinks a glass of beer, while he is taking something that stimulates him, is also taking a food."

CABINET MAY RESIGN.

TORONTO SEEKING ENQUIRY AT JAIL

Head of Jail Farm Will Not be Discharged Without Hearing.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—If there is an inquiry demanded into W. J. Morrison's administration of the jail farm, Provincial Secretary Lincoln Goldie will grant one, but he is not likely to discharge the superintendent on sayso of Toronto City Council. This much was gathered yesterday from discussion with Hon. Mr. Goldie of the action of the City Council in demanding his discharge.

"I'm not going to discharge any man without hearing both sides of the case," stated Provincial Secretary, when asked what action would likely be taken.

"The Major was in to see me today, and asked that he be given an opportunity to state his case, and I think that would be only fair."

BE CAUTIOUS OF SUBSTITUTES

There are several medicines on the Canadian market to relieve Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, but there is one preparation that seldom fails to give quick relief and for that reason Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are in a class by themselves.

This statement is vouched for by well known residents of this city. For instance Mr. Arthur Pinch, well known in the city, states that he was unable to work and suffered severe pains from backache, but after using three boxes of Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills, he was able to go back to work and is as well as ever.

Mr. Thos. Oldham, another well known Simcoe street resident, has no hesitation in saying that for Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, there is no equal of Dr. Banta's Pills.

Never neglect Kidney Ailments as they are liable to lead to other complications, but always keep on hand a box of Banta's Pills. If they fail to do what we claim for them, return your box to your dealer and your money will be refunded.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are sold at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street. Mail orders attended to promptly. m.w.-84

Hon. Mr. Drury, it was stated last evening by one who was Privy to his political intentions will give his formal refusal to be a candidate to the Progressive Convention shortly to be held in Lennox. MOUNT OLIVET FOWL SUPPER

Fittingly Concluded 50th Anniversary Celebration by Methodists Near Codrington—200 Guests Were Present.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 26.—the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of Mount Olivet Church near Codrington, which began with special services on Sunday was concluded Monday evening, with a fowl supper served by the ladies of the congregation who have for years been noted for their proficiency in the culinary art and who more than maintained thier reputation on this occasion. The tables were set out in the open air on the church lawn and over 200 guests were served. After supper the audience gathered in the church where a musical programme was rendered by the choir and well known local soloists and a number of addresses were delivered. Rev. E. W. Caffley, Norham, pastor of the circuit presided and in his open ing address gave some interesting reminiscences of the congregation, including a list of the ministers, who occupied the pulpit for the past 30 years. The records of the congregation, however, are incomplete and of those who attended the dedicatory services 50 years ago, eight were present at the gathering last night.

Mr. Caffley read letters from two former pastors, Rev. S. W. Sharpe now in the Montreal Conference, and Rev. S. Cruickshanks, superannuated, Peterborough, both expressing regret that they were unable to accept the invitation to be present and sending message of good will to their former charges. It is 31 years since Mr. Cruickshanks first came to Mount Olivet and his work was so acceptable that some years later he was invited back for a second term.

D. H. Orser, one of the oldest living members, gave an address, dealing with the early struggles and later successes of the congregation with which he has spent his life time. He referred to the early officials, thise striking pioneer and devoted Christians, long since called to their reward, and suggested that a picture of each be obtained and hung up behind the pulpit as a memorial.

Mr. and Mrs. Orser were members of the Mount Olivet choir for over 30 years. One of the most pleasing features of the entertainment was a duet rendered by them. "Old Friends," a song that was a favorite with them in their younger days. Mr. Orser playing the accompaniment. His right hand is somewhat crippled with rheumatism but he has not yet lost the delicacy of touch for which he was noted when he was the regular organist of the church and his voice is still clear and powerful. Mrs. Orser, too, sang last night in rich soprano tones as sweet and steady as in the days when her musical talent was in its heyday. The singers were heartily applauded by the audience.

Other items on the programme were: An address on the country church by Rev. J. R. Bick of Wooler; recitation by Miss Dora Philp, teacher of the Mount Olivet school, solos by S. H. Turner of Orland, accompanied by Mrs. Turner, solo by Master Eddie Turner, recitation by Miss Jessie Sharpe, and an address by Major Belford M.L.A.

The latter recalled the days when he attended the public school adjoining the church when the daily attendance was over 100; a striking comparison with the number of children in the section to-day.

"That," said the Mayor, "is a fact to be regretted. The number of children born in Canada, is regrettably small and we are forced to bring in immigrants from Europe to supplement our population. This is one of the outstanding menaces to the national life of our country. The birth rate is falling off."

The recipts last evening amounted to over $100 and the collection on Sunday totalled $18.

STRIKES CRIPPLING IRISH FREE STATE

President Cosgrave Urges Fewer Luxuries Than The People Have Been Accustomed To.

DUBLIN, Sept. 26.— (Canadian Press.)—Strikes in various trades in Dublin and provinces, which are crippling the Irish Free State's industrys, have provoked appeals for government intervention. President Cosgrave, on adjournment of the Dail yesterday, answered appeals by issuing a statement in which he blamed employers and workers equally for the position. Cost of production must be reduced, he said, and people must be content with fewer luxuries than they had been accustomed to.

Mr. Cosgrave added that the government would finance a housing plan if it was assured of co-operation of employer and employed.

NO TONNAGE AVAILABLE FOR GRAIN SHIPPING

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—At the close of the Winnipeg grain market to-day no tonnage whatever was available for the moving of grain from Canadian lake head termihals. Demands for space to Buffalo and Bay ports met a blank wall. A direct result of the tonnage situation was a decline of 2 1-2 cents in the premium on cash wheat, which is now only half a cent a bushel over October futures as compared with 20 cents over two weeks ago.

BANKS WARNED OF ANOTHER HOLD-UP

Letter Received by Toronto Manager was Passed Around.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press.)— Banking circles were stirred yesterday afternoon by posting at all head offices of city banks of a circular warning officials that another hold-up by bandits, similar to that of July 24, might be carried out on city streets to-day. Circulars were sent to city banks by A. B. Barker, manager of Toronto clearing house, who had received a letter telling him of another contemplated raid. The letter said that this time the attack would be made upon automobiles of the Dominion bank, between the clearing house and the head office of the bank. Whether or not Mr. Barker took the letter seriously is not known, but he regarded the communication of sufficient importance to send out a circular to the banks.

FRONT WHEEL BRAKES ADOPTED BY MARMON

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 17.—Front wheel brakes are now furnished as optional equipment on Marmon cars at $125.00 additional list. The new brakes are connected with the standard rear wheel linkage, which is unchanged in the application except for an extension on the brake pedal, employed to actuate the front wheel linkage. — Motor World, Sept. 19th, 1923.

PROMPT RELIEF WHEAT FARMERS

President Coolidge And Cabinet Consider Proposals.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press.)— Various proposals for prompt relief of wheat farmers of the United States were given consideration yesterday by President Coolidge and his cabinet. Further consideration, however, was decided upon before any definite action is taken.

Secretary Wallace suggested twenty-five per cent. reduction in freight rates and establishment of an agricultural export commission or corporation with broad powers.

It was also suggested that tariff rates on wheat be increased to 45c. a bushel, but both proposals met objection of administration officials.

Secretary Wallace said the United States' government had very definite responsibilty, because the country could not hope to have general prosperity until fair price relationships between agriculture, industry, commerce and labor were restored. He had little faith in efficiency of arbitrary price fixing.

FIVE TENDERS FOR NEW ONTARIO LOAN

None of Them Will Be Accepted — Province to Carry On.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press.)— Five tenders were opened yesterday by Provincial Treasurer W. H. Price, K.C., on Ontario's $30,000,000 loan offer, but none of them was accepted. The best offer would have meant 5.35 per cent. money for the province which, although regarded as pretty fair in view of market conditions, was viewed by Hon. Mr. Price as not quite good enough for Ontario's 25 year loan proposition. Province can carry on quite well for a few months by temporary financing.

Although big Federal loan is immediate cause of Ontario government's postponement of loaning, the Japanese disaster and the Greco-Italian situation have also had a bearing upon market conditions.

RECORD MOVEMENT OF WESTERN WHEAT CROP

WINNIPEG, Man., Setp. 26. — (Canadian Press).—With 2,281 cars loaded and 4,819,838 bushels marketed, Monday was a record day for the movement of western Canada's grain crop according to information obtained from local railway offices yesterday afternoon. The Canadian National reported marketing 1,966,000 bushels and loading, 1,148 cars, while marketings on the Canadian Pacific Railway totalled 2,853,838 bushels, and loadings 1,139 cars.

PROCEED WITH LAYING OF SEWERS IN CAMPBELLFORD

Council in Special Session Decide On This Course —Willing Workers Make Presentation to Mrs. C. H. Harris at Regular Meeting.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 26. — The Town Council at a special meeting, every member being present except Councillor Meiklejohn, who was in Toronto on business, decided to proceed at once with the construction of the sewers on Ranney and Rear streets. The work on the first will be done under the supervision of Town Foreman Fox, but the contract for the other will be let by tenders.

The Ranney street sewer is urgent, being required to provide drainage for the new High school building. Nearly every resident on that thoroughfare has signed the petition for the improvement, which will serve one of the best residential sections of the town. This sewer will connect with the one on Bridge street, and its entire length is 1,451 feet. Engineer Hayes has made the survey and his estimate of the cost is $4,313. As the town owns some lots on Ranney street and must, on that account, pay more than its usual share of the expense, the levy on the adjoining property owners will amount to only $1 a year per lineal foot.

Reeve Anderson called attention to the fact that the Garry street sewer, now nearly completed, will cost the benefitted ratepayers about $275 a lineal foot and he regarded the difference between that and the Ranney street sewer levy as an injustice. No house owner, he argued, should be penalized because he lived in a less favoured section of the town than some of his fellow citizens.

The town built the Garry Street sewer with its own labor and it is now finished for about half the distance, and the excavation for the remainder will soon be ready for the laying of the pipe. One reason why this sewer will cost more than that on Ranney street is that the water main on the latter thoroughfare is already in.

The Reeve also objected to further delay in building the Rear street sewer, which will be carried down River street to the canal, and a petition for which, properly signed, has been before the Council for over a year.

On motion of the Reeve, seconded by Deputy Reeve Wilkinson, it was decided to let this work by contract and to advertise for tenders at once. The engineer's estimate of the cost is understood to be ready and will be submitted to the Council at a subsequent meeting.

Presentation to Mrs. Harris.

The Willing Workers of Christ Church held their first meeting since the summer vacation in the Parish Hall on Monday evenng ,with about 35 members present. The society was organised for the coming season's activities by the election of the following officers:

President, Mrs. E. Cassan.

First vice-president, Miss Jennie Martin.

Second vice-president, Mrs. Burling.

Secretary, Miss Alta Smith.

Treasurer, Miss Lily Smith.

After the regular business had been disposed of, Mrs. C. H. Harris, who was president last year, was presented with an ivory-bound prayer book by her associate members as a memento on the occasion of her departure form town to make her home in Toronto, for which city she left this morning.

Mrs. Harris' husband was former manager of the Campbellford branch of the Bank of Montreal, but at the beginning of the present year he was promoted to a position on the staff of inspection. But up to the present Mrs. Harris and her children resided here.

Mrs. Harris is a native of the town, a life-long member of Christ Church, and one of the charter members of the Willing Workers, a society that has always been active in the work of the parish. Her colleagues esteem her as one of the most energetic workers in every branch of the service, and her departure has occasioned general and universal regret. Her usefulness as a citizen was not confined to the limits of Christ Church Parish, but every call for service anywhere in the interests of humanity always met with a ready response on her part. She was prominent in every social function and leaves her native town esteemed by all classes in the community.

After the members had expressed their appreciation of Mrs. Harris' service, and regret at her departure all sat down to a sumptuous banquet served in the dining-room of the hall.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Douglas wish to thank the neighbours and friends who were so kind to them during their sad bereavement, also for the floral tributes, and those who so kindly lent their autos.

LORD RENFREW AT HOME.

EDMONTON, Sept. 25. — Lord Renfrew will be "at home" to the Alberta shorthorn breeders' association at the "E. P." ranch on Thursday.

A picnic will be held at the ranch and Premier Herbert Greenfield and Hon. George Hoadley, Provincial Minister of Agricultural, will attend along with the breeders of the province.

WILL PREVENT MEETING.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Administration officials late last night decided to prevent members of the Oklahoma State Legislature from meeting today in the Federal Building in Oklahoma.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Miles Sheridan, made wretched by his wife's infidelity is attempting to facilitate her obtaining a divorce by creating a scandal about himself. To this end, he offers $20,000 to

Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl known as the Million Dollar Doll if she will take a yacht trip with him. Juliet is unable to go, herself, but greedy for the money she persuades

Teresa Desmond (Terry) her lovely and unbelievably innocent half-sister, an exquisite counterpart of herself, to go in her stead, masquerading as the Million Dollar Doll. Ever since a kindness Miles did her in her childhood, Terry has made him her Dream Prince, and now she is grateful for the opportunity of serving him.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife, is in love with

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, who does not know of Terry's relationship to Juliet, is in love with the younger girl.

Mrs. Harkness, Miles' old servant, prepared to hate the "Million Dollar Doll" is won over by Terry's sweetness and charm. Miles has stipulated that he will have nothing to do with the girl, on the voyage, but already his resolve is wavering. He does not recognize the little girl whom he befriended so long ago, but he is surprised to find the notorious Juliet Divine so girlishly charming. In order to make the scandal known, he appears at Monte Carlo with the girl.

Miss Caroline Sheridan, Miles' aunt, is surprised to meet her nephew in Monte Carlo.

CHAPTER I.

A Startling Occurrence

He introduced the two by name. That of Miss Divine conveyed nothing to Miss Sheridan, at the moment.

"Divine—Divine?" she murmured benevolently. "What a beautiful name! So suggestive—so worth living up to! And no doubt, you do. But I'm sure I've never had the pleasure of meeting any members of your family, or I shouldn't have forgotten. May I ask, are your people from Boston—or New York—or perhaps from Washington?"

"I—my father is Irish," the girl answered.

"Ah, is Divine an Irish name, then?" persisted the lady. "That interests me. I make quite a study of names."

"I don't know," Terry had to reply.

"Well, do come and sit down, and we'll talk about it, and about quantities of things," continued Miss Sheridan, in a sprightly way. She was expensively yet dowdily dressed, and Terry could see from her figure that she was fitted into stiff corsets of the old-fashioned kind. Her hat, however, was too young in shape for her fifty odd years, and her hair was either dyed, or a wig. She seemed a curious mixture of intense respectability, and a vain clinging to youth.

Once, long ago, a woman had come to the Blue Moon bringing tracts; and though Miss Sheridan was of a different class, she was vaguely of the same type, with her prominent teeth, her thin nose pink-tipped with excitement, and her pale, fanatical blue eyes.

"I'm sorry, Aunt Caroline," Miles objected, when she would have slipped a hand under his arm. "We can't stop now, as I have to show Miss Divine something of Monte this morning, and take her into the Casino. It's late already."

"But you haven't told me anything about yourself!" squeaked Miss Sheridan. "Where you came from—"

"I've got my yacht in the harbor," he said.

"Ah, that's delightful!" exclaimed his aunt. "Are you coming over to see me at Mentone this afternoon, or shall I bring a couple of friends and pay you a visit on board? I should like to do that, and if you'll ask us to dine, dear boy, we can see the fireworks in honor of the Prince's birthday. That won't be like visiting Monte Carlo itself, you know—which I never do, on principle, for mere pleasure."

Miles' face hardened. "I should be glad to entertain you on board 'Silverwood,' dear Aunt Caroline," he said, "but for reasons I can't explain now—you're sure to hear very soon—I can't possibly do it. You would be annoyed with me later if I did."

Miss Sheridan's nose suddenly looked more pointed than before. A queer resemblance to a fox came out, an amiable, yet prying fox. "Why, that sounds very odd and so disappointing!" she murmured. "Are there people on board whom I know and don't like?"

"It isn't that," Miles said. "Suppose you just take me on faith, and we drop the subject, shall we? I'll try to run over to Mentone and see you before we go."

"We?" Miss Sheridan snapped him up. "Who are 'we'? Who are your guests on board the yacht? Surely you can tell me that? I'm certain to find out, anyhow."

"Yes, I just told you that you're certain to find out. This isn't the time to enter into explanations—"

"Ah!" Miss Sheridan sharply cut him short. "I see—I fear that I begin to see. I have heard rumors. I hope they're not true—that you and Betty have quarrelled? You would not have introduced persons on board whom she could not know? But I won't force you to discuss these private affairs before a young girl like Miss Divine. We must have a talk later." She turned to Terry. "Forgive me, my dear," she said. "I fear I forgot your presence for a moment. Are your parents with you at Monte Carlo?"

"No," said Terry.

"We must go, Aunt Caroline," Miles broke in.

"In a minute—if you must. Do let me have a few words with Miss Divine! I should like you to tell me where you're staying with your people, my dear. It would be pleasant to meet you again."

"I—none of my people are with me," Terry stammered.

Miss Sheridan opened her near-sighted blue eyes. "Your people—not with you? But you're so young! You aren't travelling alone?"

"No—o," said the girl.

"Then who is your chaperon, my dear child? I may know—"

Terry glanced up at Miles. Desperation was in his eyes, and a hint of trouble which, if he'd been a woman, she would have thought hysterical. It was the look which a woman has when she knows not whether to laugh or cry. He shrugged his shoulders in response to the question in her glance, and Terry guessed what that shrug meant. "Mr. Sheridan is my chaperon," she answered.

The effect was electrical. "What?" shrieked the lady, starting back. "You don't mean—no, no, you can't mean—you're not on his yacht with him—alone?"

"Yes," the girl said. "Except for Mrs. Harkness. And the captain. And the crew."

Miss Sheridan's face became very red, then pale, all but the fatal point of the nose. "This is terrible—terrible news for me," she gasped. "I—don't know what to do about it."

"There's nothing to do about it," said Miles. "You would have it, you know!"

"My poor dead brother, and sweet dead sister-in-law!" Miss Sheridan moaned. "And your unhappy wife! Something must be done. Oh!" and she looked at Terry—"My poor, misguided girl! You must be rescued. My nephew must be rescued. You must be saved from each other."

"I don't think we can be," said Miles. "It's too late. You must let us go our way, and forget us."

"That I will not do," answered Miss Sheridan, and without another word of farewell, she walked back to her table, and her half-drunk mineral water, a look of exalted resolution on her face.

"That was rather a sickener," the girl heard her companion mumble.

"I—perhaps I ought to tell you, Mrs. Harkness means to go to Mentone, to call on Miss Sheridan this afternoon," Terry ventured, timidly.

"A pity she couldn't have seen my aunt before my aunt saw us," Miles growled. "It would have spared you as well as me a disagreeable quarter hour. We'd better slip into the Casino, I think. We can't go on walking up and down the terrace, passing her each time. I'd rather pass an uncaged lion!"

Terry did not reply. She shrank back then, half stopped, and instinctively laid her hand on Sheridan's arm.

Miles was astonished. A glance at the girl showed him that her sudden emotion was not from illness, or a stumble that had hurt; she had seen a face that startled her.

A tall, dark man was strolling towards them. Sheridan recognized the face. It was that of Eustace Nazlo, known as the "Shoe King."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE LONG-FACED COMMITTEE

One morning when Mister Gallop and his guests, Nancy and Nick, were eating their breakfast in the fairyman's red-rock cave, there was a timid, scratching sound at the entrance.

"Come in!" called Mister Gallop.

And to their surprise, instead of one person, in walked a dozen people, all looking as solemn as a Quaker meeting.

"Good morning, sirs!" said Mister Gallop. "Is anything wrong? Judging from the way you're all looking, it can't be anything right. What is it?"

Mister Prairie Dog, still puffing from his climb (for he never could stand mountains) looked at Mister Gopher, Mister Gopher looked at Mister Field Mouse, Mister Field Mouse looked at Mister Cotton Tail, Mister Cotton Tail looked at Mister Grey Squirrel, Mister Grey Squirrel looked at Mister Chipmunk, Mister Chipmunk looked at Mister Water Shrew, Mister Water Shrew looked at Mister Beetle, Mister Beetle looked at Mister Snail, and Mister Snail looked at Mister Grasshopper. But poor Mister Grasshopper had nobody to look at.

So he got up his courage and spat tobacco juice on the ground and said weakly:

"We're a committee, sir! We came to tell on 'Piggy' Badger. We call him 'Piggy' because he digs with his nose and he's got a dreadful appetite. Besides he's as fat as a haystack. That's why we came. Because he's so fat. He gets fat on us—and no matter where we or our families hide, he roots us out with his long, sharp nose, and it's getting so bad nobody's safe any more."

"Well, well, well! I'm glad you came," said Mister Gallop. "I'll 'tend to this 'Piggy' fellow at once. I never see him around, so I thought he had moved away."

"No, sir, he comes out mostly after sundown," said Mister Prairie Dog. "Then he's sure to find us at home."

"Well, go home now to your families," said the cowboy fairy, "and Nancy and Nick and I will have a little hunting trip of our own today."

"Oh, thank you, Mister Gallop!" they all said together. "We're ever so much obliged. 'Piggy' Badger lives in a sandy place on the edge of the plain, if you want to know. He lives there so he can hunt in both directions."

"Don't worry!" Mister Gallop assured them. "We'll jump on our ponies and look him up at once."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

LIMA BEANS

With the coming of autumn the vegetables gain a certain substantialness and richness not found in the more delicate summer vegetables. It's probably just a bit of old mother nature's eternal vigilance that as we need heartier food to prepare for cold weather it is forthcoming.

Lima beans are a heartier food than the string beans of early summer and to my way of thinking twice as delicious. They must be gathered before the milk inside the tender shell covering "sets." Then the wonderful creaminess of the vegetable is preserved in the cooking. It is this creaminess that gives them name of "butter" beans. There are several varieties of lima beans, tiny green ones, large green ones and large flat white ones. As the beans ripen the covering grows hard and difficult to digest and the centre becomes firm and dry. No matter how long the beans are cooked these conditions cannot be altered.

Beans are lacking in fat, so this should be supplied in the dressing.

One pint of shelled lima beans will serve four persons.

Lima Beans in Cream.

One pint lima beans, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup cream, 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Wash beans and drain. Drop in boiling water and cook 30 to 40 minutes. When the beans are half cooked add salt. Let the water cook away. Add cream and pepper and bring to the boiling point, but do not let boil. Serve at once. If cream is out of the question try this sauce:

Sauce.

Two tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon flour, ½ cup milk, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon sugar.

Cook beans as in preceding recipe. Melt butter, stir in flour. Do not let the butter and flour turn color, but be sure they are perfectly blended. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Add sugar and pepper and bring to the boiling point. Add beans and serve. The sauce should be the consistency of thick cream and coat the beans.

Luncheon Beans.

One pint lima beans, 2 cups milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon butter, 3 eggs.

Wash beans and cook 20 minutes in boiling salted water to cover. One half teaspoon of salt should be added after 10 minutes' cooking. Drain from water and rub through wire sieve or potato ricer. Beat yolks of eggs until thick and lemon colored. Scald milk and add with bean puree, butter, salt and pepper. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry on a platter with a wire whisk. Fold in first mirture. Turn into a well-buttered baking dish and bake half an hour in a moderate oven.

Succotash.

One pint lima beans, 2 cups corn cut from cob, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup milk.

Wash beans and cook in boiling water for 20 minutes. The beans should be half done. Add corn and cook 20 minutes longer. Let the water cook away as much as possible. Stir after adding corn to prevent burning. Add milk, butter and salt and bring to the boiling point, but do not let boil. Serve in "side" dishes.

Trouble is Entirely Over Says Mrs. Holland

"Since taking Tanlac I'm getting more joy out of life than ever before, for my health is just perfect," said Mrs. Lillian Holland, 97 Gore St., Hamilton, Ont.

"Tanlac relieved me of an awful case of stomach trouble three years ago and built me up twelve pounds in weight, and since then I've used it each year as a spring tonic, and it keeps me feeling just fine. For four years before I took Tanlac I suffered untold agony. My appetite was so poor I couldn't eat as much as a year old baby and many times I was afraid to eat a meal, knowing only too well how indigestion would torture me afterwards. I had such severe pains in my sides and the pit of my stomach I could hardly stand up, and every bone in my body ached. Even a little tea would cause such a stuffed up feeling I could hardly get my breath. I was so nervous I seldom got more than three or four hours sleep at night, and felt so weak and tired all the time I was simply miserable.

"My sister used Tanlac with such good results that I decided to try it, and the medicine just made a new person of me. It surely is a blessing to be able to eat my meals in peace and enjoy them knowing I will not suffer afterwards, I sleep so well I never hear a sound from the time I retire until the alarm rings in the morning. My work never tires me, either. The fact is, all my troubles are gone, and I think Tanlac is simply grand."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are Nature's own remedy for constipation. For sale everywhere.

A WEEKLY BOOK REVIEW

BUTTERFLY, by Kathleen Norris (Doubleday, Page).

NEW BODIES FOR OLD, by Maurice Renard (Macaulay).

SINNERS IN HEAVEN, by Clive Arden (Bobbs-Merrill).

TALK ABOUT TRAVEL BOOKS

There has just been inaugurated in Atlanta, Ga., a circulating library in which all books must contain nothing but "love, sweetness and light." Books to be eligible to this library must have a happy beginning and a happy middle as well as a happy ending.

At the moment I can think of no better book to start this Atlanta library than "Butterfly," Kathleen Norris' latest. If ever a "glad" book was written this is it.

Whether "Butterfly" has an happy ending I can not say for certain. After getting three-fourths of the way through it I was stuck in its treacle.

Everyone in the story, so it seems, has "square, firm hands" and "beautiful mouths." Schoolgirl gush! Every moment of the least dramatic possibility is hammered down by platitudes. Action is always blanketed with excess verbiage so that its vitality is sapped.

* * *

The 346 pages of the book can be boiled down into less than that many words without losing any essential.

Hilary Collier lives and works for "Butterfly," an empty-headed sister. Hilary falls in love with the nephew of the proprietor of a canning factory where she works as secretary. "Butterfly" falls in love with him, too. Hilary has always sacrificed for her sister, so "Butterfly" marries the hero.

Later Hilary falls in love with a genius of the violin. "Butterfly" falls in love with him, also. But "Butterfly" already has a husband, so Hilary fools her there. She marries the violinist.

* * *

Perhaps this reviewer seems a bit harsh in his treatment of "Butterfly." The truth of the matter is that I am disappointed in Mrs. Norris. It is difficult to picture the author of so sound a work as "Certain People of Importance" as the author of so shallow a bit of flubdubbery as "Butterfly."

* * *

Recommended without qualification as a thriller is Maurice Renard's "New Bodies for Old." I enjoyed this book more than any I have read in months. Not since boyhood has a book made me afraid to go to sleep in the dark until I read this one. As a rule I'll pass up any book for any theatrical performance, even though I know the show will be a bad one. On the night I sat down to read "New Bodies for Old" I forgot all about a stage performance I was to have reviewed.

It's hardly fair to give away the plot of a thriller such as "New Bodies for Old." The plot hinges on the experiments of a doctor who has bridged the gap between animal and vegetable life. He is able to graft the tail of a rat as a plantain stem and to give trees animal instincts. Then he turns his attention to humans with blood-curdling results. A most excellent book for a windy, wintry evening.

* * *

Clive Arden won a prize in England for amateur novelists with a book which she calls "Sinners in Heaven." The opening chapters give the impression that this contest has uncovered a writer destined to rank with the leading novelists of the day. She has great facility in sketching her characters. The reader visualizes them on the instant of meeting. Life in a priggish, little English community is clearly depicted.

This high regard for the writer flops when the action and romance start. She throws her hero and heroine on a desert island. That situation has been sadly overworked and Miss Arden is unable to give it any new twist that lifts it from banality. When she stayed at home her characters were tractable. They completely overwhelmed her on the desert island.

* * *

A trap that always awaits the new writer is the dialogue of savage peoples. Dating from the time of Pocahontas there has been a generally accepted belief that all savages are poets, speaking in rhythmic and inverted sentences.

List to this speech by a cannibal on a South Sea Island, as Miss Arden interprets it in "Sinners in Heaven":

"There was not, O chief. The white woman appeared in my path as if sprung from the waving palm! The white man did fall from the skies, sending his bolt before him! The great white man is a giant, O my chief! His stride is swift as the flight of a bird; the flash of his eyes like the lightning which strikes our trees! He will not easily be killed!"

What present-day culture needs is a conversation of the poetic resources of all the savage peoples.

* * *

From a reader comes a request to name the six best books. I have no idea what the six best books are. Of recent fiction I have enjoyed most: "Time Is Whispering," "New Bodies for Old," "Fortune's Fool," "The Hawkeye," "A Son at the Front" (second half), "Bunk."

About Travel Books

Roughly speaking, we have in the Peterborough library about 1,200 books of travel, and they range in regard to their subject matter all over the habitable and uninhabitable globe. If you want to become conversant with the customs of the natives of Australia, or of the South Seas, or to take a leap to the frigid zone and accompany the northern voyagers in their quest for the Pole you can have your wants satisfied in an ample manner in the Public Library. If you prefer the quieter solace of enjoying the scenery of California or the rugged grandeur of the Canadian West it is yours for the asking.

It is astonishing how much of really entrancing interest lies in books that are standing neglected through months and years on our shelves. It is the more astonishing because books of travel, like biography, deal in such an intimate manner with the human race and we all know, how in small and large communities the doings of one's neighbors form such a large portion of tittle-tattle and surmise. But the great advantage possessed by books of travel lies in the fact that they are, in the main, true, and that the liars are soon detected. In older days when people were not such confirmed globe trotters as modern means of locomotion have enabled them to become men and women could occasionally indite fictitious adventures and pose as heroes. Psalmanazar was able to write a history of Formosan travel and compose a dictionary of the language which imposed on most of the learned men of the day in England. Dr. Johnson said he would as soon have thought of contradicting him as of contradicting a bishop, and hundreds of years before him Sir John de Mandeville had written a story of his travels in the East, but he lived in a more gullible age than even Psalmanazar and his writings consequently had a great vogue. It fell to succeeding generations to show that he was an impostor who had borrowed shamelessly from the works of other travellers and had added wonders and incidents from his own copious imagination in order to make the account plausible.

To talk to people who have travelled, to read of men and women who have travelled is bound to make us broader-minded, and more charitably inclined towards each other and towards the world in general. We can better visualize each other's difficulties and limitations and make a greater allowance for a nation's or an individual's shortcomings.

As a boy at school I had a friend of the name of Bradford. He was two or three years older than myself and on leaving school went into the merchant service. In those days voyages sometimes lasted for three or four years and it was quite that length of time till I saw him again. He came to visit his old school and had a tale to tell of his travels around the world which capped anything we had hitherto read of in books. His description of being awakened at night by a dagger tickling his throat and of finding himself in the grip of a Patagonian savage made our hair stand on end, and when he told us of how he escaped by using the unorthodox method of kicking his assailant in the stomach and sending him head over heels, our admiration was simply unbounded. We straightway went to work and read all about Patagonia, a subject which, if given us as lesson, would have been regarded as a task and not as a pleasure.

It is the personal element that always counts and the traveller talks to us as a friend among friends.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN EDUCATION, THIS CITY

The Educational Committee of the Y.M.C.A. at its last meeting made an important decision, and one that will be welcomed by many an ambitious young man in this city.

It was decided that among other courses this year, a course in Junior Matriculation should be offered to young men who for various reasons were not able or did not secure this standing in the Collegiate Institute.

This decision was made as the result of a number of requests from young men who are ambitious and who find Junior Matriculation necessary for their advancement in their chosen field of labour. Up to the present it has been impossible for any young man to pursue this course of study in Peterborough without returning to the Collegiate, and in many cases this would be practically impossible.

The course will be covered in three years, and the plans are in the hands of a strong and experienced committee, who are determined to provide the best teaching that can be secured, and this committee is confident that there will be an encouraging response on the part of ambitious young men.

Other courses offered this year are Public Speaking, Salesmanship, Business Letters and Reports, and Life Insurance Underwriting.

The Educational Committee have been careful to avoid arranging studies which may be undertaken at the Peterborough Technical School, and young men who are in need of training offered at the Technical School are being urged to enroll therein.

Information regarding any of the above courses may be had at the Y.M.C.A. Building. Those interested in Junior Matriculation are urged to decide at once as the course commences on 15th October.

WORLD'S SERIES OPENS IN NEW YORK OCT. 10

American League Champions Win the Toss — Giants Probable Contenders.

PRICES FIXED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press). — The 1923 World's Series will open on Wednesday, October 10, at the Yankee Stadium, home of the three-time American League champions and greatest baseball park in the country, regardless of whether the New York Giants or the Cincinnati Reds win the fight to represent the National League in the annual classic.

This was decided yesterday at a meeting of local club officials with Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, when Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, won the toss to decide which league should have the honor of opening the series.

"That's a good start anyway," said Col. Ruppert afterward. Last year the Yankees lost the toss, and also the series to their New York rivals.

Should the Giants stand off the eleventh hour challenge of the Reds and capture the pennant, thus making the series an all-metropolitan affair for three successive years, the title games will alternate between the Yankee Stadium and the Polo Grounds, until one club wins the necessary majority of four contests.

In the event that Cincinnati upsets calculations and wins the flag by a "miracle" finish, the first two games will be played in the Yankee Stadium and the next two at Redland Field, with a probable lapse of a day for the shifting of battlefields.

The scale of prices at both local parks will be similar to that of last year at the Polo Grounds, where the entire series was contested. The prices were $6 for box seats, $5 for reserved seats, $3 for general unreserved admission and $1 for bleachers. The scale that would prevail at Redland Field, in event Cincinnati wins, will be determined later.

The games will start at 2 p.m., the same as last year, it was further decided.

ATHLETICS WIN DOUBLE-HEADER

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25 — Philadelphia took both ends of a doubleheader from Cleveland to-day, winning the first game, 6 to 5 and the second, 5 to 1.

Roy Meeker, a recruit left-hander twirled for the Athletics in the second game and blanked the visitors until the ninth when two hits produced a run. He allowed but six hits throughout the contest. Score:

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Detroit Americans defeated New York in a closely contested game here today, 5 to 4 After the lead had alternated three times, Detroit won by scoring three runs on Sam Jones in the ninth, the result of four hits. After Heilmann was intentionally passed with the score tied, Veach singled, driving in Detroit's winning runs Meusel hit a home run and a triple for New York. Score:

MAGNATES WORRY OVER COST OF BALLS EACH MAJOR LEAGUE SET BACK $40,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Expenses for baseball have suddenly become a big worry for major league magnates. They will amount close to $80,000, merely to supply base balls for the season of 1923 in both major leagues.

The fact that in a recent game at St. Louis 68 balls were used in a game pitched by Dave Danforth against the New York club, was a startling bit of news as to the number of balls often needed to complete a ball game.

No doubt the fact that Danforth's pitching was under suspicion was the cause of so many new balls being used in the game that he worked. Danforth is said to have requested that 12 balls be put out of play because of some defect.

Every major league game is started with three dozen new balls. According to the umpires they are seldom able to finish a game with that number. Which means that 36 or more new balls are used in every big league contest.

Of this number perhaps one-third are confiscated by the fans, when a foul ball is batten into the stands. The concrete stands are also the cause of many balls being rendered unfit for play. Contact with the stand often so roughens the ball that it is dangerous to continue its use.

However, the ever-suspicious batter seems to be the cause of more balls being thrown out than from any other source. If a batter misses a swing, and particularly when he strikes out, he immediately requests that the umpire look at the ball for some defect which was responsible for his failure to knock the ball out of the lot.

"The cost of supplying baseballs for major league games has reached a staggering figure," remarks a prominent eastern club owner of the National League. "Twenty years ago my ball bill for the season ran from $700 to $1000. Last season it was something like $6000 and this year it looks as if it might reach $8000.

"The baseball bill of expense for 1923 will run close to $40,000 in each major league. I venture to say that 20 years ago it was about one-sixth of that amount in the National League."

Crack Pitcher Explains His Theory on Batting

CLEVELAND, Sept. 16.—George Uhle, star pitcher of the American League, is also a great batsman. This is rather the exception, as pitchers seldom shine as hitters.

Throughout the season Uhle has been well above the .300 mark and has been instrumental in winning many a game by his hitting coupled with fine pitching.

"There isn't any reason why pitchers shouldn't be able to bat well just as any other player. It's baseball tradition that pitchers are not supposed to hit and most pitchers take it for granted.

"Since they accept the tradition thtat pitchers are not supposed to hit, most of them pay little or no attention to their batting. If they paid no more attention to their pitching they would soon lose their effectiveness on the rubber.

"I take as much pride in my batting as I do my pitching. I have my batting practice regularly and I like to take a healthy cut at every ball that looks good. As a result, I have been successful as a batsman.

"My case, however, is not at all unusual. Every pitcher, if he gave as much time and attention to his batting as his pitching, would get correspondingly good results." third attempt found no culls what-

OSHAWA TALKS NEW BALL LOOP

Would Like to Hook Up With Section of Toronto Association.

Oshawa Reformer: Intense interest is being shown in recent developments in the baseball situation. Negotiations are now under way whereby Oshawa and Leaside will be included in a league comprised otherwise of Toronto teams. Local baseball officials were rather reluctant to release any information regarding the new proposition when interviewed today but were willing to admit that steps were being taken in that direction.

It is understood that both Oshawa and Leaside have been invited to participate in a section of the T.A.B.A. and that Oshawa would be given a game at home every Saturday with the local representatives playing in Toronto on Wednesdays. Conferences have been held in connection with the proposed circuit. The Reformer was given to understand and locals can rest assured that it is not a rumor which is being circulated.

The action being taken is not surprising considering the manner in which the affairs of the league have been run this past season. Oshawa officials and supporters as well are entirely dissatisfied with existing conditions, particularly with one official whom they declare takes more interest in the Oshawa Clubs business than his own official duties. The Oshawa Baseball Club do not wish to cause any trouble through violation of any rules and it is quite safe to say that the local baseball team is and always has been composed of amateurs in the same sense as Belleville and other clubs connected with the Ontario Baseball Association. Had the O.B.A.A. done its duty Belleville would not have been allowed to use either Oulette or Brownscombe this year. In reality they should have played in Lindsay or not at all. Harold Dainty experienced difficulty in obtaining a card this year but the A.A.U. of C. finally consented after searching in all the corners of the earth for something which would disqualify his amateur standing. Brownscombe's card was also withheld but Oshawa said nothing and would not have done so had they met defeat at the hands of the Grand Trunks.

Further than that had not Harold Dainty admitted he had not been a resident of Oshawa until March, Belleville would have been able to prove nothing against him. The information was evidently supplied them by someone who was closely in touch with the situation. In view of these facts, local fans feel that the Oshawa club is justified in considering linking up with some other league.

HAMS. EXPECT TO WIN SATURDAY

When Leafs Play Return With "2 and 1" Team.

"The Hams will have their hands full next Saturday but expect to pull out a winner and thereby cop the honors" says the Hamilton Spectator in its report of the Maple Leaf game there Saturday.

In all fairness to Bradley it must be said that he could have made a better impression on the fans if his team-mates had "bucked" up a bit, but, undoubtedly, the strange grounds had considerable to do with their defeat.

Kellar, Wiley, Wilson, Jarvis and Litzen all played a great game for the winners, while Johnson, Franks and Delahaye appeared the best for the losers. Wilson led with the stick, getting three hits in four trips to the plate, two being doubles. Gordon took matters much easier than his opponent, Bradley, who seemed content to work hard at all stages of the game. This fact alone gave the 2-in-1's a considerable advantage.

The locals were at all times masters of the situation, and their early lead was never threatened. Next Saturday the "Kids" play the return game in Peterboro, and if they emerge on the long end of the score when that battle has finished, Hamilton will have one Ontario championship tucked away for the 1923 baseball season.

TENNIS IS POPULAR IN THE LAKESHORE TOWNS

Whitby and Cobourg in a Friendly Match.

COBOURG, Sept. 26.—Tennis is gaining a great deal of prominence in lake front towns this season, and nowhere are there finer courts than at Cobourg. Several successful tourneys have been held here.

Tennis Players Win.

The Whitby Tennis Club played a friendly match with Cobourg here on Saturday, when the Cobourg players were successful in carrying off all of the seven events in the tourney. With the visitors were Professor and Mrs. George Brown, recent graduates of Victoria College. Professor Brown is now on the staff of the University of Chicago. Following were the results in the veruns events:

Miss C. Hayden and Mr. Cochrane defeated Miss Richardson and Dr. Scott, 6-0, 6-2.

Miss M. Hayden and Mr. M. L. Schultz, Cobourg defeated Miss M. Gillivory and Mr. Carruthers 6-1, 5-7, 6-2.

Miss J. Reynor and Miss E. Willsmott, Cobourg defeated Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Brown 6-4, 6-4.

Messrs. Schultz and Willmott defeated Messrs. Scott and Carruthers 6-2, 5-7, 8-6.

Messrs. Cochrane and Higginbotham defeated Misses Marshall and Brown, 6-3, 6-1.

Miss E. Willmott and Dr. Jamieson defeated Mr. and Mrs. Brown, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Miss M. Hayden and Miss Reynor defeated Miss Richardson and Miss McGillivory 6-3, 6-1.

It is hoped that the Peterboro Tennis Club will shortly pay a visit to Cobourg.

ONE MORE GAME GIVES GIANTS THIRD PENNANT

Defeated Cincinnati With Luque Pitching Yesterday—Five Games Yet to Play.

NEARLY ALL OVER.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 25.—The champion New York Giants advanced to within one game of their pennant goal by winning the last game of their western tour from the Cincinnati Reds to-day, 3 to 2.

Luque was hit hard in the early rounds, but with good control and excellent support, managed to keep the score close. The Giants scored in the second inning on Meusel's triple to the scoreboard and a single by Stengel. They bunched four singles for two earned runs and the game in the third, after which they could do little with the Cuban, who struck out six men. Watson was very effective except in the first and last innings. Burns and Daubert opened the first by driving out consecutive doubles on two pitched balls, the former scoring. With two out in the last half of the ninth, singles by Duncan, Hargrave and Pinelli yielded one run, but Fowler ended the game with a grounder to Bancroft.

The Giants need only one more victory to cinch their third straight flag. They left for the East to-night and will close their season with four games with Brooklyn and one with Boston. If they win any one of these five games, the Reds cannot overtake them, even by winning, all four of their remaining contests, two of which are with St. Louis and two with Pittsburgh. Score:

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 25.—Jess Haines pitched St. Louis to a 4 to 1 victory over Brooklyn to-day. It was his 20th victory of the season. Olson was put out of the game in the fourth inning when he disputed a decision when called out at first base. Score:

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Jess Barnes bested Rip Wheeler in a pitching duel and Boston evened the series by shutting out Chicago 2 to 0, here to-day. Grantham's error, followed by Forbes' double and R. Smith's sacrifice fly gave the visitors the first run and the other run was scored off Osborne by Forbes' second double and a two bagger by R. Smith. Score:

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 25.—Pounding four Philadelphia pitchers for a total of 22 hits, Pittsburgh had no trouble in capturing to-day's game, 18 to 5. In order to check the onslaught of the Pirates, twenty players were used by Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh's line-up was changed to give four recruits, Moore, Luce, Cuyler and Barnes, a chance. Credited with four times at bat, Moore, who comes here from the Southern Association, scored five runs and three hits. Score:

TRIBUTE TO KAY'S CURLERS IN HAMILTON SPECTATOR REPORT

Ivan Miller Says Peterboro Midgets One of Fastest Young Baseball Teams Ever Produced in Ontario.

Ivan Miller of the Hamilton Spectator who pitched for the "Plowites" against Peterboro in 1920 and was this season in the M. and O. League pays the following compliment to Alex Kays' Curlers in his write up of the Saturday's championship game in Oshawa:

The Peterboro Curlers, midget champions of eastern Ontario, and one of the fastest young baseball teams ever developed in Ontario, on Saturday, won the highest honors of the amateur baseball world—the Ontario championship—when they handily defeated the Typo Midgets, of this city, by a 5-0 score. The Hamilton kids strove gamely to the last, but they were hopelessly outclassed. Even at that, the score doesn't do full justice to the local aggregation. They were shut out, it is true, but the margin would have been smaller had they not cracked in the eight inning, and allowed three lucky runs to cross the rubber.

The Hamiltonians were handicapped greatly by the small diamond, ordered by the O.B.A.A. The baselines were ten feet shorter than the regulation distance, while the pitching box was fifty feet instead of sixty feet, six inches. The locals had played all their games this season on a large diamond, while their opponents had performed on the smaller field quite frequently and were well acquainted with it. However, the local kids did not offer this as an alibi. They were beaten by a better team, but they showed such fighting and never-say-die spirit that the crowd pulled for them to win. They gained fully as much by losing as they would have by winning. It was simply a case of the flesh being stronger than the spirit.

Great Hurling.

When the Peterboro outfit trotted out for practice, the Hamilton kids groaned in dismay. There was not one of the Hamilton team who compared in size with the smallest of the Curlers. They looked older by far, and their practice work was enough to convince one of splendid training and coaching. Nevertheless the Typos battled them to a standstill, working all through with one thought in mind: "the bigger they are the harder they fall." And how they tried to make them fall!

With all the big advantage held by the Curlers there was little to choose between the teams for the first six inning. After the first Peterboro batter had cracked a lucky hit to left field for three sacks in the first frame and had been squeezed in with a bunt, the fame resolved into a pitching duel between Carl Woods, the crack Peterboro boxman, and Eastman, the Typos' standby. Both hurlers stood out clearly. Woods, with a smart team behind him, pitched invincible ball, while Eastman toiled valiantly in the face of almost certain defeat. The kids stood the hitters on their ears throughout. The Curlers amassed a total of ten safe blows, it is true, but most of these were slow hits that weren't handled properly by the inexperienced Typos. Eastman was in seevral bad holes during the early innings, when lucky hits and miscues came together, but he never faltered, and his steady work called for the cheers of the crowd time and again. With his mates it was the same. They knew from the start they were beaten, but they wouldn't quit. Right to the end they were fighting tooth and nail with a spirit that would do credit to any team. On a regulation diamond such as they had been accustomed to and with any of the "breaks," they would most certainly have made a difference in the score.

No Experience.

The Typos' lack of experience was perhaps the biggest factor in their defeat. When they got on base, which was very seldom, they didn't know how to take care of themselves. They performed faithfully and well as far as their knowledge extended, but further than that they were lost. They Curlers, with their superior experience, were enabled to play inside baseball that went a long way towards victory.

RUCBY

TWO TEAMS PRACTISING.

Changes in the local rugby situation include the amalgamation of the Crescent and Belmont teams, with the prospect of two O.R.F.U. teams from Peterborough.

The proposed city league may have to be abandoned, and attention concentrated on the probabilities of entries in the bigger league.

Excelsiors have been turning out faithfully, and have made good progress under Ross Dobbin's coaching, but the Crescents, with plenty of good material, need a coach right now, and are open for helpers in that department.

Dr. Wood and Bob Abbott were up at Central Park yesterday evening looking them over, and may be able to find some time to devote to them, but this team requires a regular coach immediately, who can attend most of the evening practices.

Jack Deannard, of the Police Department, has taken an interest in this team, but his spare time is quite limited.

Dr. Wood says there are twenty-five candidates for the junior O.R.F.U. team and about twenty for an intermediate line-up. The development of these two teams can be undertaken at once by leaving the city league for next year and working the two squads out for O.R.F.U. purposes.

The question of finances might loom as a problem before the season has advanced far, but it is felt that Peterborough is ripe for a full revival of the old rugby spirit that used to flourish here in Doc McPherson's days.

RUHR RECEIVED NEWS WITHOUT A RIPPLE OF POPULAR RESENTMENT

Predictions of Disorders Negatived By Undramatic Re-action to News of Capitulation to France.

MUTUAL SUSPICIONS

DUSSELDORF, September 26 (Canadian Press). — The decision of the Berlin Government to cease passive resistance in the Ruhr and the Rhineland thus far has not produced a single ripple of disturbance among the population of the Ruhr.

Notwithstanding leading editorials in the German newspapers, even as late as Monday, predicting that there would be a spontaneous outburst of disorder if passive resistance were abandoned unconditionally, the news of its actual abandonment could not have produced a more undramatic effect.

As to whether the lack of visible excitement was due to stupefaction caused by the abruptness of the Berlin Government's decision, or whether the population generally fully realised that passive resistance had really petered out on its own account, opinion of the leading Germans yesterday was divided.

Some of yesterday's newspapers declared that the Government's decision was the only thing to be done, and that it was really "the natural course of events."

Bow to the Inevitable.

Other newspapers satisfy the pride of their readers by saying that while Chancellor Stresemann and his Cabinet apparently decided to give up passive resistance, there really were mental reservations and a successful resumption of the economic activities in the Ruhr depended on how France decided to treat the population. This school of newspapers took a general attitude, somewhat as follows:

"We recognise superior force and bow to the inevitable, realising we are at the end of our material resources, but in our hearts we shall never admit the legality of the occupation of the Ruhr by France and Belgium."

Many leading Germans, however, declare that the French and Belgians can have real cooperation in re-developing the Ruhr industries if the Germans expelled are allowed to return, if all prisoners are freed, and if the authorities generally are allowed to remain under German direction. Otherwise, they maintain, German workers, although they may return to their jobs, are likely to use "canny" methods to prevent the smooth functioning of the various plants.

Details Not Worked Out.

At French headquarters last night it was said that no details had been worked out for the resumption of work at the mines or factories, as all such measures must be arranged between the capitals of the nations concerned.

One French official cited Premier Poincare's recent declaration to the effect that the railroads will continue under the direction of the occupation authorities, and that the question of the expelled railroad workers must be decided individually, as well as the question of granting freedom to those in prison.

The question of making the occupation of the Ruhr "invisible" had not yet been reached, it was declared last night, but one of the officials added:

"All that depends on the good faith of the population in executing the Berlin Government's decision."

This official thought the French troops would be in the Ruhr "at least another week."

Relief Ended in Ruhr.

So far as was known last night, the German directors of mines and factories have taken no decision regarding the resumption of work. It is generally believed that they are awaiting definite orders from Berlin. The Ruhr workers are awaiting developments, and wondering where they are going to land, now that the Ruhr relief no longer will be forthcoming.

French officials last night drew an analogy between the present condition of the workers, who must shift for themselves, and the great mass of soldiers suddenly demobilised in 1918.

It is generally believed that before normalcy can be assured there may be similar trouble to that of Armistice time. Thus far, however, the cloud on the horizon is no bigger than a man's hand.

LIABILITIES OF BANKS HAVE INCREASED LATELY

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.— (Canadian Press.)—Total liabilities of Canadian banks which on July 31 were $2,303,873,800 had increased to $2,330,889,465 at the end of last month. Similarly total assets of the banks increased from $2,571,461,677 on July 31 to $2,599,000,669 on August 31. A feature of the statement is the drop of more than ten millions in saving deposits and an increase of approximately twelve millions in demand deposits during the month.

COLONIAL GIRLS SOFT BALL TEAM

Winners of City Championship and Bond Cup For Second Time Hold Social Evening.

A very enjoyable evening was spent last evening, Sept. 25, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gatfield, 136 Rubidge Street, when about forty guests, including the Colonial Weaving Girls Soft Ball team, champions of the city soft ball league and winners of the Bond Cup gathered there in honour of the recent marriage of Mrs Robt. Batley (nee Murial Todd) one of the star players of the team. The early part of the evening was spent in dancing and games, refreshments being served about 11.30 p. m. after which Mrs. Batley was presented with a mahogany mantle clock and the following address read:

Dear Muriel:

As we have gathered here to-night to spend a few social hours we considered it an ideal opportunity to show you in a small way how much we have appreciated your untiring efforts throughout the season, no matter what the conditions were we have always been able to rely on you being there to do your part. The championship is ours for this term and it is the desire of all that next season the same spirit of friendliness and co-operation prevails and if we have that then victory is assured. We ask you to accept this clock and as it ticks the time away may your life be full of happiness and prosperity.

(Signed)

The Colonial Soft Ball Club.

A kitchen shower was also presented to Mrs Batley from the other guests present which was drawn into the room on a gaily decorated wagon by Master Joe Gatfield.

The Team also took advantage of this occasion to present to their manager, Mr. Wm. Bullied, an engraved silver cigarette case as a slight token of their appreciation for his interest and work on their behalf; the following address being read by Mrs. E. Lee, captain of the C.S.B.T.

Dear Mr. Bullied:

On behalf of the girls of the Colonial Soft Ball Club we wish to thank you for the efforts you have put forth in making our team what it is to-day, champions of the city league and winners of the Bond trophy. Kindly accept this gift as a token of appreciation for your valued services.

RUSSIA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN

Singer Has Just Arrived in America to Make Her Fortune.

By JOHN GRAUDENZ

MOSCOW (By mail to United Press).—Time is not money in Russia. Russia has lots of time but little money. Not being able to save money, however, the Russians have started a new saving stunt—saving time.

For the purpose the "League Wremja" (time) has been formed. The slogan is the saving of time. The league members will wear a button smilar to the button of the French legion of honor.

Every member must observe the utmost punctuality at business hours, meetings, conferences, etc., which all foreign business men and correspondents will hear with great joy. Any invitations issued by a member will bear the two letters L. W. (meaning League Wremjah) written underneath the signature.

Posters will be plastered over the walls of every governmental institution, advertising the aims of the league. Signs will be nailed to the walls in offices requesting visitors to use as few words as possible—almost impossible for the talkative Russian—lectures will be held and all the members will be told to educate non-members.

Directors of factories will be requested to organize the work in their plants so that the workmen won't lose too much time in waiting for orders.

LITTLE CHANCE OF JAPAN GOING DRY IN HURRY

By CLARENCE DUBOSE.

TOKYO, (By mail to United Press).—Temperance organizations conducted by foreign missionaries have increased greatly in Japan. At the same time the domestic production of alcoholic liquors, and the importation of foreign liquor and brews, show an even greater increase.

As for a straight prohibition movement—it doesn't exist. It would stand, if anything, less chance here than in France or Italy. In those countries a fundamental of agricultural economics is the production of grapes to be made into wine. So in Japan a fundamental of farm management is rice production, no small part of which goes into "sake," or rice wine.

The entire agricultural scheme of things would have to be done over if this industry were stopped. Also, in Japan, sake enters into many religious rites. It is offered, in little cups, to the spirits of the dead ancestors, to the gods in the temples. The man who sets a cup of sake on his father's tombstone, filling it freshly at regular intervals in order, as he sincerely believes, that his father's spirit may be cheered and comforted in the other world isn't apt to think that other should be forbidden.

German beers and French and Italian wines, say nothing of Scotch and English whiskies, are now imported into Japan, according to recent figures, in quantities vastly greater than ever before. As for American cocktails—well, they're almost as popular among the Japanese themselves as is American baseball. Your Japanese man-about-town, and every Japanese wants to be that whether he is or not, would no more think of having dinner without a preceding cocktail—or two or three—than he would think of admitting ignorance of the percentage standing of the New York Giants.

WELL, HARDLY EVER!

Once upon a time there were two shots fired in the night air that did not ring out.

Once upon a time a man was hit on the head with something besides a blunt instrument.

Once upon a time a man was found bearing up well who wasn't at the time under a trying ordeal.

Once upon a time a prize fight champion said, "I'll knock dat guy's block off and put 'im ter sleep in de foist round," and the reporter didn't quote him as having said: "I expect to win early."

Once upon a time there was a scene that the fire department was not quickly on.

Once upon a time there was an aviator who wasn't daring.

Once upon a time there was a widow who wasn't comely.

Once upon a time there was a bride who was not attractively attired—

But you never read about them.

SHOOTING LIONS "CHILDSPLAY"

MRS. E. JOHN BRANDEIS.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 26.—Shooting lions in Africa might seem difficult for some, but Mrs. E. John Brandeis is not included among them. Back from the jungle with her husband, she has three kings of beasts to her credit, not to mention a zebra, and other species of a wild nature.

Her husband fell short of her record by one lion, but made up with one rhinoceros, three jackals and many other strange and wild animals.

Now the Brandeis are planning a trip to India, to shoot Bengal tigers. "And I'll get at least one," promises Mrs. Brandeis.

The Brandeis brought back with them an 18-year-old professional lion hunter, with 40 lions to his credit.

They speak of beasts of the jungle as being anything but tame, but agree that the most dangerous "beast" of all is the malaria mosquito.

"It is a coward," she says. "It creeps up in the dark when one is asleep."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor:

Answer to Mr. Butchers question for the benefit of a number of citizens but not on Dr. Morgan's programme.

1. Was Adam made a living soul or was he given a soul.

Gen. 2. 7, God formed man of the dust and he became a living soul when he had breath life, he became a living person, a succent being and the (person) soul being that sinneth shall die, death is opposite to life, the sentence passed upon Adam dying thou shalt die.

The death of Jesus was a complete offset for Adam, sin and as all in Adam die so all in Christ shall be made alive, an offset for Adam's sin but not for wilful sin. The world of mankind is not on trial yet but will come on trial by a reviving again in a resurrection or restoration, Act3-19, which will be by judgment. St. Paul in speaking to the church states if there be no resurrection then they that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished and says we should be of all men most miserable but now is Christ risen and become the first fruit of (the church), them that slept no spiritual fruit before Him, here we see a distinction between the Church and spiritual, the world of mankind and earthly.

When the world is restored in resurrection, it will be for its trial 1000 years not for receiving sentence but according as their work shall be (Satan will be bound 1000 years) and all obstacles removed and a highway shall be there and a way and it shall be called the way of holiness, the wayfaring man though a fool need not err therein, the life restored is temporary for the wicked, for they shall not pass over it, i.e., the 1000 year day but the meek shall inherit the earth and the righteous shall inherit the earth, but the wicked shall be rooted out of it. Then the prayer will be answered, thy Kingdom come and thy will be done on earth and that will be everlasting for the Lord formed the earth to be inhabited, then the earth shall yield her increase and instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree etc., The wicked have no promise of everlasting life anywhere, it is the gift of God and no inheritance of mans.

We, i.e., the church are justified by faith and may be seated by the holy spirit of promise, if resurrection fail, the faith fails and hope is lost; but we trust in the living God which gives us assurance.

David in Psalm 96-98, singing respecting church rejoiced and was glad Zion heard and was glad because the time of her deliverance draweth nigh.

The rest of the dead lived not, dead in trespasses and sin may not come into perfect life till the end of the trial 1000 years when God will be able to look upon a living humanity.

Eternal good tidings will be proclaimed to all, those who dwell upon the earth for He says "I will make a new covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah. I will put my law into their heart and in their minds will I write them, the everlasting Gospel which shall be unto all People and all shall know Him from the least unto the greatest.

In Rev. 19-9, "Blessed are they that are called to the marriage supper of the lamb.

But the bride is not complete yet, the prospective bride is making herself ready and will be ready when the marriage takes place. Then the message of free grace will go forth to whosoever will may come and take of the water of life freely. John 7. 37-38, on the last day that great day Jesus stood up and cried if any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—The first message of the new President of the U.S. is a gem. He points out that it is the first duty of man to mind his own business and to let other people do the same. Let our women also take notice. The President has also a very saving sense of humor. He doesn't intend Americans to continue to take themselves too seriously. He winds up his message by saying that the attitude of the American people represented "deep faith in spiritual things, tempered by a hard, common sense." Isn't that the best you ever heard. The first consideration is plainly hard common sense which God knows it's time we cultivated. We have had enough of idealism. Can anything be more ridiculous than people's setting up their own ideals by worship. Surely it is plain that we are only setting up ourselves by so doing. It is now being contended that we descend not from the the ape stock but from the goose and I am prepared to believe it.

When we realize what setting up our own ideals really means, we may see how ridiculous it is. Let God in and some of all this nonsense out. It is high time.

TO TRADE WITH U. S.

BERLIN (United Press).—German film concerns, unable to buy American films for distribution here, are turning to the reciprocity method to obtain American films.

Instead of selling German films in America and buying American films at a much higher figure, the "Internationale Film Aktiengesellschaft," one of the biggest here, will turn over its entire production to a big American film concern, which in turn will deliver its complete output to the "Ifa."

In connection with the development of this idea in the film world, the "Deutsche Zeitung" says:

"The fact that such negotiations are under way indicates that there is a strong demand now, as before, for German productions and for German ideas."

Dick Turpin and his ride to York, whether it happened or whether it didn't are linked together in the public mind with the fine figure of a fine outlaw who robbed portly gentlemen in their coaches, but protected beautful ladies and robbed them of nothing more precious than kisses. This romantic appeal and the fine acting of Mathewson Lang, one of England's best actors is responsible for the capacity crowds now patronizing the Royal. To-night is the closing engagement.

Floods have poured their destruction over the world ever since the great deulge of Noah's time. The destruction and devastation created by such disasters surpass the combined cost of wars since the earth's creation. The Moloch of fire also joins the dragon of flood in the work of destruction. In different parts of the world are huge reservoirs of oil stored by nature, and from this store modern enterprise has gathered this oil into tanks that it might be used for industrial purposes. But the floods came and these reservoirs were turned loose to join with the floods, and thus the floods and the flames reveled, as rival demons in the work of destruction.

But what causes flood? It is the snow of the mountain tops melted by the warm spring rains in the majority of instances. From year to year the total evaporation from land and sea and the total precipitation from the heavens should equal but at times this does not prove to be the truth. Rainfall, like evaporation, varies. If rainfall were distributed equally there would be no disastrous floods. Regular rainfall produces regular channels, competent to carry away its burden. It is the concentration of rain in a brief period of time that causes disastrous floods.

Scientists are investigating means to check such terrible disasters as the Johnstown flood, the Galveston disaster and the Dayton deluge and their efforts have proved more or less successful.

In the William Fox production, "The Town That Forgot God," which was directed by Harry Millarde, who staged 'Over the Hill,' much thought research and scientific investigation was gone through in order to introduce into the play a scent, the like of which has never before been attempted. The scene referred to is a terrific storm and flood which sweeps a village off the map. In no other motion picture can you find a scene as realistic as themanmade storm and deluge pictured in the latest William Fox special production. For a real thrill nothing to compare with it has ever before been successfully attempted. In fact it will stand comparison with any of the great disasters of history for genuine realism.

AT THE CAPITOL.

CAPITOL TO-MORROW, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

During the making of "The Eleventh Hour," the William Fox screen production adapted from Lincoln J. Carter's melodrama, at the Capitol theatre to-morrow, Friday and Saturday, the element of danger was one of the most perplexing with which the producers had to deal. How to reduce this to a minimum was a problem constantly facing Director Durning and the co-stars, Charles Jones and Shirley Mason. One instance of the thoroughness of preparation preceded the shooting of Jones and Miss Mason through the torpedo tubes of a disabled submarine. They passed an entire week studying the mechanism of this death dealing device of the underwater craft.

The air pressure gauges had to be properly watched so that their bodies would be completely discharged into the water and not caught in the tubes; the elevtaion of the prow of the boat had to be adjusted exactly; all the manifold wheels, handles and levers had to be in perfect condition. In such a stunt there could be no rehearsals. The first attempt had to be successful. Due to the terrific concussion the two stars came to the surface of the water so dazed that had it not been for the nearness of one or two expert swimmers, "The Eleventh Hour" would have been their last picture.

Before they were shot through the tubes heavy padding was placed against the soles of their feet to "take up" some of the tremendous concussion that was necessary to force them through the greased tubes. However, before the two stars rose to the surface of the water they were preceded by a volume of oil forced out by their bodies.

The first to come to the surface was the slim little Miss Mason, bedraggled, pale and exhausted. In another moment came the curly-haired head of Charles Jones, enveloped in oil bubbles; but who immediately struck out for the girl, whose strength was fast ebbing. Of course he rescued her.

To-night "Hollywood," with the greatst cast ever seen in one picture, will be seen for the last time.

MILITARY PUT MEMBERS ROUT

Refuse to Allow Legislators to Assemble.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 26. — (Canadian Press). — Oklahoma's rebel legislators were dispersed by military at noon to-day when they attempted to convene a special session of the Lower House to seek the impeachment of Governor G. C. Walton. There was no violence or bloodshed. House members gathered before the entrance to the House Chamber were given firm and curt order by Colonel W. S. Key, military commander of the city, not to attempt to assemble. Colonel Key ordered the legislators to disperse immediately, and refused to amplify or explain his order in any manner when approached by the leaders of the Lower House.

The law-makers began to disperse immediately without any show of resistance to the order of the military commander.

At 12.05 p.m. all the legislators had left the corridor outside the House Chamber, and the militia were alone in command of the building.

Efficient Housekeeping

The modern idea of economy extends into the household as well as into every branch of business. Most housewives pride themselves upon the fact that their homes are conducted in an efficient, business-like manner.

Every housewife knows, too, that the business of running a house, providing for the wants and needs of the different members of the family and meeting the almost daily emergencies is second to none.

The Want Ads. in the Examiner are a great boon to the efficient housewife. In securing helpers, in purchasing various articles of household equipment, disposing of discarded furniture, in fact in countless ways, the Want Ads are the housewife's most valuable assistant.

WHAT A LIFE THAT OF THE KAISER HAS BEEN

Under date of August, 1883, in an old copy of "Donahoe's" Magazine, the "journal devoted to the Irish race, at home and abroad," under the heading "Kaiser Wilhelm Gorges Himself," appears the following: "What a life that of the Kaiser of Prussia has been. Born in 1797, he was a boy at the period of Prussia's deepest degradation; at the age of seventeen he entered Paris with the allied armies, then fell into obscurity. His fame began at the age when other men began to outlive their fame. Reports of serious illness often come to us, but the iron constitution of the Hohenzollerns brings him round His trouble is indigestion, caused by love of sauerkraut. He has an old servant as old as himself. 'Stephen,' said the Kaiser the other day, 'What have you for dinner ' 'Sauerkraut, sire,' he replies. 'Go bring it to me.' The attendant gives a military salute and returns with a huge plate of smoking sauerkraut and an immense colossal sausage. "Ah, that smells good!" the Emperor cries, and in a quarter of an hour sauerkraut and sausage are out of sight. In the evening doctors were called in, in haste, the court was alarmed and the foreign ambassadors were at their wits' end. Sausage and sauerkraut are standing menaces to the peace of Europe."

Mrs. E. Brown, accompanied by Mrs Kay and her daughter Lillian, and Mrs. Bubb of Montreal, spent a very pleasant week end with Mr. and Mrs. Bradley of this city.

BAVARIAN GOVERNMENT STRONGLY DENOUNCES TREATY OF VERSAILLES

Appointment of Commissary Regarded as Beginning of Fascisti Regime—Situation in All Germany Full of Danger.

STREET FIGHTING

BRUSSELS, Sept. 27.—(Special).—A dispatch from Munich says the Bavarian government has denounced the treaty of Versailles.

Munich reports that ex-Premier Gustav von Kahr has been appointed commissary of Bavaria which is regarded as practically a dictator.

Von Khar has the full support of the Hittler organizations of Bavarian Fascisti. The dictators first act was issuance of a proclamation declaring all Bavarians must be ready to "use force against the traitors to the Fatherland." Appointment of Von Kahr is regarded as the beginning of a Fascisti regime in Bavaria.

Emergency Call.

Berlin dispatches say that at hurriedly called meeting of cabinet at midnight which was atended by General Von Seeckt, chief-of staff, immediate proclamation of a state was decided upon, and minister of defence Gessler was given executive authority to jut into force any military or police measures he might deem warranted in circumstances. This action of the government was taken when the news of the appointment of Dr. Von Kahr as military dictator of Bavaria was received, and the proclamation issued was intended as an offset to the Bavarian manifesto.

Bavaria's action was wholly, unexpected although it was at first viewed as studied affront to central government manner in which it was launched nevertheless was construed as a piece of censorial criticism of the way in which the Berlin government had called off passive resistance in the Rhur. This view prevailed despite assertions from Bavaria that her measures were prompted by suspicious activities of the guards of Adolph national socialist leader

Interior Politics.

Paris hears that the German Government has practically been handed over to a military dictatorship. This was deduced at the Foreign Office from despatches received this forenoon from Berlin. The situation is regarded as full of dangerous possibilities, but as furnishing no basis at present for any action on the part of the Allies.

The authorities of occupation in the Ruhr, however, are said to be prepared to meet any emergency which may arise there as a consequence of to-day's proclamation in Berlin. The extreme measures resorted to are regarded as partly in response to the action of the Bavarians in setting up a dictatorship, and in any case is solely related to the requirements of interior politics, entirely independent of the foreign situation.

Street Fighting.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press). — Street fighting between Communists and sections of the less extreme Radicals is reported from Berlin, a despatch to the Central News says. It adds that one man was killed, five fatally wounded and twenty injured. Parties are holding meetings and processions in Dresden.

Meetings Prohibited.

Reports from Munich say: Dr. Von Kahr, Bavarian military dictator, has prohibited meetings of the followers of Adolph Hitler, Fascist leader, and also all political gatherings.

COMMUNISTS ARE STILL SEEING RED

Insurrection in Bulgaria Continues Today With Unabated Violence.

ATHENS, Sept. 27.—(Special).—The Bulgarian Agrarian-Communist insurrection continued with unabated violence to-day, according to advices from Sofia, which said two thousand had been killed and ten thousand wounded in the fighting between Government forces and the insurrectionists.

Strict martial law is in effect in Sofia. The curfew law is enforced and street gatherings of more than three persons are prohibited.

A police communique urges citizens to remain indoors, removing the danger of encountering armed malcontents in the streets.

Offers Assistance.

From Bucharest — It is reported that Roumania has offered the Bulgarian Government military assistance in restoring order in Bulgaria should the Communist revolution there assume the upper hand.

Shocked to See A Man Climbing Neighbor's Fence

A lady living alone with her daughter in a Dalhousie street residence has been worried during the last three nights by the presence in her garden of a nocturnal visitor. The garden and trees do not show any visible signs of molestation, and the gentleman visitor seems to spend his time in patrolling with heavy steps the vicinity of the house and falling over the fence.

Last night, a neighbor had occasion to look out of her doorway at about a quarter past ten o'clock, and was shocked at the sight of a man, described as being of middle age and wearing dark clothes and a slouch cap, making his way over the lady's wire fence, which collapsed under his weight, and precipitated him to the ground on his hands and knees. The neighbor affirms that for three successive nights she has heard heavy footsteps in the next door garden, and owner of which has taken steps to-day to ensure police protection of her property.

FRENCH ARMY DISLIKES RUHR

Men Complain at Service with Occupation Forces Due to Hardships Involved.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The Government wants to occupy the Ruhr until Germany shows that she is going to keep her treaty engagements but the army is not so sure that it wants to remain there that long. All sorts of complaints are being heard. People are saying that service in the Ruhr is having a demoralizing effect on France's soldiers.

It is not German propaganda that is producing this effect, but what are said to be errors in administration. For example, the original Belgian contingent of troops was replaced several months ago by another set, and that by still a third. The French troops that entered in January and February have not yet been relieved. That is one grievance.

Another complaint is in regard to poor food. The soldiers say they do not get enough to eat, and that the quality of what they receive is far below that to which they are accustomed in barracks at home. For some obscure reason, officers at Dusseldorf are not entitled to the same "indemnities" as those stationed in smaller towns in the Ruhr district. They complain that because they are in a city of considerable size, their expenses are higher than they would be elsewhere.

Hard To Get Leave.

Furthermore, leave of absence is hard to obtain for both officers and non-coms, and when it is granted, travelling expenses are paid not to the officer's home, but to his garrison town. Many officers refuse leave because of the expense involved in going to Bordeaux, or Brest, or some other far corner of France which they call home.

Another complaint of officers is that though they are stationed in the Ruhr for an indefinite period, which promises to be long rather than short, they are not permitted to bring their wives, while civilians sent by the French Government for special work probably of considerably shorter duration, bring their families. It is not, the officers say, as if a state of war existed; the occupation of the Ruhr is officially peaceful, and they should be permitted the company of their families as if on garrison duty.

Then there is the old question of "indemnities," which is a constant grievance. Civilians receive far higher pay and far higher supplements than do army officers. They are able to live far better—which hurts army pride. Furthermore, a special allowance for wear and tear of clothes and equipment has been granted, but only from 1st July.

Thousands of officers have been in the Ruhr on active duty since January and have had to pay for the upkeep of uniform and equipment out of their meagre allowances.

Service Is Unwelcome.

For all these reasons, service in the Ruhr is looked upon as an unwelcome assignment, to be avoided if possible, to be complained about if it becomes necessary to go. Paul Boncour, Socialist deputy, after a tour of the occupied districts, protested vigorously against the failure of the Ministry of War to provide adequately for the troops, declaring that the morale of the Army is at stake.

M. De Launay a deputy of the Bloc National, has confirmed M. Boncour's observations, saying it is remarkable it should fall to a Socialist, no particular friend of armies, to point out the deplorable conditions.

The situation is so grave that Marshal Petain was sent to the Ruhr several weeks ago to study

INFORMATIVE REVIEW POWER DEVELOPMENT IN CENTRAL ONTARIO

Properties Acquired and Administered by Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission For The Government, Now Supplying Peterborough and Other Municipalities and Companies With Electric Energy—Interesting Figures.

When the City of Peterborough bought the electric distribution system of the Peterborough Light & Power Co. in October, 1914, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario had not developed any power and owned no power privilege in this district, and for about a year and a half that commission purchased power and supplied Peterborough. In March, 1916, the government of the province purchased from the Electric Power Co., Limited, the twenty-two companies in this district which they controlled, including the Auburn Power Co., the Otonabee Power Co., the Northumberland and Durham Power Co. (Healey Falls), the Ontario Power Co. (Burleigh Falls), and other powers and power privileges, and the Nipissing Power Co., and also three gas plants, the Cobourg waterworks and the Peterborough street railway and the Campbellford pulp mill. These properties have since then been administered by the Ontario Hydro-Elctric Power Commission for the government and it has, from its power developments supplied Peterborough and other municipalities and companies.

The Auburn power house, and consequently the Peterbrough city distributing system, was connected with the southern developments on the Trent by a transmission line that ran west from Toronto to Port Hope and then north. The commission has constructed a second transmission line from Healey Falls through Norwood and to Peterborough, which gives the additional security to the system here of a second transmission line.

The commission developed power at Ranney Falls, adjoining Campbellford, the first unit of which was put in operation last August and which has added 10,000 horse power to the system. Work is now going on to develop further power at Dams Nos. 8 and 9, near Meyersburg, which will add another 10,000 horse power.

Statement of Power Generated.

The annual report of the Ontario Commission for 1922 gives a statement of the power generated, from which the following, relating to the Central Ontario system, is taken:

Plant	Normal Operating Capacity H.P.	Peak Load H.P.	Total Output in Year R.W.H.
Sidney	4,020	5,362	18,497,000
Frankford	3,485	3,753	14,353,050

Fenelon Falls	1,000	938	3,352,575

In addition the Commission purchased power as follows:

Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co.	3,135	1,387,679

High-grade Transmission Service.

The report mentions work done to improve the transmission service, including a double section, 0.38 miles in length, which loops the Healey Falls-Trenton line into the Ranney Falls Station, which enables the operators to sectionalise this line, and in case of trouble in one section, to deliver power over the other.

As a result of re-insulation work a very high grade of service has

Newhall vs. Pogue Letters Settle Action

The Examiner Learns That the Parties to the Above Action Have, as a Result of an Exchange of Letters, Mutually Agreed That the Litigation Between the Parties Be Terminated.

Peterborough, Ont.
September 24th, 1923

Mr. S. Newhall,
Chief of Police,
Peterborough, Ont.
Dear Sir:

A mutual misunderstanding having resulted in litigation between us, I desire to carry out the suggestion made to me by your solicitor, Mr. R. R. Hall, K. C., that I should repeat to you the explanation of the circumstances under which I made a hasty and unconsidered remark, concerning you, to the City Council on the 5th, of March last.

You will remember that the newspapers in reporting your tesimony given before the recent special police commission stated that you had testified that there had been interference by the Clergy with the Police, to prevent prosecutions in a then recent police court case, and you will also remember that subsequently a prominent citizen of Peterborough, in a letter to the Press called public attention to the seriousness of this charge resting on the Clergy of this city.

I appeared with two others of my fellow ministers before the City Council and made the request that the City Council procure a denial of this charge against the Clergy as I had, as President of the Ministerial Association of the City of Peterborough, satisfied myself that the supposed charge was not correct. I did on that occasion, without reflection, make the over-hasty remark to the Council that "nine out of ten do not believe a word he said," having in mind and believeing that nine out of the ten did not believe the supposed charge that was made against the Clergy was really true.

I have since learned from you that the statement attributed to you was incorrectly reported, and that you did not, in your testimony, charge or intend to charge that the Clergy of this City made any attempt whatever to prevent parties accused of offences from being properly prosecuted.

In view of the fact that my remarks concerning you were made with reference to your supposed charge against the Clergy of the City, and, as it now appears that no such charge was made by you against the Clergy, I consider it only fair and proper to entirely withdraw my over-hasty remarks, which, in the light of your explanation, I deem to be unjust to you, and I express regret that I should have made use of same.

(Signed).
ROBERT POGUE.

Peterborough, Sept. 25th, 1923

Rev. Robert Pogue,
Peterborough.
Dear Sir:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 24th inst. I am thoroughly satisfied that had you interviewed men and ascertained the fact that I never made or intended to make any charge against the Clergy of the City that you would not have made the remarks which you did make concerning me and of which remarks which you did make concerning me and of which I naturally took the gravest exception. I have always believed in the principle of taking every step available to prevent the commission of crime and to "nip it in the bud" and to seek reform and direct the wayward in the path of good citizenship and with that end in view I have always welcomed the assistance of every Clergyman in the City.

I am pleased to be able to assure you that I accept fully your letter of explanation and regrets.

I am, Yours truly,
(Signed)
SAMUEL NEWHALL.

FIND BIG EGG OF DINOSAURS IN FOSSIL BED

Nine Tons Fossils Coming to America Are Called Biggist Find in Paleontology.

NEW LIGHT ON PAST

PEKING, Sept. 26.—Dinosaurs, the colossal reptile creatures of a prehistoric era laid eggs five to six inches long and had nest like any domestic fowl of to-day, according to announcement made by the Third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of National History on its return here after five months on the Mongolian plains.

The early beasts of Asia and America were kin and roamed across the two continents on the land bridge that joined them in those remote times, they find.

The party was in Peking to-day with what its members termed the largest find of the remains of prehistoric animals in the history of paleontology. Nine tons of fossils have been collected and will be shipped to America.

One of the leaders of the expedition, Henry Fairfield Osborn, the paleontologist, said the fossil beds found in Mongolia were the largest known to science.

The adventures of science returned with the opinion that they had proved the Mongolian plateau to have been the centre of dispersion of the most ancient animals traced.

Dr. Osborn and Roy Chapman Andrews, the naturalist, consider a spectacular feature of their discoveries the twenty-five fossilized dinosaur eggs which they found. These are the first dinosaur eggs to be revealed to science, according to members of the expedition, who said that hitherto it had not been known that the dinosaur laid eggs. The eggs are elliptical, five to six inches in length, their shells now covered with a buff-colored coating. Their age is estimated at ten million years.

The explorers brought out seventy two skulls and twelve complete skeletons of these "terrible lizards," as the two Greek words forming the term "dinosaur" describe them.

The expedition also found numerous remains of mammals principally of a giant rhinoceros-like beast which is said to prove kinship among the earliest fauna of Asia and America.

The party travelled in motor cars but carried the supplies by a caravan of seventy camels.

Greatest Discovery in Paleontology

The discoveries made by the Mongolian expedition constitute unquestionably the greatest dinosaur find in the history of paleontology and double the knowledge of the breed, said Dr. D. W. Matthew, Curator of the Department of Paleontology of the Museum of Natural History, yesterday afternoon.

The outstanding feature of the report is the announcement of the discovery of three dinosaur nests, comparable to those of the crocodile, and twenty-five eggs, setting at rest once and for all the mooted question as to the bringing forth of the young of these reptiles. It had been though possible that dinosaurs, like certain other reptiles, did not lay eggs.

"The finding of seventy skulls of dinosaurs and twelve complete skeletons is undoubtedly the most extensive discovery of any one expedition," Dr. Matthew said, "as only between 50 and 100 skulls have been found in all the previous expeditions And, moreover, some of the present specimens are different from any we have known heretofore, a few of them being closely related to the American kind.

ANNUAL SHOW OF THE KIWANIS CLUB

Mr. Martin B. Chenhall In Charge of the Squad.

The annual entertainment of the Kiwanis Club is to again be one of the high lights of the present season at the Grand Opera House. This year the show will be entirely different from last year's minstrels. It will be a revue or extravaganza and promises to be the best yet.

Martin Chenall the popular organist of St. Pauls church is again in charge and this is evidence in itself that the performance should be a high class one.

The first important practice will be held on Friday night of this week at 7 p. m. at the Business College Rooms. All the members of the Club are expected to be on hand and the committee in charge have invited the friends who kindly helped last year to again assist them. The proceeds will be utilized for good local work. A fuller announcement will be made later.

Bare Legs

PEARL REGAY.

OMAHA, Neb. Sept. 27. — The actress who started Hollywood in the stockingless fad, recently had this city sitting up and taking decided notice.

Pearl Regay, playing at a local theatre, went about the streets sans stockings. Many stared to lok, but few thought it a bad idea. The result is that folks now are doing it too.

Comfort and appearance are her reasons for going without stockings She had practiced this for several years—except for intervals when she feared censorship or was about to walk in the snow.

"I find I am cooler without stockings," she says. 'Stockings are a nuisance."

iMiss Ragay never wears high shoes.

"In other words," she concludes. "I intend to be comfortable. And I am."

TORONTO, September 27 (Canadian Press). — "It has been the most wonderful experience of my life," said Premier Ferguson this morning on his return from the James Bay trip.

"I had breakfast yesterday morning at Moose Factory, and this morning I breakfasted in Toronto. How's that?"

Moose Factory is 700 miles north of Toronto.

Premier Ferguson, Lieut.-Governor Cockshutt, and the Hon. Dr. Cody made the return from Moose Factory to Moonbeam on the Transcontinental, west of Cochrane, covering 180 miles or so in two and a half hours.

WITHDRAWAL FROM CORFU COMPLETED

Italy's Representative and Military Commander Embark For Home.

CORFU, September 27 (United Press). — The Italian evacuation of Corfu was completed last night.

The last Italian soldiers were concentrated and embarked on Italian transports at 8 p.m., leaving only 45 soldiers, under the command of a captain, to lower the flag with full military honours.

The Italian Government's representative, Signor Monetti, and the military commander embarked last night.

GREECE RESPONSIBLE.

According to despatches from Rome, the Council of Ambassadors' award of the 50,000,000 lire indemnity to Italy is hailed there as a complete vindication of the Italian claims that Greece was responsible for the Janina murders.

The Corriere D'Italia said the report of the Commission shows the Greek Government not only neglected to apprehend the perpetrators of the crime, but also failed to protect the Italian mission.

The newspapers condemn Great Britain for her alleged pro-Greek attitude throughout the Corfu incident.

TORONTO, Sept 27.—(Canadian Press).—Three men entered St. Clair avenue west branch of Bank of Nova Scotia, this afternoon, held up manager, teller and two lady customers, who were in office, scooped up all avialable money from teller's counter into big black bag and got clear away. Amount taken by bandits is at present unknown. Leroy Oke, manager of branch, was hit on head with revolver when he attempted to resist. He recovered as bandits were going out and with blood streaming from his wounds, he chased fleeing men down street, few blocks away, however, they mounted standing automobile and speeded off.

THIEVES ROBBED CHEESE FACTORY

Ennismore Building Was Looted to Extent of $80 Worth of Cheese.

Early Wednesday morning three thieves broke into the Ennismore Cheese Factory and stole four cheese valued at about $80.

From Ennismore they went around by Fowler's Corners to the Central Smith Creamery, where they backed their car into the yard and then pried open a door, thus gaining access to the building. They loaded on to their rig 21 boxes of butter, with which they decamped. The butter is valued at about $350.

The police were notified, and they are investigating, but as yet no trace of the marauders has been found.

PRIME MINISTER WELL SATISFIED

Sees Renewal of Good Relations With France.

NORTHAMPTON, England, Sept 27. — (Canadian Press). — Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, speaking here to-day, declared that his conference with Premier Poincare in Paris last week had the effect of restoring the former good relations between France and Great Britain. The atmosphere of restraint and almost of distrust that prevailed between the two countries when the present British Government came into office had been changed, he said, into one of mutual confidence.

"I think," said Mr. Baldwin, "that there is now, both in Paris and London, a recognition of the importance of the Entente in this way—that, without it, the European settlement would be far more difficult. The best hope of settlement lies in the intimate relationship between France and this country."

"Peace," he added, "was necessary for the solution of the situation confronting Europe."

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Miles Sheridan, made wretched by his wife's infidelity is attempting to facilitate her obtaining a divorce by creating a scandal about himself. To this end, he offers $20,000 to

Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl known as the Million Dollar Doll if she will take a yacht trip with him. Juliet is unable to go, herself, but greedy for the money she persuades

Teresa Desmond (Terry) her lovely and unbelievably innocent half-sister, an exquisite counterpart of herself, to go in her stead, masquerading as the Million Dollar Doll. Ever since a kindness Miles did her in her childhood, Terry has made him her Dream Prince, and now she is grateful for the opportunity of serving him.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife, is in love with

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, who does not know of Terry's relationship to Juliet, is in love with the younger girl.

Mrs. Harkness, Miles' old servant, prepared to hate the "Million Dollar Doll" is won over by Terry's sweetness and charm. Miles has stipulated that he will have nothing to do with the girl, on the voyage, but already his resolve is wavering. He does not recognize the little girl whom he befriended so long ago, but he is surprised to find the notorious Juliet Divine so girlishly charming. In order to make the scandal known, he appears at Monte Carlo with the girl.

Miss Caroline Sheridan, Miles' aunt, is surprised to meet her nephew in Monte Carlo.

After leaving Miss Sheridan, who is horrified when she learns the truth, Terry and Miles continue their walk. Terry gives a start as she sees approaching, Eustace Nazlo.

CHAPTER LI

An S. O. S. Signal

It wasn't surprising that Juliet Divine should know Eustace Nazlo. She was, Sheridan had sharply to remind himself, the sort of girl who would know that sort of man. But a wave of resentment swept over him. He wondered if before leaving New York, she had made an appointment with Nazlo at Monaco, and realized that it was probable.

His nerves, rasped by the scene with his aunt, were on edge. The girl had no right to arrange flirtations for this trip, and he'd warn her that he would not stand for it

'You know that man?' his tone made the question an accusation.

'I've met him," Terry answered. She was frightened, more for Julia than for herself. After an instant of shocked surprise, she realized that her start of recognition might inform Nazlo that she wasn't Juliet Divine, who had never met him, but Teresa Desmond, who had. And if he guessed, or even suspected, there would be trouble.

The fear was not unjustified. Nazlo had walked on a few steps, for the thought that sprang into Terry's head developed more slowly in his.

Seeing the tall, beautiful young woman strolling with Miles Sheridan (whom he knew by sight) Nazlo took it for granted at a distance that the man's companion was the 'Million Dollar Doll."

His Nearest glimpse of Juliet Divine had been from a stage box, or at a night cafe, craning his neck from one table for a sight of a profile at another.

Gossip about women of her world came to him, however, and he knew of Juliet's most conspicuous adventures. Here was one, which he hadn't heard about. There had been talk of Miss Miles Sheridan and an Italian prince. Nazlo decided, as he approached the pair, that this escapade was tit for tat on Sheridan's part. He heard himself telling men at his clubs when he went back to New York: 'By the way, whom do you think I met at Monte?"

As he drew nearer to the couple, he was struck anew by the resemblance between the Million Dollar Doll and the convent girl who had 'turned him down." Dress that child in clothes like these, instead of her country-made black, and she'd be just as handsome, just as stunning

He was sharply pricked by the resemblance of his failure. He hated to fail. He often boasted to himself (he was too intelligent to boast to others) that he had never failed in love or business. The thwarted affair with Terry Desmond had left a sore spot.

Coming closer, the youthfulness of the girl's face impressed him. She looked like a sad and lovely child, detached from home surroundings. Could Juliet Divine look like that?

Of course Juliet had a spurious air of girlishness, and might be taken for twenty instead of twenty-seven. But if her beauty had a defect, it was a certain bright hardness. Her youth wasn't this virginal youth. It was a youth of bold, pioneering experience.

Just as Nazlo's mind touched this conclusion, the tall girl in white saw him, started, and shrank against her companion's shoulder.

'She isn't Juliet Divine. She's Teresa Desmond "

The conviction shot through Nazlo's brain. He walked on, turning it over, and decided that he had hit the amazing truth. The instant he was sure, he wheeled, and in an instant had joined the couple.

'How do you do, Miss Desmond?" he said, hat in hand. 'This is a surprise, seeing you here."

Sheridan had braced himself for this. But he was puzzled by Nazlo's way of address. What did the fellow mean by calling the girl 'Miss Desmond?" It must be a slip of the tongue, or else there'd been some adventure in which Juliet had posed as 'Miss Desmond." Strange, however, that a man about town like Nazlo hadn't known the Million Dollar Doll

No wonder that she seemed upset at meeting him There was something under the surface, here: but Miles was surprised at his own sense of relief, and the cooling of his anger against the girl. Taking all things together, it began to look as if there'd been no appointment He had another surprise also: his sudden wish to shield her.

Terry's quick wit was baffled by lack of experience and her training to be truthful.

Juliet will be so angry if Mr. Sheridan finds out " she thought. 'What can I do?"

She looked up at Sheridan and met his eyes. It seemed to him that he caught an S.O.S. signal, and he responded promptly.

'You are Mr. Nazlo, I think?" he said with cool politeness. 'I've seen you now and then in New York. But you have made a mistake. This lady is not Miss Desmond. She doesn't know you."

Nazlo was a man of the world and his great aim was to reach social heights, climbing on his millions. 'I'm sorry," he said civilly. 'I beg the lady's pardon—and yours. I must have been deceived by the great likeness between her and a friend of mine—a friend I've lost sight of, but hope to find again. I know I shall some day; and I thought this was the day "

He lingered, expecting a move on the girl's part, if only a gesture or a faint exclamation, or—almost equally welcome—a sign from Sheridan that a chat with a fellow New Yorker would be acceptable. But the white sunshade screened Teresa Desmond's face, and Sheridan was irresponsive.

Unless Nazlo were ready to risk a snub in public, from one or the other, there was nothing to do except to take himself off. Until he could see what use to make of the situation (he would make use of it) he didn't want a row with the man or girl.

Again 'I beg pardon," he excused himself; and lifting his hat once more turned back in the direction whence he came.

HUNTER WEARS RED.

KINGSTON, N. C., Sept. 27. — (United Press.)—"I'm tired of being shot at," Dr. George E. Kornegay said, explaining the reason for a flaming scarlet hunting coat and cap for himself and red blankets for his pack of beagles.

"I may look like the Fourth of July, but I'm going to have safe and sane holidays in the future. I've been peppered with small shot three times by other huntsmen .The boobs always claim they didn't see me."

So Dr. Kornegay will do his rabbit hunting in the future dressed as a picturesque fox hunter of old.

The dogs will be "decorated," because of a recent experience of their owner.

"I saw something coming through the brush and thought it was a rabbit," Dr. Kornegay said. "I banged away at it and shot a dog—not one of my own pets, but somebody else's. It taught me a lesson."

No Peace in Europe Until Treaty of Lausanne is Revised

WILSON'S IDEAL OF SETTLEMENT FAILS TO WORK

Sir Edward Grigg Says Aims For Which Allies Fought Are Thwarted.

DEFEATED TURKS WIN

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—In the opinion of Sir Edward Grigg, M. P., who was a guest to-day at a Canadian Club luncheon, the peace of Europe is jeopardized by the treaty of Lausanne and there will be no real peace in south-eastern Europe until the treaty is revised to conform with the aims for which the Allies fought in common. These aims, he said, were the exclusion of the Turk from Europe the freedom of the Straits for all the nations; and the protection of minorities in Turkey.

The Turk was absolutely defeated in the late war, much more so than Germany, said Sir Edward, and the Allies might have imposed their own terms. There had been procrastinations and division, however, of which the Turks had profited, and today the Turk was back in Europe, he continued, to be the porter of the Dardanelles under diplomatic formulae which amounted to nothing; and, furthermore, the Christian nations were likely to continue to receive the heart-rending appeals of the minorities in Turkey. Turkey was likened by Sir Edward to the poisoned point of a spear in the body of Europe, the infection from which at any moment might spread and affect its health, or in other words peaceful relations.

Not Criticizing U. S. A.

Sir Edward Grigg said he did not criticize the United States for its attitude in withdrawing from participation in the settlement of Europe which the United States as represented by President Wilson had in some sort outlined.

The main idea with which the peace settlement started had been proved impracticable, he said. The idea was that the democracies of the new world including the Dominions of the British Empire, could be called in to guarantee settlements in Europe and to maintain peace by definite commitments. It should be realized, Sir Edward averred, that democracies cannot be bound in the dark to commitments as to what

FIVE MILLION IN TEN YEARS

Birkenhead Predicts a Rapid Growth of Canada's Population.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 26.—"I cannot discover any well-informed student of sociology in the Dominion of Canada who does not believe the next ten years will see an increase in our population of five million Lord Birkenhead declared, in the course of an address before the Canadian Club here to-day. He recommended free reciprocal trade within the British Empire.

Lord Birkenhead stated that after a careful study of Canada's progress and resources and intensely interested observations during his present trip and another trip made a decade ago, he felt that one must be blind and unimaginative who would remain unaffected at the conclusions thus forced upon him of Canada's potentialities.

After giving a concise summary of Great Britain's present causes for anxiety, the former Lord Chancellor pointed out that in spite of free predictions that the world's financial centre had passed from London to New York it still remained and bid fair to continue indefinitely to remain in London.

CESSATION OF RESISTANCE IS MADE OFFICIAL

German President Issues Proclamation Signed By All Cabinet Ministers Reviewing Struggle.

Want Prisoners Freed.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The text of the proclamation issued by President Ebert today and signed by all the members of the Cabinet is as follows:

"On January 11, French and Belgian troops occupied the German Ruhr territory against right and treaties. Since then the Ruhr and Rhineland have endured most grievous oppression. Over 130,000 Germans, men, women, old men and children, have been driven from their homes. For millions of Germans the idea of individual liberty no longer exists.

"The occupation was accompanied by numberless acts of violence. Over 100 of our countrymen lost their lives; hundreds of others are still languishing in prison. Sentiments of justice and patriotism were stirred by the illegality of the invasion. The population refused to work under foreign bayonets. The whole German people is grateful for that fidelity to the German Reich and steadfastness that stood the test of the hardest times.

"The Govenment of the Reich undertook to watch over its distressed compatriots so far as it was able. There was thus an ever-increasing drain upon the resources of the Reich. The funds in aid of the Rhur and Rhineland last week reached the sum of 3.5000 trillion marks, and an expenditure of at least double that amount was forseen for the present week.

"The former production of the Rhur and the Rhineland ceased and the economic life in occupied and unoccupied Germany became disorganized. It is most seriously to be feared that should the same line of action as hitherto be proceeded with, the creation of a regular currency, the maintenance of economic life, and existence itself would be impossible for our people. In the interest of Germany's future, as in that of the Rhineland and the Rhur, this danger must be removed. In order to preserve the life of the people and the state we are today forced with dire necessity of relinquishing the struggle.

Moral Sacrifices.

"We realize that in doing so we are calling upon the inhabitants of the occupied territories to make sacrifices of a moral character still greater than those in which they acquiesced up until now. Their struggle has been heroic, their self-control incomparable. We shall never forget what the occupied territories achieved and what has been given up by those who preferred to leave their native country rather than be disloyal to the Fatherland.

The Government's first duty is to see that the prisoners are released and that those who have been expelled may return. The fight for the elementary rights of humanity comes before all economic and material concerns. Germany has declared her readiness to assume most severe material sacrifices for the liberty of German subjects and German soil, but that liberty is for us not an object of negotiation or barter.

Demands Peace.

"It depends on the Powers which have invaded our territory and on their Allies by adhering to this idea to give peace to Germany or to bring about by rejection of this peace all the consequences which would ensue with respect to the relations between peoples. We invite the German people to stand closely together in the days of dire moral and material strife which are to come. Only thus shall be frustrated all projects for dismemberment of the Reich and th nation recover its honor, life and liberty, which is its prescriptible right."

Meighen Says King Has No Policy For Empire.

PROVOST, Alta., Sept. 26.—"What is Premier King going to the Empire Conference for?" asked Right Hon. Arthur Meighen in an address here last night. "He has no policy. The present Imperial defence program is satisfactory." Mr. Meighen as in his previous western speeches, criticized the Liberal party for breaking election promises. Tariff pledges has been made that never could be lived up to and the country was millions of dollars further in debt than when the present government came into power.

Eight Cars "Hair Tonic"

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Eight carloads of "hair tonic," which prohibition agents claim is worth $500,000 in the moonshine market, were seized on the New York Central tracks at Taylor street.

The Federal men declared the shipment was alcohol, slightly colored to give it a reddish tinge. It was labeled "Isabelle Adacco Hair Tonic," and was consigned by the Allied Drug & Chemical Company of New York, to the same company here in care of R. Weller, 443 North La Salle street.

According to the prohibition officers, this is the largest shipment of alcohol which has ever been seized in Chicago. The eight carloads contained 24,000 cases. Each case contained one and and one-half gallons.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 27.—(Associated Press)—Preliminary figures from the 1921 census indicate that the population of Mexico decreased nearly 1,000,000 between 1910 and 1920.

The 1895 census showed 12,632,427 inhabitants; 1900, 13,607,259; 1910, 15,160,369; and 1921, 14,196,312. Emigration due to a decade of revolution is believed to have caused the decrease in population.

Order to Pay Fifty Million Lire to Italy An Outrageous Injustice, Says Greece's Member of the League of Nations.

MURDER INDEMNITY.

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The Greco-Italian crisis was revived tonight with stunning force by Nicholas Politis, former Greek Minister of Foreign Affairs, and now representative of his country on the Council of the League of Nations.

Assuming from press forecasts that Greece would be obliged to pay Italy the fifty million lire deposited by her as security for indemnity, M. Politis declared that such a decision on the part of the Council of Ambassadors would be an outrageous injustice and would prove to the world that the big nations of Europe are in complicity to strike a blow at a small and defenceless country.

M. Politis then expressed the desire to see the journalists; and the correspondents of all nations later listened to his scathing indictment of the methods employed by the Ambassadors to arrive at the reported decision. He charged the Council of Ambassadors with having reached their conclusions without waiting for the final rtport of the Commission of Inquiry into the murder of the Italian members of the Greco-Albanian Boundary Commission, and insisted that several members of the mission

Boy Crushed by Motor Bus

SARNIA, Ont., September 27 (Canadian Press). — A distressing accident occurred here late yesterday afternoon, Walter Snyder, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Snyder, Queen Street, being killed outright, and his 8-year-old brother injured, when they were struck by a motor bus owned and driven by Walter Harrold.

The wheels of the heavy vehicle passed over the body of the older boy, crushing his ribs, and he only breathed a few moments.

The younger boy is not considered to be seriously injured.

The older boy was riding his bicycle on Wellington Street with the younger lad on the machine in front of him. They apparently failed to se the bus, as the bicycle was driven right in front of the approaching vehicle.

An inquest will be held.

Provincial Police Instituted a Raid.

SARNIA, Sept. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Provincial law enforcement officers Leoby, Inspector Elliot and District Inspector Putham numbering seven in all conducted extensive raids along the river from Sarnia to Port Lambton last night and to-day. Following the raids James Stone of Corunna pleaded guilty in the county police court to a charge of selling liquor and was fined $200 and cost and Wm. Locke of Corunna and F. Pendergast of Port Lambton pleaded not guilty to charges of buying and consuming liquor in contravention of the O. T. A. and the hearing of their cases was continued to October 10.

FAMILY RACES WITH POVERTY AND DEATH TOO

Father Condemned at the Mayo Clinic Must Improve Farm To Own It.

A LONG JOURNEY.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 26 Speeding north from Minneapolis today, a family of four is racing with death in an effort to reach Big Lake British Columbia while the father is still able to make the improvements on his farm of 160 acres which will entitle his family to ownership of the land.

Told by the Mayos in Rochester that his case was incurable, the father decided to return to the farm immediately in the hope that he might complete the "proving up," on the Government Grant land before he dies. Physician said that his life is only a matter of weeks at best. The family savings nearly exhausted, they purchased a second-hand automobile in Rochester and started north. A few miles from Minneapolis Monday night a bearing burned out. Repairs to the machine were arranged for by the Salvation Army in Minneapolis; the family was provided with shelter. Tuesday night the journey was resumed.

In case the family fails to "prove up" on their land, it is said that the mother and two children, four and two years old, will be destitute.

Manitoba Telephones Show Surplus of $22,000.

WINNIPEG, Sept 26—With a net surplus for the first nine months operation of the current fiscal year of more than $22,000 John E. Lowrey, Commissioner of the Manitoba government telephones system forecasts a total profit for the year of not less than $35,000 according to a report issued to-day. This will be an increase of $3,000 over that of the year ending Nov. 30, 1922, and a marked change in the condition of the system as it was in 1921 when there was a large deficit, the improvement amounting to $573,500.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1923.

THE C.N.R. AND THE CITY.

The reply of Sir Henry Thornton to requests for improvements in the service in this district, while perhaps not as satisfactory from a local standpoint as could be wished, gives evidence that the head of Canada's National Railway is conducting the railways as a business man and not as a politician.

He informs the City Council that gasoline-electric cars would not give better service or prove more economical than the steam cars, and he bluntly adds that the Pullman service from Peterborough to Montreal will be discontinued if it does not attract more business than it has been doing.

That is straight talk, and Sir Henry cannot be blamed for using it.

Durng his visit here in the spring he was urged to provide this accommodation, being informed that Peterborough was crying for a Pullman on the C.N.R. just as children are supposed to be crying for a well-known soothing syrup.

It is not on record whether or not any serious attempt was made to verify that statement.

At all events, the plea impressed Sir Henry Thornton and the car was put on.

If Peterborough people travelled much to Montreal after that time the receipts from the Canadian National's Peterborough to Montreal Pullman service do not very definitely indicate the fact, according to the notification to the Council that the service had not been a paying proposition.

As Canadians, the people of Peterborough are bound to approve of Canada's railways being operated on a business basis, whether or not they as citizens desire to see this city provided with the best service possible, even at an operating loss.

FALSE ECONOMY.

From the result of a recent municipal by-election held in Campbelltown, N. B., it is evident that the people in that community at least approve of the system of awarding contracts for municipal work to the individual or firm submitting the lowest tender.

In the New Brunswick town two of the Council resigned as a protest against the action of the Council in accepting a tender for road-work that was not the lowest received.

One of these Aldermen offered himself as a candidate in the election that followed and was re-elected, evidence that the electors approved his stand.

And yet the Examiner cannot help feeling that in general the principle of always accepting the lowest tender is logically wrong and economically a mistake.

With other conditions equal, of course, the lowest tenderer should be awarded the contract.

But not always are the circumstances the same, and in spite of popular opinion which sometimes leads Councils to take the lowest tender in a mistaken notion that they are proving their thrift by so doing, the conditions often make it the part of wisdom to throw out such a tender and accept one considerably higher.

Where is there any sense in awarding a contract to a poorly equipped firm with little capital—an experience at a figure that on the face of it makes it impossible for efficient work to be done?

And yet Municipal Councils, afraid of the condemnation of the unthinking and forgetful of the best interests of the people they have been selected to represent, are prone to follow a hard and fast rule of accepting the lowest tender on every occasion.

THE ONTARIO TEMPERANCE ACT.

During the regime of Hon. W. E. Raney as Attorney-General the Examiner on more than one occasion pointed out the fact that the manner in which the Ontario Temperance Act was being enforced endangered the future of prohibition in the Province inasmuch as the infliction of unduly heavy penalties on minor offenders was disgusting many citizens who otherwise were friendly to prohibition.

The Examiner contended that the real warfare should be on the bootleggers and the rum-runners and the makers of "hooch," and that the punishment meted out to those who were merely guilty of minor infractions of the Act might in the interest of temperance itself be materially reduced.

These views were not popular with some ultra zealous prohibitionists, who seemed to believe the Ontario Temperance Act was perfect, and that any criticism was inspired by hostility to temperance.

However, the Examiner's opinion is now endorsed by "Argus" in the Christian Guardian, as follows:

"Canada requires the admission that former Attorney-General Raney's style of enforcement largely failed on the bootlegger.

"Under Mr. Raney the minor or technical offender (frequently a victim of the liquor habit) divided attention too closely with the bootlegger, with the result that in nearly every community in the Province were persons who had been mulcted in heavy fines or had undergone the degradation of three months' imprisonment for minor offences unmarked by serious intent and breeding estrangement and alienation of sympathy with the Act on the part of relatives, friends and moderate observers.

"Is it too much to suggest that that policy has done harm, that its continuance would endanger the Ontario Temperance Act, and that it might ultimately eventuate in the substitution here of the Quebec or the British Columbia policy?"

PROTECTING THE BATHING BEACHES.

The City Council is wise in deciding to secure from the Ontario Safety League advice and information as to the prevention of drowning accidents, rescue facilities and other similar matters that would be decidedly useful in the Council's management of the civic bathing places.

During the past summer the Examiner put itself on record as being of the opinion that the precautions taken at bathing beaches to protect the patrons were inadequate, and there has been no reason since to change that belief.

Fortunately, there have been no fatalities, but there were several narrow escapes from drowning, and the circumstances in connection with these were such as to confirm the impression that the facilities for the rescue of those in difficulties in the water are not complete enough to ensure safety.

At Inverlea, for instance, the only protection is that afforded by the presence of a caretaker, who is supposed not only to keep an eye on the proceedings in the park generally and around the bathing houses, but also to act as lifeguard for several hundred bathers scattered along a front of at least 150 yards.

His equipment consists of two lifebuoys and a punt, the latter supplied by himself.

In the event of an accident happening at one end of the park while he was at the other, it does not require a very vivid imagination to calculate how much use he would be as a lifesaver.

There is a shattered breakwater, outside of which the current is usually strong enough to handicap an inexperienced swimmer, and altogether there is too great an element of danger to be allowed to exist at a municipally-controlled beach.

FIGHTING SECTIONALISM.

The Bishop of Montreal in a pastoral letter appearing in the Montreal Churchman attacks in forcible language the evil of sectionalism both in public life and within the church of which he is a shepherd. He sees in our "pork barrel" methods of government a real danger not only to those communities which must suffer under such a plan in proportion as their neighbors prosper, but to the Dominion as a whole. He points out once more the oft-repeated political axiom that the spending of money on useless and unnecessary public works prevents the carrying out of greater and more essential things, which would benefit the country as a whole "but which cannot be undertaken because after meeting 'sectional' demands there is no surplus money left for them."

It is a sad commentary on our methods of government in Canada that, in the words of Bishop Fathing, "if one section of the country needs a railway badly, before our 'statesmen' will consent to vote that absolutely essential work, every other section must have a branch railway built or else the M.P. will be thought to have neglected his duty. Hence Post Offices are built where they are not wanted, while bigger places are neglected because the people 'are on the wrong side.'"

The results of this system of maladministration are two-fold. In the first place it is an extravagant and inefficient way of carrying on the affairs of a country, while, secondly, it breeds a narrow and dangerous sectionalism which is opposed to the basic principle of Confederation from which springs class hatreds and racial prejudices.

Figures published recently in the Star prove that the cost of administering this country has gone up in the last few years by leaps and bounds. This is largely due to the "pork barrel" method of administration and its necessary complement, the multiplicity of civil servants and office holders.

Sectional appropriations are not only wasteful and extravagant, but they foster and stimulate the sectional spirit which in turn leads to the appointment of officials on a sectional basis. They tend also to government by class rather than by party, with the result that men are returned to Parliament as representatives of a Farmers', a Labor, a Manufacturers' or some other class, rather than as members of the House of Commons of Canada.

If a man is returned to Parliament as the nominee of some sectional or class organization, it is only natural that he should make the interests of that class his first consideration. He must divide his allegiance between the organization to which he is affiliated and to the Dominion as a whole whom he is sworn to represent as a member of Parliament. Those interests are bound to diverge frequently and at times to clash, and the member representing a section or class will naturally favor the views of those who secured his return to Parliament, often to the detriment of the country as a whole.

Canada in the past has had too many Hudson Bay Railways, too many branch lines built to ensure the return of a partisan, too many Post Offices erected to help the party organization of this or that district, too many soft jobs given to partisans. No man can take a broad view of the greatest Dominion in the British Empire if his spectacles are only focussed so that he can see as far as the parish pump. The welfare of every section of the Dominion is absolutely dependent on the welfare of the whole. It is only the story told centuries ago of the members who rebelled against the body, only to discover their absolute dependence on it for the life and well-being.

The body politic of Canada is the main-spring which gives life and sustenance to the sections and Provinces. There must be co-ordination and co-operation between the members and the body or national death.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

France has balanced her budget for the first time since 1914. Our delegates to the Imperial Conference might take a day off and find out how the trick was done.

Cheaper fares would no doubt be quickly furnished by the Hydro-electric Commission for the local street railway if the commission could be convinced that they would mean an appreciable increase in the volume of business.

Not satisfied with taking a lot of Canadian liquor, the United States seem also inclined to pilfer some of our Canadian water.

It must be rather galling to the Montreal Star to have Mr. Meighen charged with being responsible for the "whisper of death" campaign.

"Storm Battalions" Raised in Germany.

BERLIN, Sept. 27. — (Canadian Press). — Adolph Hitler, Bavarian Nationalist leader has issued an appeal, according to a dispatch from Munich, summoning his followers to resign from other military organizations and join the ranks of the "Storm Battalions of the National Socialist German Workmen's Party.

Another Nationalist leader, Prince Von Wrede, has summoned all the Bavarian and German horsemen to form "a storm cavalry corps."

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, September 27 (Canadian Press). — Up till Tuesday night, 9,198 cattle was received at the Union Stock Yards, and the sales for the two days amounted to 6,529. Fifteen cars of Westerns were also shipped out to Pennsylvania, and this left still on sale about 2,400 head. Yesterday morning's receipts were 642 cattle, 288 calves, 1,817 hogs, and 1,496 sheep and lambs.

Considering the extraordinary heavy run, the market was not quite so bad as it might be depicted.

Trading is naturally slower than on a market where supplies are scarce, but the stuff on hand yesterday was mostly not the kind badly wanted. The in-between butchers are left, and some heavies which are not breedy, not well finished, and poorly dehorned, were offered yesterday morning at 6 cents a pound, and the only bid was 5 1-2 cents from the packers. The well finished handy and medium weight butchers have been all picked out, and the prices here are within 10 to 25 cents a cwt. of those of last week.

The calf market holds very strong and one choice calf sold on Tuesday afternoon at 13 1-2 cents. Good calves are quoted 11 to 12 cents, mediums 9 to 10 cents, heavies 7 to 9 cents, and grassers are going as high as 4 1-4 cents.

The lamb market is still unsettled. On Tuesday late, one packing house took 1,400 with the bucks out at 10 3-4 cents, but the culls were left in. These were from Montreal, and the shipper is said to have lost $2,500 on the deal. Domestic lambs yesterday morning appeared to be 11 to 11 1-4 cents for ewes, and 9 1-2 to 9 3-4 cents for bucks. Commission men look for a heavy fall next week in shipments, owing to this week's cut of $2.00 to $2.25 a cwt.

Breeding sheep are in strong demand, and the price is steady at 7 cents a pound.

Insurgency on the part of one of the packers on Tuesday advanced hogs 50 cents a cwt., but others who agreed to follow suit, reneged later in the day and the price reacted to the former figure of $8.75 a cwt. f.o.b., and this was quoted yesterday morning.

Ollie Atwell, of Shields & Co., has left for Winnipeg to act as judge at the big stocker show in the West.

F. Woodward, a large buyer of Canadian cattle in London, England, is on the market this week, the guest of John Rogers & Co., the exporters.

Bill Shank, of Markham, was in yesterday morning, and bought a butcher's heifer, 1,060 pounds, at 6 cents a pound, for the beef ring in his section. He got good value, he said, as the heifer was as fat as a pig.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, September 27 (Canadian Press). — With the constant talk current that the Government will do something to help the farmers, wheat moved upward in price yesterday, helped by strength in the corn market and by estimates that European purchasing of wheat yesterday on this side of the Atlantic had totalled nearly 2,500,000 bushels.

Wheat closed firm 1c to 1 3-4c net higher, December $1.05 5-8 to $1.05 3-4, and May $1.10 3-8 to $1.10 1-2.

Corn finished 1-2c to 1 3-4c up; oats 5-8c to 1 1-4c up, and provisions unchanged to 17c lower.

Aside from Washington despatches telling of various plans for farm relief, and in addition to bullish estimates of European buying, the wheat market here was affected by the fact that Winnipeg prices were firm, despite liberal receipts.

For a considerable time wheat showed a greater upward tendency than corn, but in the last part of the day this condition was reversed, especially after corn and oats both had surpassed previous high records for the season. Then, absence of aggressive selling of wheat became a bullish factor, as did sympathy with the strength of corn and oats, although new export business in wheat yesterday was said to be light.

All the cereals—wheat, corn, oats, and rye, as well—closed at top figures with May and September corn at a new high record for the season, and with December oats also at a new high. In connection with the wheat advance, the fact was pointed out that at present an emergency change to a higher tariff on wheat would require action by Congress.

Some talk was heard that a seasoned speculator was leading a bull campaign in corn and oats. Stocks of oats were said to be the smallest in six years.

Provisions reflected weakness in the hog market.

BACHELOR FARMER SHOT FROM AMBUSH

Grievously Wounded Man Dragged Himself Half a Mile.

SIDNEY, Man., Sept. 26.— Provincial police were engaged in a man-hunt to-night for the assailant of Jack Lemercier, a bachelor farmer, who was shot down from ambush on Tuesday morning and who is now lying at the point of death with more than sixty pelletts of small shot in his chest and stomach from a shot gun at close range.

Lemercier weakened by loss of blood and long exposure while he waited for aid, was unable to offer any theory regarding the attempt on his life. Bleeding and half conscious the farmer dragged himself half a mile to a point near a foot path used by school children. Then he collapsed. He was found yesterday and medical aid was summoned. The attempt on his life occurred while he was watering his horses.

Police are endeavoring to identify a shot gun used in the shooting. The gun was found about ten feet from the spot where Lemercier fell.

Canning Factories Hit.

The canning factories in this district have been hard hit by the heavy frost of a week or ten days ago, and the result is that a large pack is not expected. The pea crop, it is estimated, was only about 50 per cent. of the usual crop. The tomato crop is comparatively light and the corn crop is not up to its usual standard. Not nearly so many have had employment in the different factories this season.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Harry Trebilcock, a former resident here, who was highly regarded, took place at Kitchener and was very largely attended. Members of the Order of the Eastern Star, the Women's Auxiliary and the Parish Workers attended the service at the Anglican Church, with many citizens. Rev. Mr. Langford conducted the services. Beautiful floral pieces carried their message of sympathy to those who mourned and their tribute of love to the one who had been called away. Mrs. Trebilcock was a daughter of the late Thomas Wark of Cobourg and of Mrs. Wark, Kitchener.

AFTER FOUR LEAN, WET YEARS, LAKEFIELD FAIR DREW A PERFECT DAY

Record Crowd and More Exhibits Than Ever — Gate Receipts Were Heavy and Directors Smile at Last.

RESULTS OF RACES.

(Special to the Examiner)

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 27.—After four consecutive years of deluges and deficits Lakefield's Fair emerged yesterday into the sunlight of glorious autumn weather whose warmth and soft hazy atmosphere brought hundred of visitors to the grounds and hundreds of dollars into the treasury.

The gate receipts were reported at more than $500 late in the afternoon, and in point of attendance and also in number and quality of the exhibits, the Fair for 1923 was entered at the top of the column of records. Four years of gloom and disappointment had left the directors almost in despair, but their courage and fortitude was eventually well rewarded.

The exhibits generally surpassed the average. There were more live-stock than ever, and the entries in the domestic classes of ladies work and household products were also heavier than usual. Potatoes were surprisingly numerous and of excellent quality, and the grains were exectpionally good considering the season, but some of the friut classes, particularly apples, were light. The poultry exhibits seemed fewer, but any deficiency on that side was balanced by the improved quality.

The attractions occupied the whole afternoon with races taking up the attention of most of the crowd. The results were as follows:

Free For All.

"Bucco", R. Elmhirst 2 1 1 2 1
"Polly Stout," Elmhirst .. 3 3 2 2 2
"Bub", E. W. Jones 1 2 3 3 3

"Prince" T. Hetherington 4 3

One Mile Bicycle Race.

1. Stanley Richardson, Lakefield; 2. Russel Payne; 3. Frank Payne; 4. Fred Little.

The animal race provided a lot of fun for the crowd, the contestants driving an animal of their own choice, with the following results: 1. Stanley Richardson driving a calf; 2. R. Payne driving a hen.

Won Johnston Cup.

Mrs. T. N. D. Kelly won the silver cup presented by Mr. Arthur Johnston of Peterboro for the best saddle horse. This trophy is a challenge cup to be returned for annual competition, but becoming the permanent property of the exhibitor who wins it three years in succession.

Concert and Dance.

The Arlie Marks Company gave a concert in the town hall in the evening, and the day's events were brought to a happy close by a dance. A transport accident somewhat mussed up the plans of the Marks company. One of their motors cars stalled somewhere on the road, and that particular car happened to contain Arlie Marks herself and her pipe band of women musicians who enliven some of the rural fairs in Central Ontario circuit.

Outside of that mishap the Fair ran smoothly and with every attraction contributing to the day's and the evening's entertainment.

SEYMOUR FAIR DATES BACK TO YEAR 1865

Agricultural Society After 58 Years of Existence, Rejoices in a Rural Exhibition of the Premier Class.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 27. — The date of the first Fair held by the Seymour Agricultural Society was October 9, 1865, so that the organization has a history that goes back 58 years. There is no official record of the organization meeting, but according to the memory of some of the survivors who launched the society, it was organized at a public meeting held at Burnbrae, at that time the intellectual centre of the community, in the year 1865, Secretary J. N. Stone has in his office complete records of the meetings of the society since September 27, 1866.

One of the oldest living charter members of the society is Henry Dunham, of Seymour West, who, at the age of 83, is still active and who was recently appointed tax collector for the township for the fourth consecutive year. Mr. Dunham was one of the directors of the Fair up to a few years ago.

The First Fair.

The first Fair, according to Mr. Dunham, was held on the street, where the live stock was paraded, but the vegetables and grain were exhibited in the lockup, the stone structure which is still standing. There was no admission fee, everything was wide open, and the only source of revenue was the membership fee, which was $1 a year, just as it is to-day. The prizes were small but competition was as keen as it is now. The horses shown were all of the heavy draft and agricultural types, for in those days a driving horse was a luxury beyond the means of the pioneers. Oxen were used on the farms and in the lumber work, and the owners of these took as much pride in their possession and in showing them at the Fair as did their more prosperous neighbors in the horses which they had to exhibit.

At that time there were few houses and only two small stores in Campbellford, Cockburn's and Ferris. The latter, which was then a modest grocery concern, is now a large departmental store. There were three taverns, and every Fair night the owners of these reaped a harvest from the crowd, who, after the Fair, generally made a night of it, but the men of Campbellford were never at any time or in any condition given to brawling.

First Record of Meeting.

The first official record of a meeting of the society is dated 27th September, 1866, and that with a gathering composed of the president, whose name does not appear in the minutes, the vice-president, and the executive committee.

The minutes are not signed. It was decided that the annual show should be held on Thursday, 10th of October, and that the list of prizes offered at the fair of the previous year should be used again. It seems, however, that in 1865 there had been a deficit or that the directors were impelled by a spirit of thrift to effect a saving. At all events it was agreed to reduce the value of all the prizes offered the previous year by 50 per cent.

Officers of Long Ago.

At the annual meeting held in the old Collins Hotel on 12th January, 1867, John Clark was elected president, William West vice-president, and Dr. T. Bogart secretary-treasurer. Some years later Mr. West, the only survivor of the three, was elected president, and Mr. Clark became secretary, remaining an active and efficient official up to the time of his death.

The minutes of the meetings that were held during his term of office over his signature are beautifully and correctly written, each report constituting an interesting and valuable chapted in the history of the town.

Mr. West held for years the position of town clerk until incapacitated by illness, but although the duties are now discharged by another, J. F. McGregor, Mr. West's appointment has never been revoked. He was one of the most prominent of the members whose energy made possible the purchase about 30 years aog of the present fine location for the fair.

Not Opposed to "Book Farming."

The scenes that the pioneer farmers of Seymour were not prejudices against printed instruction as to the best methods of carrying on their business. One of the perquisites of every member who paid the annual fee of 1.00 was to free copy for one year of the Canada Farmer. Perhaps that accounts in no small measure for the high agricultural standard which has always been maintained in the township. In 1867 there were 101 members and at the annual meeting a copy of the paper was ordered for each. At that meeting it was also decided to supply each member with as much seed grain as he might require at cost price. At the September meeting it was decided to hold a plowing match with classes for men and for boys under 18.

At the annual meeting in 1869 it was shown that the society was doing a little better than paying its way as there was a balance on hand of $8.69

The Fair To-day.

The above is a sketch of the early history of the society which to-day gives by common consent, the best show of any town in Central Ontario. It has grown from the small beginning chronicled in the early records to the ownership of a large site with ideal location, modern buildings and comfortable grandstand. All that is lacking to make the equipment complete is an industrial building in which the merchants of the town can display their goods and the erection of such a structure is a matter now before the directors and will be acted on at the next Annual Meeting. Every prominent farmer in Seymour township is a member of the society and many citizens of the town also belong. The annual grant made by the Town Council is really a small yearly rental for the site which is used as the playground of the district.

CAMPBELLFORD YOUTH GUILTY

Was Allowed to Go on Suspended Sentence on Payment of all Costs.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept 26.—A quick clean up of the circumstances surrounding the derailment on the C.N.R., at Campbellford on Saturday afternoon was made by Police Officer W. H. Howard acting for the company. It resulted in the apprehension of a high school boy, who appeared before Magistrate Payne yesterday afternoon and pleaded guilty to placing obstructions on the railway track. The boy who is fifteen years of age and a member of a local scout corps, on promise of good behaviour and payment of costs was allowed to go on suspended sentence. A five year term in prison is the penalty for this offence but Magistrate Payne with the concurrence of the C.N.R., officer took into consideration the fact that a jail sentence would not help the the boy on his way to a successful and useful citizenship. In view of this the court took a lenient view and allowed the boy to go with a warning.

GREEKS PENALIZED

were convinced that the Greek Government was not responsible and that the murders constituted an act of personal vengeance against General Tellini, head of the Italian delegation, arranged in Albanian territory.

Bandits Confession.

It was declared by M. Politis that the investigation was continuing because a bandit who surrendered, confessed to the Greek authorities that the days prior to the assassinations he had been requested by the Albanian chief of police to organize the murder on Greek territory of a member of the frontier commission, which he had refused to do.

M. Politis contended that the inquiry was entitled to [illegible] until to-morrow and he said he could not understand the haste of the Council of Ambassadors. He [illegible] the present situation to the celebrated Dreyfus case, which he recalled, was reopened because Dreyfus was convicted on the strength of a document which had not been communicated to his lawyer.

Strong Precedents.

Observing that Greece accepted in advance the decision of the Ambassadors' conference, M. Politis said that nevertheless Greece would not fail later to express her opinion clearly in a communication to the Ambassadors. He recalled that former Premier Venizelos of Greece was shot several years ago in Paris, and that M. Vorovsky, the Soviet representative was slain at Lausanne, but that the French and Swiss Governments did not hold themselves responsible. He said, he believed world opinion would support Greece if such an indemnity was demanded from her.

Greece Was Dilatory.

PARIS, Sept. 27. — The Greco-Italian affair was brought to a close today so far as the Inter-Allied Council of Ambassadors is concerned, when that body decided that the 50,000,000 lire deposited by Greece in the Bank of Switzerland as security for indemnity should be paid over to Italy.

The payment was ordered as a penalty for Greece's dilatoriness in searching for the assassins of the Italian Boundary Mission near Janina, the slaying of which brought about the Greco-Italian crisis and subsequent occupation of Corfu Island by Italy.

The Ambassadors unheld their decision that, in view of Greece's action in fulfilling the terms laid down by the Council, including payment of indemnity, saluting the Allied fleet at Phaleron and in doing honors to the bodies of the slain men, Italy was in duty bound to evacuate Corfu. It was announced that this evacuation has already begun and would be completed to-morrow.

they will do in the future under novel conditions. Even if such commitments were signed, such democracies or their parliaments would be very likely to renounce them when the crisis arose.

Canada's Attitude.

Sir Edward Grigg expressed sympathy with Canada's attitude at Geneva with regard to article ten of the League of Nations, which is that a country should not be committed to go to war unless by the sanction of its own parliament. If then, he asked, the commonwealth of nations which comprise the British Empire is not to be committed to definite obligations in Europe, should Great Britain alone undertake such obligations? He answered his own question negatively. It was against British tradition to assume such obligations in advance. Great Britain has always held her hands free, ready to lend the weight of her power wherever she believed the interests of civilization demanded it. If Great Britain were at war in which the dominions or any of them did not participate, very difficult complications might arise, and it might become a question whether the dominion should go to war or declare herself no longer part of the British Empire.

RUHR MINERS GO ON STRIKE

Six Thousand Quit Work In Protest Against German Government's Surrender Of Passive Resistance.

DUESELDORF, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The miners in the Getznkirchen, Recklinghausen and Wanne districts, in the heart of the Ruhr mine fields, declared a general strike to-day as the first action in protest against the Berlin Government's decision to give up passive resistance, and also against the exploitation of the district by the French. It is estimated that 6,000 miners had quit work up to noon, with thousands of others expected to follow.

The report on the miners' action received at French headquarters here caused some alarm, as it was feared the strike might be followed by general rioting, necessitating severe repressive measures. The French report says the movement was prompted purely by Communist factions, which have mustered an unusually large following since the position of the miners became so unsettled.

Aside from ths movement of the miners, the population of occupied territory is apparently calm, taking the Berlin decision philosophically.

Lindsay is about to lose one of its most estimable citizens and business men in the person of Mr. J. E. Adams, of Adams Bros., Ltd., who has purchased the wholesale grocery business of Rishor's, Ltd., Peterborough. Mr. Adams takes possession October 1st.

Lindsay's loss in this respect will surely be Peterborough's gain. The firm of Adams Brothers, Ltd., will continue in Lindsay as at present, Mr. D. Adams returning to take an active part in the management.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

THE LITTLE GRASS HASSOCK

"Oh, pshaw!" panted Nancy, sitting down on a little grass hassock.

Clatter, clatter, clatter! Clippety, clip!! Clippety, clip!!

It was Nancy and Nick and Mister Gallop on their ponies after Piggy Badger.

Piggy had a bad habit, a very bad habit of eating his neighbours which was not only impolite, but unkind as well. He had a long, rooty snout that could dig up 'most anything! And an appetite that could enjoy eating 'most anything! And a stomach that could hold 'most anything!

So no wonder the plains folk and mountain folk up and told on him.

Mister Gallop had chcked his tongue on his teeth and said how awful it was and that he'd attend to Piggy at once. And as soon as the committee had gone, the three of them started off. And now you know all about it.

Pretty soon they came to the plain where Piggy lived. No one was positive just where it was, but it was known that he had his home under the ground.

"Just look for an extra large doorway, children," said Mister Gallop, "for Piggy's a fat fellow, and sly and most likely he has hidden his house under one of these grass patches or bits of sage-brush, or a rock, mebbe."

Well, they looked and they looked and they looked, all three of them; but although they found a whole town of prairie dog houses, and a washing tub, and Mrs. Meadow Lark's nest in a low bush, and Johnny Pack Rabbit's house under the willow tangle near the creek, and Mister Burrowing Owl's hole under the sand, nary a sign did they see of old Piggy Wiggy Badgar and his sharp nose.

They even got off their ponies and looked.

But it didn't do a bit of good. And they got as tired as anything.

"Oh, pshaw!" pouted Nancy, sitting down on a little hill of grass Just a little low hill about as big as a hassock.

Mister Gallop lit his pipe so he could think better, and put his foot on the grass hill beside Nancy. His foot with a big boot and a sharp spur on it!

Suddenly the hill gave a jump and yelled out, "Ouch!" And it started to run like seventy, spilling Nancy off on the sand.

And there was Piggy Badgar as large as life.

Mister Gallop grabber his lasso and caught him in two seconds.

And such a lecture as he got!

But he promised to be good, so they let him go.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

VEGETABLE HASH

To make a little meat go a long way, try mixing it with vegetables in a sort of aristocratic hash.

Many men object to "made" dishes and insist that "plain meat and potatoes is good enough." But while vegetables are in season and plentiful, they are cheap and absolutely necessary to health, and if half a pound of meat can be "fixed up" to serve four persons and at the same time furnish a more wholesome diet, why not be firm but kind with the men folk and serve the cheaper and ideal summer food?

Baked Hash.

One-half pound round steak, 1½ cups chopped carrots, 1 cup chopped raw potatoes, 3 onions, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon minced parsley.

Put meat, carrots, potatoes and onions through the food chopper. Mix thoroughly and add milk and seasoning. Put in a casserole, cover with coarse bread crumbs, dot with bits of butter and bake an hour.

Farmer's Chowder.

One-fourth pound salt pork, 2 medium sized potatoes, 1½ cups milk, 2 cups corn cut from the cob, 2 onions, 3 tomatoes, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Cut the pork into tiny pieces. Fry a delicate brown. Add onions chopped, the potatoes pared and cut into inch dice. Cover with boiling water and cook slowly for 30 minutes. Add corn, milk, tomatoes and pepper and cook 15 minutes longer. Dip soda crackers in cold milk and place in soup tureen. Pour chowder over them and serve at once.

Corn and Veal Ramikins.

Two cups sweet corn cut from the cob, 3-4 cup chopped left-over veal, 3 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons flour, 1½ cups milk, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1 green pepper, buttered crumbs.

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Dip pepper in boiling water, then in cold water and rub off outer skin. Remove seeds and white ribs and chop very fine. Add salt, pepper, corn, meat, onion and pepper to white sauce and mix well. Turn into buttered ramikins or a large baking dish and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven.

Snow Balls.

One-half cup rice, 4 cups boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 tomatoes, ¾ cup cold chopped meat, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 4 tablespoons shredded celery, 2 tablespoons shredded cabbage.

Add salt to boiling water and slowly add rice. Boil half an hour, drain and hold under cold water. Drain. Scald tomatoes and slip off skins. Remove seeds and centres and chop shell. Mix meat, tomatoes, onion, celery and cabbage. Season with salt and pepper. Put a large spoonful of rice on a six-inch square of cheesecloth, flatten and spread to within one-fourth inch from the edge of the rice with meat mixture. Gather up edges of the cheesecloth and tie to form balls. Drop in boiling salted water and boil 15 minutes. Remove from water. Cool enough to handle and remove cheesecloth. Brush over with melted butter and brown slightly in a hot oven. Serve with white sauce to which one-quarter cup chopped cheese has been added.

Couldn't Eat Breakfast

Mr. Rebbetry's stomach in terrible shape till Dreco came. Now he has a hearty appetite and enjoys all his meals.

When a man's stomach gets into such a condition that it rejects food, his whole system suffers for lack of proper nourishment. Dreco, the famous remedy made from the juices of herbs, roots, bark and leaves, is invaluable in such cases, because it speedily tones and regulates the stomach to normal functioning and benefits the liver, bowels and kidneys as well. Mr. A. Rebbetry, of 90 Humber Boulevard, Toronto, proves this from his personal experience with Dreco.

"My stomach was in very bad shape," declares Mr. Rebbetry. "I was troubled with gas formations after meals and severe pains that would bend me double. For eight years I was chronically constipated and my liver was sluggish, causing spots before my eyes and dizzy spells. I was intensely nervous too and very restless nights.

I had literally to force myself to eat at times and, owing to this distressing condition of my stomach, got little, if any, nourishment from my food. I also had severe pains in one of my knees, which were sometimes so acute that I could hardly get out of bed. I would have to brace myself and raise up slowly. I felt so tired out that it was almost impossible for me to do my work.

"Dreco, however, has made a remarkable difference in my condition. I now feel better than I have for years. My whole system has improved and my appetite is restored. To such an extent is this latter true, that I actually want to eat breakfast and look forward to it and breakfast is a meal I had been unable to touch for eight years.

"I feel full of energy and do not mind my work in the least now. Dreco is certainly a wonderful remedy and I recommend it highly."

Keep your stomach strong and healthy, you bowels regular, your liver active and your kidneys normal by taking Dreco, the reliable tonic and regulator. It contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, and by a good druggist everywhere.

ANOTHER DEATH SAID TO BE DUE TO STRANGE CURSE

Half Brother of Late Lord Carnovan Died Yesterday.

LONDON, Sept. 27. - (United Press).—Something dreadful is going to happen to our family declared Lieutenant Aubrey Herbert, M.P as he watched his half-brother, the late Lord Carnarvon, open the tomb of King Tut-ankh-amen in the valley of the Kings. Herbert died Wednesday following an operation, and superstitious Londoners declare that "The curse of the Pharaohs" has claimed another victim. A mysterious series of deaths and disease has taken toll of several persons who watched the opening of the young monarchs grave. Herbert's prediction was echoed by the Egytians w.' saw the foreigners entering the ancient tomb they predicted the calamity would befall the "Desecrators" of the regal place. When Lord Carnarvon himself died the curse seemed fulfiilled. People explained that the Egyptians fearing the tombs of their kings might some day be opened., had placed poisonous drugs and evil charms in the tombs. Lieut.Colonel Herbert besides holding a seat in parliament was a noted student of Oriental art and history. His death adds new fire to the controvversy about the belief that the hand of the dead king has reached agross the ages of vengeance.

A man often tell a girl he would die for her but that is because he never has tried it.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people wh. enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

USE BEST BUTTER.

MAKE ARITHMETIC LESS BORESOME

A New Scheme Will Be Introduced in London Schools.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Something entirely new in the way of public school educational facilities will be inaugurated in London's schools this week, and, according to Inspector V. K. Greer, who is the father of the new project, it will work untold wonders in the lower grades of the public school work. The new innovation consists of a system of carefully-planned practice tests in arithmetic, under which the pupil is thoroughly examined at regular intervals and is given marks for speed, neatness and accuracy. It is really in the nature of a thrilling pastime, and, in view of the fact that arithmetic is traditionally looked on as one of the most uninteresting subjects on the educational curriculum, and yet the most essential in every career, those behind the movement believe that great things can be accomplished.

Although London is the first city in Canada to try out the new project, this rather unique educational "pastime" is not entirely without precedent, for it has been tried out with remarkable success in the City of Detroit and other large centres of the United States.

It consists of a neatly-made pad of fine tissue paper, accompanied by cards containing on the one side a series of arithmetic problems suitable for the grade in which it is used. On the reverse side of the card the answers to each of the problems are given in rotation, so that by turning the card over underneath the tissue paper it is possible to correct each of the answers.

The number of correct answers are counted and marks are given also for rapidity, accuracy and neatness. In order to avoid cheating and the possible use of the key in solving the problems teachers watch each class white at work and a time limit of eight minutes is placed on each test.

If the pupil is unsuccessful the same card is placed in position for the next day's test and in this way the unsuccessful pupil is one lap behind those who have succeeded in having won the required number of marks.

Tried Out Successfully.

"The plan was tried out as an experiment at Simcoe Street School last year and we were so satisfied that we decided to introduce it in the other class rooms of grade two this school year," Mr. Greer stated. He pointed out that it is entirely unique in so far as Canada is concerned, although it has been tried out with success in United States cities.

The system is known as the "Courtis Test" in the United States but it has been revised to a certain extent by the inspectors and teachers of London's schools, so that it is in a way something new in educational systems.

A copy of the booklet, accompanied by test cards, instructions and score sheets, was forwarded to the trustees.

RATE OF OUTPUT EXTRAORDINARY

Although The Industrials Show Falling Off From Peaks of About Fifteen Per Cent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(United Press).—Other developments in the early dealings in the stock market were over-shadowed by the actions of Baltimore and Ohio. News regarding the establishment of $5 annual dividend rate had come too late to be fully reflected at the previous close and the stock shot ahead to 57 up 2 1-8 from Wednesday's final, and an advance over six points from Wednesday's low.

This display of strength stimulated the whole list and prices were generally higher in both the railroad and industrial groups.

Rails continued to reflect the encouragement derived from Baltimore and Ohio's dividend action in the first half hour. Union Pacific, which owns approximately 36,000 shares on Baltimore and Ohio common advanced to 129 1-8, up more than a point from the low the previous session.

But Industrials failed to follow up their early start. Automobile stocks were subject to renewed pressure in face of constructive developments.

Generally speaking there has been a falling off of about 15 per cent. in production from the peaks. But this rate of output is extra ordinary for this season of the year, percentage of decline in September is the smallest recorded in years which is the best proof that people are prosperous. Ford, Buick and Chevrolet are actually establishing new high records. Buick has speeded up its factory to over 1,000 cars daily, which the domestic production of Ford for the week ended September 25th., was 41,769 cars and trucks, a new high record.

Slump is Forecasted

Traders who predicted a slump in the automobile industry will be right in the long-run if they stick to their forecast.

But there is no getting around the fact that the automobile industry at the present is in a very strong position. Industrial stocks continued under the influence of public apathy in the late morning. In the absence of outside buying power, professionals regulated their pressure on selected issues.

Studebaker was depressed to 96 off 1 5-8 from the previous close, while Baldwin showed a loss of more than a point at 113. American Smelting furnished an exception, advanced fractionally in response to the jump in earnings in the first six months of 1923 which reflected the sharp recovery in copper and other metal shares net of $5,096,000 for the period represented a gain of 180 per cent over the initial half of 1922.

BELLEVILLE MAN IN A CAR WRECK

Herman Wolfe and Family Had Narrow Escape On Highway.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 27.—A serious accident took place on the highway Tuesday night at 9.30 o'clock, about two miles east of Trenton, in front of Bob Weddell's cottage. When the car of Mr. Herman Wolfe, of the Ritchie Co., Limited, containing himself, his wife and baby, and his wife's mother, Mrs. Finlan, was hurled into the ditch and completely turned over by a car driven by a stranger.

Mr. Wolfe was proceeding homeward and on account of the slight mist which prevailed was travelling at a very moderate rate of speed. When opposite Weddell's cottage a car came along going west. It had very bright lights and when alongside, swerved over and struck Mr. Wolfe's car on the rear fender. The impact caused the car to turn completely over and lay in the ditch on its side. The baby hurtled through the top along with Mrs. Finlan and both went clear of the wreckage. Mr. Wolfe went through the windshield backwards and Mrs. Wolfe was pinned under the chassis by the front door.

Mr. Wolfe proceeded with all possible speed to extricate his wife from her perilous position and the Provincial Police and the doctor were summoned.

Mrs. Wolfe was found to be seriously injured, her lower ribs being crushed, besides painful bruises about the body generally.

The rest of the party escaped through a miracle with slight scratches and bruises but the car was nearly a total wreck.

Mrs. Wolfe is confined to her room but at present there are no complications and it is expected she will soon be around again in normal health.

The driver of the car was not apprehended, he having promised to make full restitution.

Mr. Wolfe is well-known in Peterboro.

High School Work In New Curriculum Lang School No. 2

The trustees of Lang School Number Two, Otonabee, who recently enlarged their school space and curriculum so as to include two years of High school work with the regular work of the classes up to Entrance examinations, are anxious to make public the benefits to be derived by pupils who wish to take advantage of the opportunity afforded to take up High school work in their own community, instead of going to other places for such education.

In the lower grades, in Miss Moore's room, there are about forty-two pupils at present, and in the fourth and fifth classes, taught by Miss Barrie, there are thirty-three scholars.

During the first year of High school work, the following subjects are taught, the first six mentioned being open to examination for first year pupils; English and Composition, Algebra, Arithmettic, Art, Canadian History, Grammar, Latin and French.

BILL CARLISLE, NOTED BANDIT, FIGHTS FIRE IN PENITENTIARY

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Sept. 26.—Bill Carlisle has appeared in a new role. At the State Penitentiary in Rawlings the train bandit, who attracted national notoriety a few years ago by his daring exploits in holding up passenger trains and then making his escape, battled for five hours against a fire that razed the prison shirt factory and threatened the entire plant.

Sticking to the front line of firefighters and taking all manner of risks, Carlisle finally was overcome by smoke and forced to retire. He was taken to the prison hospital, where he recovered several hours later.

The factory was a total loss, as was its equipment.

THE NORMALITES HAD NIGHT OUT

Were Entertained at The Y.W.C.A. Last Evening.

The young ladies who make their home at the Young Women's Christian Association had a jolly time last night, when they "initiated" about two dozen of the arriving Normalite students. The teachers and business girls issued instructions prior to the event, which the young students, all good sports, carried out to the letter, with the result that the supper table presented an uproarious medley of guests.

The Normal girls appeared with their middy blouses turned back to iront, their hair done in two braids, tied with green ribbons, wearing one white and one black stocking, and eating their entire meal with the left hand only.

Pupils of the Collegate Institute and of the Business College wore dainty costumes of raincoats, wearing rubbers and carrying umbrellas, their heads adorned with paper bags. All wore shell-rimmed goggles.

After supper, the girls were taken by devious winding ways to the basement. "Spooks" waited for them along the passages, bestowing on them sundry gentle attentions, such as blackening their faces, etc.

In the Green Room, the students had to go through a variety of stunts, which brought shrieks of laughter from themselves and their companions. They danced and sang as ordered, and dived off the end of the springboard into a non-existent pool. The young ladies who failed to carry out the order to don spectacles were compelled to dance the Highland Fling.

The evening concluded with the service of ice-cream by Mrs. E. Morgan, the house superintendent.

Misses Ethel Nichol and Jerry Glover were moving spirits in the evening's programme.

FOOT BROKEN, HE GUIDES CAR A BLOCK TO PREVENT STREET JAM

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Although his left foot had been fractured by the weight of a large motor truck, Lawrence O'Connell, 59, a motorman, of 165 East Eighty-seventh street, ran his car one block to Broadway and Twenty-third street yesterday afternoon to prevent a tie-up of traffic. O'Connell got off his car at Broadway and Twenty-third street and one of the wheels passed over his foot.

Traffic was heavy on the thoroughfare and he climbed back to the platform and operated the car onto a siding. Then he was taken to Bellevue hospital in an ambulance. The chauffeur of the truck drove off after the accident. A general alarm was sent out for him by the police, who got the license number of the vehicle from witnesses of the accident.

BUSINESS AND RELIGION UNITE FOR PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(United Press.)— Business and religion will join hands in the United States to secure prohibition enforcement.

Plans for this co-operative movement will be laid at a meeting in Washington Oct. 14, 15 and 16, when 600 delegates representing business and the churches will get together.

Senator Borah, Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania and former Governor Milligan of Maine will be among the speakers, Borah is to address the conference Oct. 15 on "Shall the Constitution Be Nullified?"

Warren S. Stone, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is one member of a committee which will seek to disprove that American labor is in favor of modification of the dry laws to permit light wines and beer, as Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has stated.

Dr. C. E. Watson, secretary of the Council of Churches of Christ in America, who is helping make arrangements for the conference, said a force of the most expert statisticians in the country is gathering data to show the effects of alcoholic indulgence on men in industry and business, on the homes and morals of the people, and on their health.

"We know there is now more violation of the prohibition law than there should be," said Dr. Watson. "What our conference will do will be to face facts and deal in facts. There has been too much knocking and ridicule too much wild talk not based on exact data. Some say there are many drinking to-day simply because of prohibition. That is propaganda, pure and simple.

"The purpose of our conference is to align the moral, religious and business interests of the nation in cooperation for active enforcement."

PETERBORO LADY LIKES CALIFORNIA

No Coal Problem in San Diego Writes Miss M. H. Poole.

Miss M. H. Poole well remembered by many friends in Peterboro, has been living for some time at San Diego, California, and in writing to a friend in this city adds some comment on the pleasures of living in such a moderate climate, and incidentally remarks that the impending advance in the cost of household coal has no interest to the residents, personally. Friends in the city may be interested in reading that which she writes, as follows:

"So many have written and asked me how I was enduring the intense heat of a southern summer that I should like every one to know what a delight the summer are here.

In some part of California, Imperial Valley for instance, where cotton grows and dates mature, bananas ripen, etc. it is hot I grant you, sometimes 120 degrees in the shade. But here at beautiful San Diego, 82 degrees was the highest and that for only one day and always a delightfully cool breeze from the ocean

For days, yes, weeks before the 10th of September everyone was looking for and talking about the total eclipse. Scientists came for 8000 miles and erected their expensive equipment on Point Loma, hoping for new discoveries about the Corona, etc. but alas! they were only to be disappointed, for fog and clouds intervened. But for the lay people it was almost ideal for observation.

A party of six of us gathered on the lawn and with smoked glasses watched the beautiful awe-inspiring sight. Gradually the shadow appeared and rolled on and on until totality was reached, when the atmosphere assumed a greyish green tint and was dark as usualy is an hour after sunset. "And all the air a solemn stillness holds." Then in the distance a cock crows, flowers seem to droop and for three minutes and a few seconds the beautiful Corona is seen shining with rainbow tints. Then the shadow passes and gradually the ordinary light comes again, the eerriness passes and soon we are the same and yet not the same people as before; for we have seen one of natures miracles and realize as never before the littleness of man. "Lord! what is man that Thou are mindful of him?"

Of course San Diego was simply flooded with visitors. Autos were three and four abreast when leaving but accomodation was found for all it is a city of hundreds of hotels and apartment houses and growing rapidly and said by many to be the most beautiful of any of the coast cities. Population now one hundred thousand, not too crowded for comfort. One of its greatest attractions is Balboa Park, almost in the heart of the city and it has sixteen hundred acres. A splendid museum, zoo, out-of-door organ, the largest in the world and many beautiful buildings were left standing after the Exposition which add greatly to the beauty and interest of it.

Already this season we have had Shuman Heinch, Paderewski and Margaret Anglin and many leading artists are booked for later dates. The Amphion Club, a large musical organization sure is responsible for many a rich treat. Oh! if people the cold north only knew the luxury of life here where there is no fear of Jack Frost and a coal famine, I am sure that many of them would wend their way South where the Mocking Birds make music all the day, where fruits, flowers and vegetables are to be had for the growing all the year round, where sunshine reigns supreme for nine months out of twelve and where opportunities are constantly knocking at the door and only waiting to be let in. I may be enthusiastic, but there is so much to make one so, that it is small wonder; but after all I should like to see dear old Peterboro once more and when Spring comes again may return East for a time, for "East-or West home's best" was Andrew Carnegies favorite motto."

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

MILK AS HEALTH FOOD

During the past summer some friends of mine spent their vacation on a farm in northern Indiana.

The two children drank nearly a quart of milk daily, and a marked gain in their weight and general health was the result.

The farmer's wife said her children seldom drank milk, preferring tea and coffee. They were not well developed or markedly undernourished, but about a low medium.

Children up to 16 or 17 need a pint of milk daily, a quart if they can get it. Adults above 35 do not; other foods will supply their needs.

If to do, were as easy as to know what to do, the milk question would be easy of solution. To buy milk at 15 cents a quart, on present salaries, is the real problem.

As a building food, however, milk is the most valuable of our supply sources. In 100 parts it contains 19 per cent. of protein, 29 per cent. carbohydrates, 52 per cent. fat, and numerous other blood-building elements. It contains more protein value than bread, and more fat value than most meats. It is also rich in carbohydrates (starch and sugar), which the body requires, and it contains lime for bone building and valuable mineral elements.

You must guard against bacteria in milk. For various reasons, principally uncleanliness, milk is subject to more germs and bacteria than almost any other food. If you cannot get pasteurized milk, try home pasteurization. Place the milk in a bottle in a pan of water and heat to almost the boiling point, to be exact, 160 degrees Fahrenheit. Be sure to have the water in the pan at the same height as the milk in the bottle. This kills all disease-producing bacteria. Do not keep the milk thus treated more than from 24 to 36 hours, as pasteurized milk is not sterile.

Milk should not be taken between meals. It is highly nutritive and may induce overweight if so taken. Those who are underweight can, of course, supplement nutrition at meals by using milk as a beverage between meals.

Popular Young Woman Recipient of Many Presents on Eve of Her Marriage—News Budget

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 27. — At a recent serious fire the members of the brigade had hard work to save adjoining residences from the flames. Several of the members complain that in one such case, after they had succeeded in putting out an incipient blaze in a room, they were ordered to remove themselves and their apparatus from the premises as it was feared that they might damage the flower beds.

A detective of the Grand Trunk system has been in town for several days and, aided by Police Chief Duncalfe, has been investigating an accident on the road near here when a freight car was derailed recently. A Presentation.

About twenty girl friends and fellow-workers of Miss Laura O'Shea met at the home of Miss Geraldine Hawkinson to spend a social evening and to do honor to Miss O'Shea before her marriage, which took place recently in St. Mary's Church.

Miss O'Shea has been in the employ of the Bell Telephone Co. for seven years. The staff presented her with a dozen silver teaspoons, together with an address. Besides these she received many beautiful gifts in table linen, aluminum, fancy-work and cut glass. The dining-room in Miss Hawkinson's home was tastefully decorated with hearts and astors. The bride-to-be was presented with a beautiful bouquet of the latter. The address was read by Miss Kathleen Keenan, and Miss Cora Barnum presented the gifts. The evening was spent in cards and dancing, after which a dainty lunch was served. The address follows:

"Dear Laura,—

"We, your fellow-workers, deeply regret your departure from our midst. During your long period with the Bell Telephone Co. you have given faithful and trusted service. We shall miss your cheerful presence which has often helped to make our own work more pleasant.

"We cannot allow this opportunity to pass without giving you some token of our sincere appreciation of your friendship, so we would ask you to accept this gift as a remembrance of old associates, and we hope that in making new friends you will not forget your old pals!

"Signed on behalf of the Bell Telephone staff—F. McComb, G. Callaghan, Sylvia Bull."

Miss O'Shea replied very suitably, and the girls went home after a very pleasant evening.

TODAY I AM REAL WELL

So Writes Woman After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Jamestown, N.Y.—"I was nervous, easily excited and discouraged and had no ambition. Part of the time I was not able to sit up as I suffered with pains in my back and with weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, both the liquid and tablet forms, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for inflammation. Today I am real well and run a rooming house and do the work. I recommend your medicine to every woman who complains, and you may use my letter to help any one else. I am passing through the Change of Life now and I keep the Vegetable Compound in the house, ready to take when I feel the need of it."—Mrs. ALICE D. DAVIS, 203 W. Second St., Jamestown, N. Y.

Often some slight derangement may cause a general upset condition of the whole system, indicated by such symptoms as nervousness, backache, lack of ambition and general weakness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine for such troubles. In many cases it has removed the cause of the trouble.

VETERANS OPPOSE FOREIGN INFLUX

Urge Government to Confine Policy To Great Britain.

CALGARY, Alta., Sept. 27. — Opposing the influx of people from Southern Europe and from the Orient to Canada, delegates to the annual convention of the Army and Navy Veterans' Association of Canada yesterday adopted a resolution calling upon the federal government to concentrate its immigration policy on Great Britain.

Major M. J. Crehan, president, of Vancouver, viewed the present situation with alarm and declared that something would have to be done if this country was to be saved for the white race.

Other resolutions were adopted favoring amalgamation with other ex-service men's organizations; opposing the re-introduction of the patronage system in the civil service of Canada; requesting the government to draft regulations that will permit war serivce being counted as service in the civil service. The resolution pointed out that a large number of ex-service men in the civil service are still on the temporary list while there are many men on the permanent list without war service. Celebration of armistice day on any other day than November 11 was strongly opposed.

FIRPO WATCHES SQUAD OF M'GILL PRACTICE

Halted By Groundsman of Molson Stadium But Shaughnessy Saved Him From Ejection.

SIXTY CANDIDATES.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press)—Luis Angel Firpo visited the McGill stadium this afternoon to witness the McGill rugby workout and have a chat with Coach Shaughnessy. Not having been let into the secret "Ole Bill" the groundsman rushed up as the Wild Bull of the Pampas strolled over the field and informed him that he was on forbidden ground. Bill waved explanations aside being too old a hand to be fooled by a student's joke and it was only when Shaughnessy greeted the heavyweight contender that he understood the joke was on him. He apologized profusely to Firpo who, not understanding a word, probably took the wohle incident as another unintelligible manifestation of the Anglo-Saxon genius.

The affair was only an aside in the hard day's drill put in by the sixty odd candidates for positions with the Red and White first squad—the players having had both morning and afternoon training periods. The surprise of the day was the appearance at the stadium of Hayes, the Sarnia lad Hayes landed down here this fall from Sarnia but owing to his medical classification, it was hardly fit for strenous rugby. The next heard of him was that he had turned out with the Toronto Varsity squad, Now he is back in Montreal and will know definitely tomorrow whether he is eligible for rugby or not.

Continued practice at signals, tackling and rugby fundamentals was again the lot of the players today, who divided into four small squads were worked out under assistant coaches. Selby Cope, who played good rugby with the squad in 1919, but who has failed to get going in the past seasons, made his initial appearance this afternoon.

M.A.A.A. PREPARING FOR OTTAWA GAME

Practice With McGill Revealed Weak Spots.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—Weakness shown by the M.A.A. rugby squad in the workout against McGill on the stadium on Tuesday night received the attention of Coach Nicholson during the practice session at the Westmount Grounds tonight.

The squad was put through a strenuous workout tonight than they have gone through previously this autumn. The men were kept at work for nearly two hours, for almost an hour at scrimmage work and remaining time at kicking and passing the ball. Several of the plays which went wrong against McGill were again tried out and carried out with more precision and accuracy. A great deal of attention was paid to the end runs which is an encouragement for more open play.

Five back field men were worked out, frequent changes being made to give each an equal chance of becoming more familiar with the plays. Jack Gardner and Dink Carroll were worked more freqeuntly together than any of the other combinations and they will likely be the choice to start against the Senators. Bennett who has made good in the practices was sent in at intervals to relieve the other backs. He handles the ball well and is a good punter, having good distance and accuracy in his kicks. Waldron, the recent arrival from Toronto, was also given a work out with Dickson on the half back line.

DIXIE SERIES TIED UP.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 27. —The New Orleans Southern Association team took the second game of the Dixie championship series from the Fort Worth Texas League champions here this afternoon, 3 to 0. Robinson, pitching for New Orleans, allowed only three hits. Each team has won one game.

The series is for the Class A. baseball title of the South. All the scoring was done in the fifth inning, when three hits, a base on balls and a sacrifice gave the Southerners three runs.

The series will be resumed Saturday in New Orleans.

MARMORA GIRLS LOSE TO TWEED IN SOFTBALL, BOYS WIN LACROSSE

The Athletic Features of Marmora's Fair on Tuesday — Exhibits Were Numerous and Crowd Large.

SUMMER WEATHER.

MARMORA, Sept. 27.—Marmora Fair Day was held on Tuesday, September 25. The day was exceptionally fine and warm. As a result the usual display of fall clothes was not so pronounced as summer costumes were many and varied giving a fine dash of color to the moving crowds. There was a large crowd and the general exhibits were especially good.

In the Ladies' Department the fancy work display was large and all so carefully done that the judges had hard work deciding who would be the fortunate prize winners.

In the Art department the exhibits were not so numerous but were exceptionally fine in quality.

The display of home-made cooking was large and varied. The tempting looks and quality of the cooking caused many buyers to be on hand at the close of the Fair and in a short time the tables were empty.

Children's Work.

On the other side of the hall was the display of children's work. The boys had shown their skill in manual training by bringing bird houses and milk stools. The girls' needle work display was knitted doll sweaters and boquets. There was a display of writing, colored maps, relief maps, painting and essays. In the essays there were two subjects taken, "Thrift" and "Benefits derived from protecting Ontario's Forest from fire." It was noticed that in the essays some of the pupils did not take into consideration the word-limit.

There were also races for the school children for both boys and girls.

In the midway, booths, fruit tricks and other forms of attraction were numerous. Amongst others was a returned soldier whose one leg had been amputated. Discarding his crutches he did many acrobatic feats thus winning both the admiration and the sympathy of the crowd.

Softball Game.

A feature of the afternoon sports was the game of softball played between Marmora and Tweed High School Girls. Both teams were on their mettle and as a result the girls made few errors.

At times it was doubtful which side would win. The first few innings the teams kept almost even in their scores. Finally Marmora's score crept up ahead but the Tweed girls came out ahead in the end, the score in the seventh innings being 15-13 in favor of Tweed.

The lineups:

Marmora—Matella Heath, p; Florence Clare, c; Tessa Cronbwright, 1b; Lorraine Bell, 2b; Muriel Lite, 3b; Myrtle Gallagher, ss; Mary Wells, ss; Hilda Thomson, m; Mary Maloney, rf; Velma Robertson, lf.

The spares on the teams interchanged places with the other players so making the game more snappy.

Mr. Wm. Ryan, teacher in Tweed High School was the umpire. Jack Brady was the base umpire.

Lacrosse Game.

During the afternoon a lacrosse game was staged, between Havelock and Marmora Juniors. Although Marmora team lacked some of its regular players it won by a score of 3-2. In the first period the excellent team work of the local boys held the visitors scoreless while our boys got 2. The next period Havelock scored 1 while Marmora retained its score of 2. In the third period each got one and neither scored in the last.

The line ups:

A Field Day Sports to Be Held Shortly.

Peterborough's annual field day of sports will be run off Saturday afternoon at the Exhibition grounds. They were postponed for a week because of the poor condition of the track due to the recent rains and also because of so many of the local athletes were busy playing ball on that day. Already about twenty-five entries for the different events have been received. Contrary to other years, most of the entries this year are in the senior events, other years the majority being juniors. Further entries will not be received after Friday night. Entries should be given to Doug. Loomis at the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Loomis reports that the shields for the winners and runners-up in the different classes have been received. These are beautiful shields and, together with the cups as trophies, are well worth striving for on Saturday.

In the Manufacturers' Soft Ball League there are only 9 teams, and the league wants 10 teams. Any manufacturing concern that would like to enter a team in this league has the privilege to do so. Information can be had from Chief Gimblett.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

The Examiner Peterborough.

Mr. Editor,

Just a question in reference to Saturday's game, — Lakeviews and Niagara. Is the Lakeviews a one-man team, you would think so according to the report in the paper. Your pitcher sure is good. But I consider all the others in their respective positions just as good, especially your catcher who was one of the best and the second baseman Moore, I think you call him, he sure is a snappy player. I noticed how prominent his error was mentioned if he had not made that, Whitehouse could not have had the no hit game but Moore's bating and catching for second base was good and mostly to his own efforts he made three runs out of eight and he sure can run and although we were beaten I like to see fair play and your report is not fair to all the team of the Lakeviews.

THE FREE-FOR-ALL WAS BIG FEATURE

Interest Centred in This Number on Colborne's Speeding Contests Bill.

COLBORNE, Sept. 27. — The free-for-all race was the feature of the speed contests at the annual Fall Fair, Wednesday afternoon. Hundreds of visitors thronged the grand stand and overflowed onto the track until it was all the officials could do to keep the way open for the racers. The record of the track, which was in excellent condition, was shattered the best time made in the free-for-all being 2.16 1-4. Dayspring, the veteran campaigner, owned by A. Dafoe of Belleville, gets the mark. This pacer's toughtest proposition was Roy Mack, the grey pacer owned by H. Vanalstyne of Port Hope. This horse going into the race with a record of 2.19 1-4 took the first two beats winning the second by a head in one of the best finishes ever seen on a race track. Dayspring won the next two beats and the two leaders went the fifth beat alone to break the tie. The crowd waiting patiently to see the end

The grey trailed the other until they turned onto the homestretch for the finish and they came at record breaking speed but Dayspring went under the wire half a length to the good.

Liberty Patch, owned by Bert Tinney of Cobourg, won third money in this race, with Lady May from the same stable, fourth

After the first heat Mr. Tinney who sat in the grand stand holding a stop watch on the horses, protested that the judges were not announcing the correct time by several seconds. The official figure being 2.19 1-2. Whatever the time was, it seemed evident that every driver was doing his best to win.

George O. Tice, Belleville, was starter and insisted that the horses in the different events got away fairly bunched.

The weather was ideal and the attendance must have been gratifying to the directors, the gate receipts amounting to over $500.

CAUSING A STIR

As usual, when Grafton & Co., Ltd. do a thing, they do it well. Just now the store and big show windows are a blaze of catchy looking shields bearing the words, "Big Surplus Stock Sale." The arranging of the banners is lavish without being overdone, but they show in an unmistakeable manner that there is something big going on at the big double store.

A look over the immense stock of clothing and furnishings for men and boys discloses sharp price cuts from the original values, and the sale prices represent most substantial savings on necessary fall purchases. The knife did not fall on the prices of old stocks alone, but fell on those of the new Fall and Winter suits, coats and underwear just going into stock as well.

See a few price quotations in their large advertisement to-day, and have a good look at the goods in the store.

affairs and report to the Ministry His report has been received, but not published. Those who have seen it say it confirms many of the complaints and suggests remedies, some of which the Ministry is attempting to put into practice. But M. Maginot, Minister of War, says he is hampered by the fact that the Chamber of Deputies has not yet adopted the Organisation of the Army Bill, and that all the necessary reforms can not be adopted until Parliament has acted.

LEADERS NOW SAFE.

DUBLIN, Sept. 27.— (Associated Press.)—The Dublin horse show of the Royal Dublin Society, recently concluded, rivalled in success its pre-war record. It was the first show held under peace conditions for ten years.

The governor general visited it in state on two of the days, and was cordially received. More remarkable was the presence of President Cosgrave, General Mulcahy, Kevin O'Higgins, Desmond Fitzgerald and other ministers.

Four or five months ago their lives, if they were seen in public, were considered to be in immediate danger, and their movements were always kept secret.

ACTS THE PART OF BEGGAR BUT HE ACCEPTS NO ALMS

Police Investigating Strange Case of Karl Neudack Who Furnishes Interesting Topic for Canadian Students of Psychology.

BERLIN, Sept. 27 — The strange case of Karl Neudack, who walked the streets of Berlin as a beggar, yet never accepted alms, has come to the attention of the police. The case is furnishing an interesting topic for local students of psychology.

Regularly employed as a chemist in a manufacturing establishment, Neudack spent his evenings and holidays on the Kurfurstendamm, Berlin's most fashionable boulevard, dressed as a mendicant. Sometimes his head was tied up to give him the appearance of an invalid; occasionally he would appear with his arm in a sling, and at other times he wore blue glasses. His clothes were always shabby, he walked as though badly crippled, and, when spoken to, he would produce a card saying he was deaf and dumb.

While suspicious of his conduct, the police were never able to catch him soliciting alms, but finally arrested him as a suspicious character. To the police surgeons who examined him, his explanation was that he greatly enjoyed being pitied by wealthy and well-dressed Berliners, and took much satisfaction in declining money offered to him.

He was released under a pledge to assume no more disguises.

TERRIFIC STORM CLIMAX OF FILM.

"Town That Forgot God," Another Triumph for Millarde, Who Staged "Over the Hill."

The most realistic and vivid storm and flood scene ever presented upon the screen will be seen at the Royal Theatre to-night when the management will present for the first time here the new Harry Millarde picture, "The Town That Forgot God." The spectacular climax of "The Town That Forgot God" is a blending of both storm and flood with several houses in flames in the background. Several of the most eminent film critics declared without exception this storm and flood scene of "The Town That Forgot God" is the crowning achievement in the way of spectacular water and storm effects ever known on the screen.

Harry Millarde, who attained fame as the director of "Over the Hill," has won new laurels for his magnificent direction of this difficult scene, which was likewise very dangerous for the people employed in the picture and the directors and cameramen who aided in making it. Everyone concerned was happy when it was over without loss of life or injury to anyone, although many people had narrow escapes in the great flood scene. To produce this tremendous climax, which shows an entire village swept away by a torrent of water, Fox Film Corporation went to great expense and nearly six months of labor.

To procure this tremendous climax, fifty-two buildings were erected in a valley in a remote section of New Jersey; these buildings including houses, lighted and furnished, concrete streets, a church, several halls, and various stores, the whole constituting a small town.

SIR HALL CAINE'S "PRODICAL SON" AT ROYAL MONDAY.

Sir Hall Caine's powerful story, "A Prodigal Son," is now to be seen in Stoll's gigantic English film masterpiece. This film is the only picture, which has ever played at an admission price of $4.00. It was produced in England in seventeen reels, and was shown through that country as two separate shows at $2.00 admission for each show. The success and popularity of the film was tremendous, earning the name in the old country of the greatest film ever produced.

For exhibition in the United States and Canada, the picture has been cut down to ten reels, and in its new form is considered to be even better than it was formerly. American critics see the picture to be one of the few masterpieces of the film world, surpassing "Hearts of the World," "Over the Hill," and "Way Down East."

The story concerns two brothers. The youngest brother, Oscar Stephenson, a spectacular, reckless and daring figure, who knew no restraint and no law save that of indulgence. He breaks all the laws of God and man and still remains a commanding figure that wins the sympathy of all audiences. The older brother, a stoic and stalwart character, a drab figure in contrast to his brother, a man that is called upon to make sacrifices and concessions for the sake of the "Prodigal," who loses his happiness, sweetheart, sees ruin brought upon himself and his father by his scapegrace brother. Then there comes a day when his upright figure of a man, for so many years set in the path of duty, breaks through all restraint, and is swept with a lust to kill, and a passion to exterminate a stranger that comes out of the storm on the very day that disgrace and ruin are heaping up over his head for a final overwhelming climax.

The locale of the film is laid in Iceland, England and Monte Carlo, and passes from one scene of stirring action to another with force, power and lightning-like succession. It is full of surprise, climax and strong moments. The love scenes of the "Prodigal Son" add in power, depth and vastness, adding something new to the technique of filmdom.

On the initiation of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, an improvement has been effected in the line facilities for utilizing, when required, the surplus power from the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. Formerly this power was fed directly into one or two circuits of the Peterborough distributing system, which imposed considerable limitations as to the quantity of power which could be taken at various times. Now the Quaker Oats Co. has set aside one of its lines from the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. to its factory, and the Peterborough Utilities Commission has provided a line from the factory to the Peterborough substation, which enables the Ontario Commission to deliver power, to the 2,300 volt bus and meter it at the station. The Commission provided protective equipment at the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co.

Mae Murray, the most alluring of screen stars says, "I have found that Pond's Two Creams give the complexion a lovely freshness and smoothness."

When oil insists on coming through the powder

This is the method that women use who must keep their skin fresh

You powder with such infinite care and yet a few minutes after you know your nose is shining! Sometimes your whole face has a horrid pasty look.

What do the women do who must keep their faces fresh and charming? — actresses who can never let their faces look anything but exquisitely lovely?

They have had to find a method that would properly remove the excess oil and make-up, that would restore the natural freshness of their skin. This necessity led them to depend on the Pond's Method, two entirely different creams based on the two great essentials for keeping the skin fresh and clear. The kind of cleansing that restores the skin's natural transparency. The kind of protection that not only protects but freshens instantly and holds the powder for hours.

Do this tonight. With a piece of moistened cotton or with the finger tips apply Pond's Cold Cream freely. Its very fine oil softens the skin so that it can penetrate every pore, and takes out dirt and excess fat together. It is so light it wipes entirely off, leaving your skin fresh and dry—never heavy with cream. Do this twice.

Then, before you powder. Smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream very evenly—just enough for your skin to absorb. It has no oil. Now if you wish, rouge—powder. How charming your face is in the mirror—exquisitely fresh. It will stay that way all day.

Florence Nash of "Merton of the Movies" fame says:

"I like Pond's Cold Cream because it leaves my face feeling so refreshed — not heavy and oily. And Pond's Vanishing Cream really keeps my skin wonderfully smooth and fresh all day. It keeps the powder on beautifully."

Give your skin the same perfect care, and you will understand how the women who give their skin the hardest wear are able to have the loveliest complexions. Buy both creams in jars or tubes in any drug or department store. The Pond's Extract Company, 146 Brock Avenue, Toronto, Canada.

WRITES OF THE HORRORS WHICH FOLLOW QUAKE

20 Years a Missionary in Japan, James Cuthbertson Gives Brief Description of Calamity.

HAS A SON HERE

The following letter received by James Dutton, 239 Stewart street, from James Cuthbertson, a missionary in Japan, describes some of the horrors in the earthquake and fire calamity which recently befell the Japanese:

Dear Jim,— No doubt you have been shocked at the dreadful news of this awful calamity which has befallen Japan. It is difficult to tell the tale, but we thank God that the earthquake happened when it did.

It seems dreadful to thank God when so many have been killed by the shock or burned to death, but happening as it did on the 1st of September, most of the missionaries had not yet returned to their stations. A week later and the death roll would have been still worse. We are all safe and unharmed, but it is impossible to leave this place. All the other railway lines being out of commission, everyone going or coming to Tokyo must pass through Karuizawa. This is something like having to go to Toronto to get to Port Hope.

The trains are not only filled with people but the roofs are also covered. Surprisingly few missionary homes in Tokyo have suffered, and up to date only one foreigner has been reported killed in Tokyo ,although the death roll in Yokohama is fearful, some 2,300 alone being reported killed by the shock or burned to death.

We felt the shock here, although we are nearly 100 miles from Tokyo. We were just finishing a committee meeting for the Prophetic Conference, when the house we were in commenced to rock violently. We all ran outside, and it was a sight to see the house swaying backwards and forwards like a swing. Large trees were rising up and down and the earth was rocking so that I had slight sensations as of sea sickness. Clara was on the main street with a lady friend and the shock nearly threw her to the ground.

We had a constant succession of shocks every half hour or hour after that for several days, in fact, two or three each night up to and including last night. We must have had some hundreds since the big one.

Appeal from Embassy.

An appeal came up from the American Embassy last night for six strong men to go down for relief work, and I volunteered, and have been put in charge of the party. We leave for Tokyo to-night, part way by train, and getting off at day break to-morrow by auto.

There have been many distressing things happen owing to the populace losing their heads, and many Koreans were brutally put to death, as rumours arose that they were poisoning the wells, and setting fire to buildings. Well, I must not write more, as I have no time and wish to send a line to England. Clara cannot get away on the boat she planned as it is physically impossible for her to board the train at present. She has transferred to the Russia leaving (d.v.) on the 10th October. We are all right, so do not be anxious.

Being in Kobe we have lost nothing. The Braithwaite's Tokyo house is safe.

Love to Gordon. I will send photos later.

Your sincerely,
JOHN CUTHBERTSON

The Gordon mentioned above is Mr. Cuthbertson's son, now living in Peterborough and attending the Prince of Wales School.

HON. FIELDING KNOWS NOTHING OF REPORTS

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.— (Canadian Press.)— The attention of Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding, Acting Premier and Finance Minister, was drawn to reports regarding the Canadian National Railways and the Home Bank, when he arrived at his office this morning.

Mr. Fielding said he knew nothing of the matter save what he had seen in the newspapers. He was informed that there was a demand in certain quarters for an investigation into the deposit of a million dollars by a railway with the Home Bank on May 28 last, and its subsequent withdrawal on June second, but no comment.

The Minister has just returned from a visit to the Maritime provinces.

Greek Government Writing New Note

ATHENS, Sept. 28.—(United Press).—The Greek Government to-day was preparing its answer accepting the decisions of the Council of Ambassadors in Paris regarding the Greco-Italian dispute.

The Greek reply will complain that the decisions of the Council were reached before the termination of the inter-Allied investigation of the Janina outrage.

BULGARS FEAR FOREIGN FOES

Envoys Told Serbs Could Get Upper Hand of Sofia in a Short Time.

SOFIA, Sept. 28.—Developments indicate that Bulgaria not only is struggling to crush a Communist-Agrarian revolution of wide ramifications, but according to the government authorities, is menaced on her borders by foreign forces prepared to seize the opportunity to intervene on the pretext of putting a speedy end to Bulgaria's internal disorders. Premier Zankoff called on the ministers of the foreign governments here to-day and told them there were 50,000 foreign troops on the Bulgarian frontier.

One of the points of concentration is the town of Tsaribrod, the Bulagrian fortress which the Treaty of Neuilly gave to Jugo-Slavia. With such a concentration centering on Tsaribrod, foreign military authorities here point out that it would be possible for Sofia to fall into Serbian hands within 24 hours.

It is understood that the foreign ministers friendly to Bulgaria have transmitted to their governments the information given them by the Bulgarian war department through Premier Zankoff.

For Martial Law

To meet this double danger which the situation holds, King Boris signed a decree of martial law. This severe measure is regarded as necessary for the prompt suppression of the Communist-Agrarian plot, declared to be under the leadership of Vasil Kolaroff, of the secretariat of the Third International of Moscow; George Dimietroff, and Todor Lukanoff.

Documents seized from leaders of the uprising in Sofia show the command was entrusted to these three and two others reserve officers. The design was to seize Sofia and proceed to gain possession of the entire country by military means. The plan of the Communists was to cripple their opponents by seizing the telegraph and telephone central offices in Sofia, which they held up to Sunday night. A complete duplicate equipment, however, was established in the Hotel Macedonia. Troops were placed at the railway station and around the vacated communications office, and the night passed without incident at these points, though an attack was expected.

Sofia is closely guarded at night by infantry and cavalry, though free movement through thestreets is maintained until 10 p.m. Citizens frequently are challenged by the sentries.

The prices of fruit and other provisions have risen considerably.

FIGHTER IS FACING CHARGE OF MURDER

Accused of Slaying Two Women At Juneau, Alaska, Sunday Night.

JUNEAU, Alaska, Sept 28.—(Canadian Press).—Harry Johnson, prize fighter of Calgary, Alberta, has been committed for trial on charge of murdering Mrs. Hilda Weiss Murphy, of Seattle, and Miss Billy Boordway, of Moosejaw, Sunday night in a resort near this city.

The police stated at the preliminary hearing yesterday that they had found clothing belonging to the women in Johnson's room and that he had money in his possession which was marked and was thus identified as having been spent with them by others a few hours before they were murdered.

STOCK MARKET WAS DEPRESSED

Result of Failure of Exchange Firm Identified With Financial Management of Jones Bros.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. — (United Press).—Explanation of Thursday's bad break in Jones Brothers Tea was afforded in the announcement at the opening of the failure of a stock exchange firm which had been identified with the financial management of the company. This development had a depressing effect on the whole market. Jones Brothers Tea broke to 33, against a high of 44 in the previous session. Studebaker receded 1¼ to 96½; Baldwin 113-8 to 113 3-4; and United States Steel 3-8 to 87¼. Considerable selling "under the rule" took place in the early dealings, after the offerings had been absorbed. The general list displayed a better tone. Jones tea rallied 2¼ to 35¼, and fractional recoveries took place among the speculative leaders. Copper displayed an advancing tendency under the lead of Ray and China. The merger of the south-western copper companies is again on the carpet. Recent conferences were first in two or three months due to the absence from the city of certain financiers interested in the proposed combination.

A Few Quotations.

Opening prices included: Texas Co. 40 3-4, off 1-8; Studebaker 96¼, off 1¼; N.Y. 101 ex div., up 1 5-8; Baldwin 113 3-4, off 1-8; United States Steel 87¼, off 3-8; Pan-Petroleum B 52 ex div., off 5-8; Baltimore and Ohio 56 3-8; Continental Can. 52¼, off ¼; Sinclair 17 3-4, off 1-8; Can. 91¼, up ¼; Corn Products 125 3-4, up ½.

TRIAL FOR MURDER DRAWS TO A CLOSE

Jury in Walter S. Ward Case Retires to Consider Verdict.

WHITE PLAINS, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Shortly after 12:30 the jury that has been hearing the charge of murder against Walter S. Ward, retired to consider its verdict.

Among the salient points emphasized by Judge Wagner in delivering his charge, were that there was no sign of a struggle where Peter's body was found, that only one empty shell was discovered in testimony to the gun battle that Ward described, and that Ward had refused to seek warrants for arrest of "Ross" and "Rogers". Peter's alleged accomplices, until after he had consulted his attorneys.

Justice Wagner also directed the Jury's attention to inability of witness Police Chief Frank Cody to identify two pistols surrendered by Ward as having been used in the battle as two pistols he presented to Ward, some time before the tragedy.

LEAVING PETERBOROUGH GETS A PRESENTATION

Last evening about fifteen girls of the Bonner-Worth Mills reeling room gathered together at 5 o'clock to do honor to Miss Winnie Harris before her departure for New Zealand. Miss Harris has been employed by the Canadian Woollens for the past two years. The girls presented her with a beautiful gold brooch, along with an address. Miss Margaret Patterson presented the gift, while Mr. Wetton (foreman of the girls) read the address, as follows:

Dear Winnie,—We, your fellow-workers, deeply regret your departure from our midst. During your long period with us, you have given faithful and trusted service. We shall miss your cheerful presence, which has often helped to make our own work more pleasant. We cannot allow this opportunity to pass without giving you some token of our sincere appreciation of your friendship, so we would ask you to accept this gift as a remembrance of old associates, and we hope that in making new friends you will not forget your old pals.

FEARED RUHR PEOPLE WILL YET FIGHT ON

DUESSELDORF, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press.)—The idea is gaining ground among French functionaries that the opinion of the German population of occupied territory is beginning to swing vigorously against Government's capitulation. It is even feared in some quarters that German opinion is likely to crystalize into definite movement to ignore Chancellor Stresemann's orders and try to continue the fight without Berlin's help.

OFFER REWARD OF $1,000 FOR BANK ROBBERS

Toronto Police Considering Advisability of Such a Course—No Clue To Escaped Convicts.

STORY OF HOLD-UP

TORONTO, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The police are considering the advisability of offering a reward of one thousand dollars for the capture of bank bandits and escaped convicts who yesterday held up the staff of the branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia here, and got away with about $3,000.

So far as given out by the Detective Department to-day there has been no clue that has amounted to anything in connection with the chase for the robbers.

Government's Reward

The Dominion Government has already offered reward of $50 in each case, in connection with their escape from the penitentiary at Portsmouth Ontario.

It is recalled by some of the police officers that about two years ago, Gordon Simpson one of the bandits, in passing along St. Clair avenue, in charge of the police, noticed the bank building, which was held up yesterday and said, "there's a place we are going to pick on some day." He was shortly afterwards sentenced to Penitentiary on another charge.

Staged During Luncheon Hour.

The hold-up was staged during the lunch hour at the bank, when the vaults were locked, which accounts for the small amount secured by the robbers.

The three men were armed. So were members of the staff in the bank, but the latter were caught unawares by the robbers who had them covered with their guns before they had a chance to make a move towards the places where rested the revolvers, loaded and ready for use.

Manager Oke was clubbed over the head with a blunt instrument of some kind, which the police have reason to believe was the butt-end of a revolver.

Mr. Oke recovered consciousness before the trio left the bank, but was carefully guarded by one of the men.

The entire staff was paraded into the manager's office and ordered to "keep their mouths closed" or they would be shot down. Powerless to act and without a chance of getting outside assistance, as the telephone wires had been disconnected, the manager and his staff were obliged to watch the robbers hurriedly empty the cash drawers. Following the entry of the robbers to the bank one customer appeared on the scene to make a deposit, and he, likewise, was compelled to stand by and do as he was instructed.

The customer was Rolly Ball, a clerk in Tamblyn's drug store, located on the opposite corner to the Bank of Nova Scotia.

The members of the staff in the bank were: Miss Gertrude Armitage, 22 Glenholme Avenue; Miss Margaret Switzer, 238 Arlington Avenue, and Lloyd W. Postel, 106 Patterson Avenue, teller.

The escaped convicts having evaded the scouting parties after several days in the bush near Kingston, it is believed eventually made their way to the city and rented a house in a sparsely populated district, which they used as a headquarters in which to plan the robbery.

If the convicts had been here for some days they succeeded in keeping aloof from the detectives, several of whom frequently visited familiar haunts in certain sections of the city where it was thought they would eventually drift.

Shortly after yesterday's hold-up, these places were searched, but without avail.

The three robbers filed into the bank unnoticed. They made no attempt at splurging in a way that would excite the suspicions of the staff.

One of the three quickened his step as he advanced towards the teller's cage the remaining two keeping within close range of the door until the "leader" had covered the teller with his revolver.

Attack on the Manager.

With the flash of the leader's gun a second man took up his position in the centre of the floor, waving a revolver and shouting "Keep quiet or there will be murder here." Attracted by the noise, Manager Oke rushed out of his office only to find himself gazing into the muzzle of a revolver. Manager Oke was ordered to hold up his hands. "Are you the manager?" asked one of the robbers. "Yes," replied Oke. "Then

Keeping DeValera With Republicans

DUBLIN, Sept. 28—(Canadian Press).—Eamonn De Valera is no longer the only Republican deputy in Arbor Hill Barracks. Other prisoner deputies have just been transferred there. This has provoked the suggestion that the Government is facilitating an interchange of views between De Valera and his colleagues, with the object of eventual reconciliation. The official attitude is that these prison transfers are without political significance.

RESCUE PARTY DO GOOD WORK

Take Seven Persons Still Alive From Wreck Of Train Which Plunged Into River.

CASPER, Wyo., Sept. 28.—(Special).—According to latest estimates, thirty-five persons were killed when passenger train No. 30 of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad plunged through a bridge into the swollen Big Muddy River shortly before midnight.

The bodies of two trainmen had been recovered at daybreak. Rescue squads which toiled throughout the early hours of the morning were unable to make much progress due to the high water. Five passengers who escaped from the two submerged day coaches with minor injuries were being cared for on the east bank of the river by rescue workers, who were also engaged on the other bank. They had taken seven persons still alive from the river. The Burlington superintendent in charge of the rescue train telephoned the despatcher's office here that he believed between 35 and 40 had perished.

Besides two day coaches, a mail, baggage and express car went into the creek, and were completely covered by the stream, which is usually little more than a brooklet.

The Burlington crosses the Big Muddy River near Lockett, about 14 miles from Casper.

Rain had been falling throughout the day along the head waters of the river, but railroad officials did not think there would be any danger.

Forty Miles An Hour.

The train was travelling at about 40 miles an hour when it hit the bridge, weakened by the rush of water. The engine crossed safely, but the bridge gave way under the first baggage car, and the four following cars piled up in the creek, which was about twenty feet deep. All the cars were covered with water.

Charles McLocken, of Denver, who escaped from one of the day coaches, said he didn't believe more than fifteen in the two day coaches were saved.

Say 57 Perished.

Information received in Chicago and north-western offices here shortly before noon was that fifty seven persons perished in the Burlington wreck near Casper, Wyoming.

COMMUNISTS ARE GIVING UP FIGHT

SOFIA, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press).—City of Ferdinandovo was occupied to-day by government forces and communists thus lost their last center of resistance. Occupation was made possible by capture of Berkowitza Wednesday night.

NEARING EXTINCTION.

BUENOS AIRES (United Press). — Ruthless slaughter of chinchilla by trappers seeking to take advantage of the high prices for the skins of the little animals has reduced these fur-bearers to the verge of extinction according to Dr. Carlos Outes, governor of the territory of Los Andes.

Dr. Outes, in a report to the ministry of the interior, says it is virtually impossible to prevent the destruction of chinchilla under existing laws, since the fine for trapping is 50 pesos a skin, while the skin itself is worth 100 pesos.

In view of the fact that the common fox, whose pelt here is worth only a few dollars, is the worst enemy of thechinchilla, Dr. Outes would like to see all restrictions on killing of foxes abolished.

He also asks for authority to start a chinchilla farm in the Andes in his province, which, he says, would be ideal, inasmuch as good chinchilla skins cannot be found under an elevation of 2,500 feet above sea level.

KIWANIS CLUB PLANNING FOR EXTRAVAGANZA

Club Members Out To Make the Affair a Big Success—To-day's Luncheon.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

The Kiwanis revue or extravaganza which ever you prefer, is now one of the serious topics before the Peterborough Kiwanis Club. At the noon luncheon to-day the club members were urged to get out and put the affair over so that when the books are balanced the club will have something left with which to carry on thier work of making Peterboro a better place to live in. President J. A. McKone was in the chair and whenever Kiwanis spirit threatened to overflow as it frequently did to-day, he filled on the sergeant at arms to collect a fine.

Walter Byers was the boost day and when the cheques were drawn Harry Boyle found himself in possession of a wooden candlestick and Harry Huffman was armed with a rolling pin, both being products of Kiwanian Byers wood-working industry. It fell to the lot of Alex Dick to review some of the details of the business in which Kiwanian Byers is engaged.

Verne Morphet was in charge of the singing and he produced a new rendition of the song "Yes, we have no banaras."

To-day's guests included Mr. R. Boyd of this city and Mr. E. J. Godden of Newfoundland. The latter represents the Quaker Oats Co.

Speaker of the day was Rev. M. C. Mackinnon of Knox Presbyterian Church. Rev. Mr. Mackinnon is a new comer to the city and in explanation of his presence at the meeting to-day Mr. Mackinnon said I am here because I have the Kiwanis spirit. The speaker said he did not consider it his duty to alone serve Knox church but to serve every man woman and child in the city. He did not believe in emphasizing creed or doctrine over life, because said Mr. Mackinnon, life is the big thing. In making a plea for the friendship of all classes Mr. Mackinnon said that in his last pastorate he numbered among his best friends representatives of the Catholic faith. He desired to be of service to the community and extend a helping hand to anyone who needed it.

BALDWIN DECLARES PEACE IS REQUIRED

LONDON, Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Hopes that the recent Paris conversations between Premier Baldwin and Premier Poincare would lead to a restoration of the Anglo-French unity were confirmed on Thursday when Baldwin spoke at Northampton, discussing foreign relations.

"Peace is needed to solve the European situation," the Premier declared. "The atmosphere of restraint and distrust in the Anglo-French relations, which was prevalent when my Government was installed, has changed to mutual confidence."

RUSSO-BRITISH BARTER.

GRIMSBY, England, Sept. 28. — (Associated Press)— Barter trading with Russia has been carried on for some time in small transactions but the first steamer to carry a full load of goods for barter is shortly leaving here for the Kara Sea. This is the steamer "Trotsky," owned by the Russian Norwegian Navigation Company, which will carry tea, coffee, wines, textiles and agricultural implements to be exchanged for furs, skins, swansdown and horsehair. These will be brought by caravan a distance of 2,000 miles to a point on the Kara Sea, which the "Trotsky" will touch at.

American Vessel Men Still Issue

TORONTO, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).—"There is only one question at issue," said a high Canadian official concerned in the lake rates conference all day yesterday, "and that is the question of getting American vessel owners to come in under Canadian tariffs."

"Is that point nearing settlement?" he was asked.

"It is too early to say anything about it," replied the official. The conference was continued last night, and the same official was asked afterwards if the matter was any nearer settlement. "It would yet be too early to say," he replied.

"Does it look as though the Americans were likely to finally accept?"

"Too early to make an official statement," he reiterated, "but we have hopes."

OLDEST PAPER IN PROVINCE

Kingston Standard Celebrates Its One Hundred And Thirteenth Birthday—Young in Strength

TORONTO, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press.) — Under the caption, "The Standard's Vigorous Old Age," the Toronto Star says editorially to-day:

"The Kingston Standard, which has just celebrated its one hundred and thirteenth birthday, is the oldest newspaper in Ontario. It is old in years ,but young in strength and aggressiveness. Its claim to seniority among all papers of the province is sometimes overlooked because it has twice changed its name. Its contemporaries will join in congratulating it upon the vigor with which it faces its one hundred and fourteenth year.

There are those, however, who will dispute the Standard's contention that it is 113 years since Stephen Miles gave to Upper Canada its first newspaper, which has been successfully carried on to this day. The honor of being the first newspaper in Canaad is usually accorded to the Upper Canaad Gazette, published at Newark on April 18, 1793, and then at Kingston in 1801, nine years before the Chronicle (later the Standard) was founded. Miles and Kendall ,of Montreal, inaugurated the Kingston Gazette, which flourished until the war of 1812 and re-appeared after the war as the Gazette and Religious Advoctae, thus antedating the Christian Guardian of Toronto, established in 1829, and to-day the oldest surviving journal of this city.

The Brockville Recorder was established in 1820 by Col. D. Wylie, and the Kingston Whig in 1834 by Dr. F. J. Baker. The Whig is often credited with publishing the first daily in Upper Canaad in 1849, but this honor probably goes to the Royal Standard of Toronto, 1836, which, however, did not long survive, while the Whig has flourished, and, like the Standard, shows increasing vigor with its years."

TWO MEN LOST NEAR WINDSOR

Gravel Barge Capsized In The St. Clair River.

SARNIA, Sept. 28.— (Canadian Press).—Albert Maggs, of Sarnia, and James Wynne, address unknown were drowned in St. Clair River, about five miles south of this port, last night when gravel barge, Province, heeled over suddenly and sank. Barge was in tow of tug Weaver, and was enroute to Detroit and Windsor, when, without warning it suddenly listed. Some of the members of the crew of the barge including Maggs and Wynne leaped into water and swam towards tug. Maggs and Wynne were weak swimmers, and unable to reach tug, and sank before assistance could be given.

PEACHES POOR IN COMPARISON OTHER YEARS

Complimentary Red Mosquito Netting Is Very Deceiving—Other Fruits Here.

PRICE CHANGES

This is emphatically "peach week" The fruit stores are overflowing with peaches, brought on to a full maturity all at once by the tidal rain of the past week in the fruit districts. They are firm, good peaches, not nearly as muddy as the complimentary red mosquito netting would lead one to suppose, but good fruit for putting up. Rivalling the Crawford this year is the Elberta, a peach very similar to its popular sister, a freestone but slightly smaller. None of the stores are showing this year the luscious brand of delectable peach that has graced other seasons. Prices are varying. Big, overflowing 11 quart baskets may be bought anywhere from 50 cents for the small Crawford fruit to $1.15 for the number one brand. The Elbertas come at a slightly lower price.

Strawberries, the 'Everbear' barnd in quart boxes from North Monaghan gardens are selling in one of the stores at 35 cents.

Peaches are down from last week's quotations, but plums are up a little, and getting scarcer. The blue damson is still available and plenty of greengages. Pears are stationary in price, and not very plentiful. Italian prunes are selling by the quart at 20 cents. Crabapples are scarce yet, but apples appear to be good, considering the season's backward weather and the prolonged dry spell. The big wine apples for the table, brought over the mountains from British Columbia, are three for ten. Some early Snows are in, at 60 cents a peck, and there is a good looking apple for cooking, the Princess Louise, in barrels at $5, or 50 cents a peck. St. Lawrence apples are 70 cents a peck. Grapes are good good, with a big supply of the black and red roger expected within the week. Their price has lowered ten cents on the basket since last week. Blue are quoted at 50 cents, green at 55 and red at 60 cents.

Potatoes have dropped a cent or two on the peck, and sweet potatoes are in again, at 2 lbs. for a quarter. Cucumbers are scarce, and cauliflower is very plentiful. Tomatoes, as one man expressed it, "are on their last legs."

Butter has also decreased slightly in price from last week's price, but eggs are stationary. Lard is firm, the wholesale quotations standing at 18 1-2 cents a pound, and retailing for 20 and 24 cents. Shortening, oddly enough, is higher in price than lard, its supply suffering from the light cotton crop, and consequent light production of cottonseed oil.

Honey, despite gloomy spring predictions of a light crop, has proved to be a bountiful one. This week's quotations show a lessening in price and a supply of good, fresh honey

TWO-MINUTE TALKS

San Jose del Cabo, the village of Lower California, Mexico, reported to have been destroyed by a tidal wave, though quite small, had the distinction of being the largest agricultural town of the 4,000 square miles of the peninsula, says the National Geographical Society.

"Agriculture is a novelty in Lower California. Lower California is a sort of American Arabia—a sea of sand and rock under a broiling sun. Along its entire 22,000 miles of coastline—a length greater than that from Key West to Boston—there is only one stream entering the sea that flows on the surface from source to mouth the year round. The other streams are mere torrents living for brief periods after the infrequent rains or short spring-fed brooks that die quickly in the sands.

Because the desert lowlands of Lower Califoornia are isolated and subjected to long continued droughts sandwiched between brief heavy rains, there has been developed in them perhaps the richest and most extraordinary desert plant-life in the world. Botanists declare that they have found nowhere such a grotesque riot of extraordinary plant forms as in this Mexican peninsula.

LUDENDORFF DENIES ACTIVITY IN BAVARIAN SOCIALIST DISTURBANCES

BAVARIAN CAPITAL IS TRANQUIL BUT ARMED FOR ANY EMERGENCIES

Berlin and Munich Working Together to Maintain Order--Revolution Would Fulfill Hopes of France.

HITLER FREE AGENT.

Von Kahr Reactionary.

BERNE, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press)—The appointment of Dr. von Kahr as virtual dictator in Bavaria is regarded as of great significance by persons in Berne in close touch with the Bavarian situation; they assert that von Kahr is hostile to both the German Republic and the existing Berlin Government. Further, he is an intimate friend of Prince Rupprecht, the former Crown Prince of Bavaria, and the recent events are believed to be the first steps in an attempt to bring about a monarchist separatist revolution in Bavaria.

MUNICH, Bavaria, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Although quiet is reported to prevail throughout Bavaria, Dr. von Kahr, the Military Dictator, has brought additional troops into Munich so as to be in readiness for any emergency.

The dictator has absolutely prohibited all assemblage of adherents of Adolph Hitler, the National Socialist leader, and has declared that he and General von Lossow purpose to maintain order in Bavaria and carry out to the full the instructions of the Bavarian Government.

Premier von Knilling today notified the Berlin Government that Dr. von Kahr had been appointed to his present post owing to his influence with the Nationalist organizations, and because the Bavarian Government was convinced of his absolute loyalty. The central government thereupon appointed General von Lossow as military commander in Bavaria, and gave to him instructions to cooperate with Dr. von Kahr. Von Lossow has been in command of the Bavarian Reichswehr.

The evening passed quietly in Munich. No meetings of the adherents of Hitler were held in the capital.

Will Maintain Order.

An unofficial communique was issued today stating that at a meeting held this morning, Dr. von Kahr and General von Lossow, commander of the Bavarian Reichswehr, declared they would obey the orders of the Bavarian Government without question in the maintenance of order in Bavaria.

The leaders of the Nationalists organizations who were present also promised to obey the Government's orders, with the exception of Adolph Hitler, who reserved the right to act as he saw fit.

Ludendorff's Position.

The Government considers the forces at its disposal adequate to suppress any outbreak, but believes that Hitler and other radicals will not allow matters to go to extremes. It is well known, however, that General Ludendorff, formerly Von Hindenburg's Chief of Staff, is behind the Hitler movement, and this fact is commented on by the organ of the Bavarian People's Party, which says:

"If Ludendorff provokes a revolution in Bavaria he will be fulfilling French hopes, because such a revolution means separation and the entry of the enemy into our country."

Replying to this attack in another paper, General Ludendorff declares he has not the slightest intention to provoke a revolution.

Accidental Death In Dental Chair

Thirty-One Teeth Pulled Under Anaesthetic.

LINDSAY, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Chester Dagg, aged 38 years, millman at Cobconk, complained of a violent tooth ache and on being examined by Dr. Kemp, dentist, was advised that three or four teeth were badly decayed and the rest surrounded by pyrrhoea. It was decided to extract them all and Dr. Milliard was secured to administer the anaesthetic. Thirty-one were extracted but Dagg failed to respond to two hours of persistent resuscitation methods.

In order to quieten the rumors that were afloat in the village an inquest was held last night when a verdict of accidental death was brought in.

Both doctors gave evidence as to the condition of deceased, stating that he was quite normal. Dr. Milliard did not think that it was more dangerous to administer an anaesthetic after the patient had eaten a hearty meal. Dagg was unmarried and boarded at the home of Mr. Wakelin.

BRYANT REFUSED PRODUCE BOOKS

Broker Was Suspended From the Chicago Board of Trade.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—How he was largely responsible for the suspension of the firm of Bryant, Izard & Co., from the Chicago Board of Trade was related here to-day by George Burmeister, special investigator, who appeared as a witness during the trial of Norris P. Bryant, Montreal stock broker, charged with misappropriating fifty shares of Canadian Cottons common stock, the property of J. A. Turner, of Beebe, Que.

Mr. Burmeister said he had been entrusted by the Chicago Board of Trade of which body Bryant, Izard & Co. were members, to investigate the conditions of the firm. He had come here in February 1922 and had asked Norris P. Bryant permission to examine the books after first informing him that he (Burmeister) was an investigator for the Chicago Board of Trade. He had shown an authorization to that effect and had been refused access to the books.

In the morning hearing C. A. Dunn, secretary-treasurer of the Silver Leaf Mining Co. and former employee of Bryant, Izard & Co., stated in evidence that he did not know that the 50 shares of Canadian Cottons were the property of Mr. Turner. He had used these shares and others to raise money on when there was a run on the firm. He would not have done so had he known they were not the property of the firm. He had not been told by Norris P. Bryant to take these cotton shares.

The case was adjourned to next Tuesday.

CANADA'S DOOR TO OPEN TO SELECT IMMIGRANTS

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—That the Dominion Department of Immigration and Colonization realized fully the need of immigration to Canada; but that it is determined quality rather than quantity shall be the controlling factor, was the message brought to Montreal returned soldiers to-day by Fred James, assistant publicity director of the Department at Ottawa. Mr. James addressed a gathering of Montreal war veterans. "The open door policy will prevail for those classes likely to succeed and for whom there is a demand," said Mr. James. He concluded with a plea that the immigrants be welcomed and that intolerance, indifference or ostracism be avoided.

SCANDINAVIAN BOATS TRANSPORTING GRAIN

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Sept. 27 — Fifteen vessels cleared to-day carrying the biggest tonnage of grain of the season. There went out of port 2,164,000 bushels of wheat, 53,000 of oats and 130,000 of barley. Among these were two of the little Scandinavian ocean boats which are plying on the upper lakes for the season. Grain men here deny that there is any lack of tonnage for charter, but say that vessel agents are anxious to secure cargoes and that occasional cuts are made in rates in order to secure them.

EBERT'S PROCLAMATION CHANGES RUHR ASPECT

Allies Must Wait Until German Situation Clears — Cuno's Reparation Offers Superseded — Allies Willing.

TO REOPEN WHOLE QUESTION.

RUHR MINERS SHOW DISAPPROVAL.

DUESSELDORF, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).—A demonstration strike for a period of 24 hours was declared yesterday among the miners in the Gelsenkirchen, Recklinghausen and Wanne districts, the Ruhr mining centre. It was designed to show the workers' disapproval of the abandonment of passive resistance.

First reports were that the strike was of a general nature for an unlimited duration, but the latest advices show it was intended as a protest gesture, and that work will be resumed in the mines today.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).—All orders and regulations issued by the Allied authorities in the Ruhr will be maintained, it was said in official circles last night, until the situation in Germany clears, and it becomes known to just what extent the passive resistance has ceased in consequence of President Ebert's proclamation.

Yesterday's dispatches from Berlin gave no basis for any conclusion as to what turn events may take, and the Allies can only continue to wait and watch.

Former Chancellor Cuno's reparation offers are regarded by the Allies as having been superseded by the later developments, it is learned, and the Germans will be expected to make entirely new proposals.

If they decide to do so, then the Allies are ready to turn the reparation clock back to January 11 and consider the whole situation anew, provided they are assured earnest co-operation from the Government of Germany will be given.

RUMORS OF BAVARIAN REVOLT ARE LIGHTLY REGARDED IN BERLIN

German Officials Puzzled But Lay Kahr Appointment to Bavarian Idiosyncracy.

WORK IN HARMONY.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.— A state of emergency has been proclaimed by both the Stresemann Government and the Bavarian Government, presided over by President von Knilling, and for the moment the situation in Germany is a complicated and uncertain one.

No indication is manifested around official quarters to-night, however, to take an unduly tragic view of the turn of affairs created by the latest exchange of amenities between Berlin and Munich, and by the position as dictator in Bavaria of Dr. von Kahr, who during his days as premier of that state, was the especial bane of the Berlin Chancellor.

Baffled by Bavaria.

Although Herr Stresemann and his associates were visibly nettled at the precipitate manner in which the Bavarian action was carried out, the Berlin Government heads to-night professed the belief that they once more have become the victims of Bavarian "idiosynocracies," and seemingly realized their own inability correctly to appraise Munich psychology, despite their past experience with Bavarian diplomacy.

The talk of revolt and secession by Bavaria is scouted in official circles in Berlin where the impression is given that the two Governments are in complete accord with respect to common aims and that their proclamations in no way collide. At the Chancellory it was stated that Herr Stresemann was convinced that Premier von Knilling was sincerely desirous of co-operating with the Central Government in the present perturbed internal situation, but that the Bavarian Premier naturally was forced to take full cognizance of the conflicting currents which complicate the Bavarian situation and which in no event could be controlled by the Berlin Government.

Berlin's Precedence.

The Cetnral Government's proclamation takes precedence over the Bavarian manifesto and also establishes that General von Lossow, of the Reichswehr, who has been appointed Military Commander in Bavaria, has superior authority to Von Kahr, in that he represents Dr. Gassler, who has been virtually created military dictator for all Germany by the terms of the Government's proclamation.

Governments Co-operate.

The two governments, it was added, are closely co-operating, and the political leaders here are confident that Chancellor Stresemann's adroitness as a negotiator will avoid any ruffling of Bavarian sensibilities.

There are about twelve thousand Government troops permanently garrisoned in Bavaria, and they are at the immediate disposal of Von Lossow and Von Kahr. They are augmented by the Bavarian police and it is believed these can be relied upon in an acute emergency.

Gain Ascendancy.

There is, nevertheless, partially concealed satisfaction in political quarters in Berlin over what is termed the predicament in which Von Knilling and Von Kahr are now finding themselves, and which is veiwed here as retribution for the leniency which permitted Adolph Hitler and kindred super-patriots to gain a dangerous ascendancy over the more moderate Nationalists, led by Dr. Von Kahr.

The Chancellor has notified the Entente of the Government's decision to cease passive resistance in the Ruhr and the Rhineland, and a special number of the official gazette is published rescinding all passive resistance orders.

Brothers Drowned in Welland Canal

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Willie and Albert Meek, brothers, aged 5 and 3 years, and only sons of William and Maud Meek, St. Paul street, West, were drowned late this afternoon in the hydraulic raceway of the Welland Canal which runs behind their home and along which they had been playing. Albert fell into fast moving water and Willie in vain but heroic effort was also swept away when trying to grab the hand of his smaller brother as the current carried him by.

MEXICO NEEDS SCHOOLS.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 28.—(Associated Press)— The future of Mexico lies in the establishment of 7,000 primary schools throughout the republic according to Enrique Corona, of the Department of Public Instruction. He declared that, of the 14,000,000 inhabitants of Mexico, 8,000,000 are illiterates and that 4,000,000 of these illiterates cannot even speak English, but cling to ancient Indian dialects.

An Understanding With France Has Been Restored—Peace His Constant Aim.

Heritage of Distrust.

NORTHAMPTON, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Premier Baldwin's address here yesterday was in the nature of an educational speech to the students of Philip Stott College and it was delivered in Overstone Park. Toward the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Baldwin said that peace was what he intended to put before all other things so long as he remained at the head of the Government.

"It is in that spirit that I am endeavoring today to deal with the situation in Europe," he added. "This is not the place to talk about foreign politics. The Imperial Conference meets next week and it must be at one of their early meetings that the whole question of the present European situation and that of the world is set forth and debated."

Restore Confidence.

"I am only here to say a few words," he continued. "When this Government came into office there was an atmosphere of restraint and almost distrust, between France and England. I have no doubt that if Mr. Bonar Law had been spared us as premier a little longer, he, with his knowledge, instincts and transparent honesty would have dissipated that atmosphere once and for all. But he left before the task was accomplished, and it was my good fortune in the interview I had last week with the president of the Council in Paris to help, as I believe to restore that atmosphere of confidence which for some time had been lsot—no more and no less.

Important to Europe.

"But I think there is now, both in Paris and London, recognition of the importance of the Entente in this way—that without it a European settlement would be far more difficult. Indeed, the events of the last two or three weeks have pointed that out to those who have eyes to see.

"The best hope of settlement lies in the intimate relationship between France and England, and if anything occurs that might keep the two countries apart, then I fear is would make all these problems which we have to face incomparably more difficult than they are today."

Supplies the Needed Roughage

Natural bran should form part of everybody's diet. It supplies the cleansing "roughage" which nature demands and which is lacking in most foods. Serve Tillson's natural Bran in some form daily—in gems or muffins, or with other cereals. Tillson's is the most efficient "roughage" because it is all natural bran.

KILLING BY BALLOON.

If there ever was any scientific reason for the holding of such deadly contests as the Gordon Bennett balloon competition, it has long since vanished in the development of aerial navigation as represented by the dirigible flying machines.

There is nothing of value that can be discovered by the balloonist.

Then why permit such contests to continue each year, almost always attended by a string of fatal accidents?

This year's foolhardy race has cost five lives.

What has been gained in return for the death of five brave men?

And above all, why adhere to the crazy rule that when a date and hour for starting the race have been decided upon there can be no change no matter what the weather conditions may be at that particular time?

The balloon race is an anachronism that should be discarded. Its usefulness, if it ever had any, has long since disappeared, and there is no jot of sense in keeping up a competition that merely kills men without adding anything to the world's knowledge.

FAITH IN CANADA.

It is evident that Canada's new refunding loan is going to meet with complete success.

The manner in which the Government's announcement of the issue has been received leaves no doubt as to the welcome there is in store for the new bonds.

There is cause for much satisfaction in that condition inasmuch as the response will show that in spite "of whispers of death" the people of Canada have every faith in Canada and its future while at the same time the country will be given financial support that is needed.

As an investment the new issue leaves nothing to be desired.

The launching of this loan makes it possible for the people of Canada to obtain securties which are backed by the entire resources of this country. And in addition is the safety of the investment.

As the bonds yield an income return that makes them especially attractive.

Canadians learned during the was to appreciate the value of Dominion of Canada bonds and that appreciation will be reflected by the manner in which the latest loan will be snapped up.

It should be understood that the issue is open to everyone, not merely to holders of previous bonds.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

The Examiner commented the other day on the desirability of educating the young people of today in the art of expressing themselves in public with some degree of ease and fluency, pointing out how few citizens there were who could get on their feet and talk to an audience without embarrassment to themselves and generally to those who had to listen to them.

Oral compositions in the schools form one method of training that should be followed by good results, and the Farmers' Clubs of the district have been for several years conducting a debating league that is teaching its members to express their thoughts from the platform.

In this connection the decision of the Y.M.C.A. to continue the class in public speaking which was inaugurated last year is very welcome.

A large number of young men availed themselves of the opportunity during the winter months to learn something of the art of public speaking under the guidance of City Solicitor Jos. Wearing, and the results attained were such as to justify a continuance of the work this season.

There is a crying need for such instructions in this city, as everyone realizes who has occasion to attend many public functions.

Peterborough is singularly deficient in first-class speaking ability, and anything that will help to remedy such a condition should be favourably received.

A QUESTION OF EXEMPTIONS.

Ald. M. J. Maher at the meeting of the Manufacturers Committee of the City Council the other night furnished his fellow-Aldermen with some figures as fixed assessments granted industries here and elsewhere that were of decided interest not only to the Council, but to ratepayers generally.

Peterborough, with a population of 21,605 and a total assessment of $17,666,510.00, has granted exemptions totalling $4,030,515.

That is a very large total compared to the showing in other cities.

In Brantford, with 30,109 people and an assessment of $26,521,825.00, and Kitchener, with a population of 23,571 and a total assessment of $19,595,178.00, there are no exempted industries at all.

Stratford comes next lowest in this respect. With a population of 18,244 and an assessment of 13,649,252.00, the Classic City's exemption to manufacturing concerns only amounts to $49,200.00.

St. Thomas, population 17,779, assessment $15,825,945.00, exempts her industries to the extent of $143,500.00.

St. Catherines, whose population and assessment closely approximate those of Peterborough, 21,192 and $19,948,575.00, respectively, has a free list amounting to $230,900.

Belleville goes a little higher, with an exemption total of $273,000.00. Her population is 12,314 and assessment $9,046,754.00.

The highest on the list quoted by Ald. Maher is Guelph, which with a population of 18,420 and an assessment of $11,623,237.00, allows exemptions reaching a total of $590,700.00.

Yet this sum, much larger than most of the others quoted, is decidedly small when compared with Peterborough's exemptions of over four million dollars.

These figures should afford ratepayers considerable food for thought.

POWER.

A very pleasant statement is made, says the Municipal Review, in the blue-book on "Central Electric Stations," that

"Over 90 per cent. of the prime motive power of the central electric station industry of Canada is Hydro power."

And yet what a trifle of the available water-power has been developed is seen from a table, which states that of an ordinary minimum flow—"based upon rapids, falls and power sites of which the actual drop or head possible of concentration is definitely known or reasonably well established"—of 18,255, 316 h.p., only 2,973,759 has been utilized by turbine, or other installation, or only 7.1 per cent.

This means that instead of the present amount of less than three millions that the "present recorded available water-powers of the Dominion will permit of a turbine installation of 41,700,000 h.p."

It is pleasant, however, to know that our present water-power development of 338 h.p. per 1,000 population places us in the second rank in the whole world, Norway alone being in advance.

The present turbine installation is divided as follows: British Columbia, 328,977; Alberta, 33,067; Saskatchewan, nil; Manitoba, 134,025; Ontario, 1,299,230; Quebec, 1,073,883; New Brunswick, 42,039; Nova Scotia, 47,100; Prince Edward Island, 2,239; Yukon and North West Territories, 13,199.

The total capital invested in 1921 was $484,669,451; the revenue, $73,376,580; salaries and wages, $15,234,678 to 10,714 employees; subscribers, 973,212.

The figures given show the magnitude of the business as it is at present, and also the small part developed compared with what is possible.

THE CANADIAN LOAN.

The splendid manner in which Canadians are responding with their subscriptions to the Government loan of $172,000,000 is extremely gratifying from every standpoint. It reasserts the solidity of Canada's credit, it is a proof of the large fund of savings available for sound investment, and it attests the general feeling of confidence in business conditions. Faith in ultimate recovery from financial stringency indeed always existed in the most adverse times; a people that could so splendidly subscribe to the various Victory loans at a time when the end of the war and even its outcome was uncertain, was not the sort to lose heart in the midst of the deflation period following the conclusion of peace. Nevertheless the cautious feeling that attended the recent times of adversity is shown to have passed by the immediate and liberal response of financial instiutions and the public to the opportunity for subscribing to the present loan of the Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding.

The memory of the various Victory Loans of this country is a favorable influence towards heavy subscriptions to the present flotation. These were the best means for the promotion of savings devisable. Thousands of persons who had been spending their earnings as they went along resolved to buy their country's bonds as their only public means of assisting in the prosecution of the war. They were repaid. Many undoubtedly obtained their start in business and in ownership of homes from the capital they were able to accumulate through the purchase of these bonds. The sequel justified their efforts. At the risk of odious comparisons it must be said that at a time when the American Liberty loan bonds were selling far below par the Canadian issues were commanding a premium on the open market.

Canadians investing in the present loan are doing service to their country scarcely less valuable than they did five or seven years ago. Instead of repining at the colossal debt of the country, everyone should be as proud of it as the veteran is of his scars, for it is a monument to the Dominion's sacrifice for liberty. The present loan is giving the country opportunity for reaffirming its decision of more stirring days and of registering its resolve to see the country through its financial burdens. The splendid way in which the subscriptions are coming in cannot but increase the credit of Canada abroad. The confidence of the Canadian people in their own institutions and in their destiny must impress foreign observers with their financial strength and stability.

Mr. Fielding is to be congratulated in rejecting the counsels of the timid and not borrowing in New York, but entrusting the fate of the loan to this country. The value of a domestic debt over a foreign one is established. Payment of interest to people within this country, from the Government point of view, is like taking money from one pocket and putting it into the other. With a foreign loan it is otherwise. Currency and exports have to go abroad to discharge previously contracted liabilities. Ireland has been a country cursed with the need for making heavy payments outside of its borders both on account of debts and landlordism. It was principally this constant obligation that conduced to her misery, unrest and rebellion.

The new loan, coming at the present time, has also a valuable educative effect. It is impelling the public to save at the entry into a period of active prosperity. Such times are often periods of spending orgies. The opportunity afforded for safe investment in a Government loan will therefore have a salutary effect on spendthrits, tempting them to save.

The response to the loan until the present is therefore encouraging, in revealing the sound investing element in the country. The revelation ought therefore to have an influence on the Government. It should increase its faith in the recuperative powers of the Dominion so much as to induce a slight reduction in taxation. The country would respond to the action. The national revenues in the end would be none the losers.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Campbellford people welcoming a pair of newlyweds set the roof on fire. That's too realistic a brand of house-warming.

Canada's fight against Article 10 is tame compared to the antagonism shown across the line to the 18th amendment.

Too bad the bank robbers and escaped convicts in Canada couldn't be pursued as closely as Lord Renfrew has been since his arrival in the Dominion.

How would it work out to try that Oklahoma method upon the Canadian Senate?

No matter who won the war it looks as if France has won the peace.

The situation in Germany promises to furnish a political earthquake as serious as the recent one in Japan.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, September 28.—The statistics for the four days of the week at the Union Stock Yards show 10,339 cattle received and 8,283 sold, up till Wednesday night. With about 300 Westerns shipped, there was left about 1,750 for yesterday's business. It was self-evident yesterday morning that most of these would be carried over till Monday, and some commission men claimed that there would be enough left for Monday's business.

To make sales, some butchers were offered yesterday morning at 6 cents what would have been good for 6¼ cents a week ago. Contrary to the general market buyers say there has been an actual advance in common cows and bologna bulls, and that the advance in the latter is a much as 50 cents a cwt. Fair bologna bulls are up to 3 1-4 cents and common cows are bringing 31-2 cents.

The left-overs yesterday could largely have been left on the farms with advantage to the farmers. Most of them wanted more finish to make decent butchers, and the buying demand for feeders is not large enough to use them. A few Western steers around 1,000 pounds each are selling to go to the country at $5.00 to $5.10 a cwt. Western butcher heifers are going from 5 1-2 cents a pound up. Domestic stockers and feeders were selling yesterday morning slightly easier. Common stockers are bringing around 3 1-2c, and the better class, 800 pounds and up, about 5c a pound. There was very little buying of butcher cattle yesterday, and one fairly good medium weight sold at 5 3-4c a pound. Other medium to good butchers did not bring over 6 cents.

Calves close the week quite strong at the quotations below:

The slump in lambs has ended for the time being, and commission men feel that the packers will have to pay an advance next week.

C. Waugh bought a bunch of lambs yesterday morning at 11 1-2c a pound for ewes, and 10c for the bucks, and this was about the closing price for the week.

Hogs are holding steady at $8.75 a cwt. f.o.b., and there will be no change in either direction for the week-end shipments.

MILLBROOK LADIES HAD GOOD MEETING

District Convention to be Held in Bethany This Year.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 27.—The opening meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the Methodist church, for the fall and winter months, was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert Lunn at Carmel, the members and their friends going out by motor through the kindness of several car owners. The president, Mrs. S. T. Tucker, was in the chair, and the scripture lesson from the 91st Psalm was read by Mrs. Hilliard Lang. Rev. S. T. Tucker led in the opening prayer. The W.M.S. district convention will meet this year in Bethany on Tuesday, October 2nd, beginning at 9 a.m. and holding two sessions, morning and afternoon, and the president requested that there should be a large delegation from Millbrook at the gathering. Mrs. Marshall, one of the Board officers, will be a speaker at the convention who will bring a particularly interesting and helpful message. The president also announced the bequest of $100 left to the Auxiliary by the late Miss L. Pendry, and asked that, in accordance with the donor's wish as the Auxiliary work always lay very near her heart, the members should pray for a special blessing upon the object for which the money may be expended.

On motion it was decided that the Auxiliary will serve the tea for the Y.P.L. convention to be held in the Millbrook church on October 12, Mrs. Ross Edmunds and Mrs. J. McKnight being appointed to canvass those present for supplies for same.

The resignation of Mrs. B. R. Raper as superintendent of the mission band was read by the secretary, no definte action to appoint a successor being taken at the meeting as the matter will come before the executive for consideration at an early date.

Rev. Mr. Tucker read a communication from a joint committee of the Woman's Missionary Society and the General Board asking that a special offering in aid of the work in Japan, after the recent appalling disaster in that country, should be taken up on Sunday, October 7th, and on motion of Miss S. Hetherington and Mrs. P. Stinson, the Auxiliary voted to co-operate with the General Board in this matter.

Mrs. T. Tucker gave a brief talk on the work for the year, proposing to divide the Auxiliary into six groups with twelve in each group, and make these severally responsible for one meeting per month, providing the programme, entertainment, etc., and giving points for service. Ten points will be counted for a life member, two for a new member, one for each fee paid in, and for amount of money raised by the group, as each of the latter will be responsible for raising at least $40 during the month they are in charge, but the offering, fees, etc., will count on the total required. On motion the plan was adopted and will be given a fair trial between now and next April. The leaders of the groups are as follows: Miss A. Hampton, Miss S. Hetherington, Mrs. P. Stinson, Mrs. B. R. Raper, Mrs. Offa Williamson and Miss Pearl Burnham.

The special offering for the rest fund was taken up and amounted to $8.90; this will doubtless be increased to $10.00, the usual amount sent for this worthy objetc each year.

After the "Heralds" had reported for the "Watch Tower," Rev. Mr. Tucker gave a most instructive outline of the purpose and aim of the new study book, "Building the Nation," which will be taken up at each meeting for the remainder of the church year.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Mrs. Lunn and her daughter, Miss Martha, served a delicious tea, and a social hour was thoroughly enjoyed. A hearty vote of thanks to the hostesses for their hospitality and to those who had given the use of their cars for the occasion, was moved by Miss Hetherington, seconded by Mrs. H. Lang and carried unanimously.

Including nine visitors there were forty-one present at Wednesday's meeting, among the members being: Mrs. J. Hatherly, Mrs. W. Lowes, Rev. S. T. and Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. W. Mullen, Mrs C. W. Richards, Mrs. B. R. Raper, Miss E. and Miss Stella Hetherington, Mrs. E. S. and Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs C. Garside, Miss Mary Widdis, Mrs. J. J. Crown, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. R. H. and Mrs. Ross Edmunds, Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. G. Locke, Mrs. W. Pendry, Miss E. Krieger, Mrs. T. Luxon, Mrs. W. Turner, Mrs. P. Stinson, Mrs. W. Larmer, Mrs. O. Williamson, Mrs. H. A. Earle, Mrs. J. H. George, Mrs. H. Lang, Mrs. M. Todd, Mrs. Elmer, and others.

My Experience is that DR. CALDWELL'S LAXATIVE SYRUP PEPSIN Is just what you need

This Will Make Digestion Easy

WHAT the dyspeptic needs is not soda and charcoal and breath perfumes but a medicine that will help his bowels to move regularly, for dyspepsia and constipation are allied. If you will take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin systematically as the directions on the package call for you will soon digest your food properly and pass it out normally, and heartburn, belching, dizziness, nervousness and bloating will vanish. In time you can dispense with all medicines as Laxative Syrup Pepsin will have exercised the intestinal and stomach muscles so they act for themselves. Mr. E. N. Gagni, 338 St. Patrick St., Ottawa, Ont., Mrs. Uhriah Stewart of Crousetown, N. S., and hosts of others will verify this.

World Acclaims Success

Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is the prescription of a well-known physician of that name who practiced successfully for 47 years. It has been on the market 30 years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Thousands of families have it in their medicine chest ready when any member shows signs of dyspepsia, constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, biliousness, coated tongue, offensive breath, headaches and such ailments that indicate deranged stomach and bowels. Many serious diseases are prevented by this timely aid.

Formula Plainly Stated

Have no hesitancy giving Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin to anyone young or old. It is a mild, gentle laxative free from narcotics. It will not cramp or gripe. The formula is on the package, a compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and simple aromatics. A bottle can be had at any drug store and averages less than a cent a dose. Economical for families and fully guaranteed. You will find it a great improvement in taste and action over castor oil, or "candy cathartics" made from coal-tar that cause skin diseases, calomel that loosens the teeth, salts in water or powder that concentrate the blood and dry the skin.

NATURE PLAYS QUEER TRICKS IN THE JAPANESE EARTHQUAKE

Street Car Stands Five Days With Its Freight of Death —Praise For Native Nurses — Comedy As Well As Tragedy.

CALGARY, Sept. 26.—It is possible to glean some of the experiences of individuals in the Japanese earthquake from passengers on the Empress of Australia who are crossing Canada on the Trans-Canada train. One of these is Dr. W. Klages, a Swiss chemical engineer who had a factory in Tokio, and is now en route to Europe.

At the moment of the disaster Dr. Klages and his wife were standing in a Tokio street waiting for a street car when suddenly the quake came, it was a mere tremor at first. There was a cry of "earthquake, earthquake," Dr. and Mrs. Klages clung to a telephone post. It was shaken like a sapling in the wind. Roofs were crashing. The shakes continued.

"My children," cried Mrs. Klages They had been left at their home in the outskirts of Tokio. The father and mother made their way to a nearby building and tried to telephone but the wires were down. Street cars were stopped.

Terrible Journey on Foot

The Klages made a terrible journey on foot, taking two hours to their home. The shakes continued. At times electric wires would snap and they could see people fall dead Many were killed by falling roofs. At times they had to lie flat on the ground to escape a flying shower of debris.

On their arrival at home they found their children unhurt in the garden in charge of their nurse. They had all been on the second floor of the home when the shock came and although frightened and shaken, had not been injured. The house still stood but its foundation had been split through and one of its chimneys toppled. The Klages spent two days in their garden. Then the police sent them to the country.

In the meantime Dr. Klages had to get to Yokohama for he had a passage booked on the President Pearse He was unable to leave Tokio for five days. Then he secured a car and a special permit to travel, and driven by a soldier and guarded by a policeman, he drove to the shore. He could not find a boat. He went to the naval station, was put on board a destroyer and carried to Yokohama

Fire Took Biggest Toll

According to Dr. Klages the earth quake in its effects did not devastate Tokio as it had Yokohama. Only two hundred people were killed in the capital as the result of the actual shake, but thousands died from the fires which broke out in the afternoon. In one open space a number of people herded together, the number is placed as high as 30,000, were caught between a circle of flames and the sea, and were wiped out, suffociated. They lay in heaps of dead on the plain.

The concrete and steel buildings of Tokio did not, as expected, stand up against the earthquake. Only two buildings in Tokio's business centre. Dr. Klages declared, are intact. Numbers of the others still stand, from the outside apparently untouched, but they are twisted and riven, and will have to be rebuilt.

Like other survivors, he has many instances to relate of the earthquake freaks. The Marachi district of Tokio had numbers of brick houses thirty years old. Not a brick was dislodged. His own factory was untouched, though a water tank near by crashed to the ground and two men were killed. Near the railway station he saw a foreign lady lying dead among the debris of fallen buildings. Yet thirty feet away the place seemed unchanged.

Five days after the earthquake, when Dr. Klages was in Yokohama he noticed a street car standing still. In it sat six people. Everyone of them were dead. No one had been near them in this city of death in all that time.

Searching For His Wife

A friend of his was in his office in Yokohama when the shock came. He immediately went to the hotel where his wife was staying. The hotel had disappeared. For three days the man searched every ship, every corner of the waterfront, hunting among the foreigners every where for signs of his wife. He could find no trace of her. He went then and sought among the rubble of the hotel. He found among the cinders the burnt bones of a woman and on what had once been her hand her rings and a bracelet. When Dr. Klages met him he pulled out an envelope. It was all that remained of his wife.

A negro broker in Yokohama, who had amassed a fortune in Yokohama in 35 years, lost all. He went to his safe, opened it, and all he found was an English sovereign.

There was devotion of course. One hears repeatedly mention made of the amahs or nurses in this regard, of a Japanese amah wandering round Yokohama with a two-year-old foreign baby in her arms, clinging to the child until both were taken on board a French boat. Or of another case, where parents had left their baby with a native amah when the quake came and they could not get back They reached their home at last and found it flat, but on the ruins was stuck a notice written in English saying that the child was safe and was with the nurse at her own home. The girl had stayed until she could find someone who could write the message for her in English.

Comedy and Horror

Of course, there was comedy too. For example, there was a Japanese gentleman, striding round the Empress of Australia with nothing over his nakedness but a full dress coat. Then there was a little old French lady who had fled to safety from her home by sliding down a cliff some hundred and fifty yards, clinging to her dog. On board the Australia when the moments were tense because of the fear of fire the little French lady might be seen going round and curiously enquiring "Have you seen my little dog?"
